

THE DAILY BEE.

Tuesday Morning, September 1.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

An exciting runaway occurred on Tenth street near the crossing about 8 o'clock last evening. A horse attached to a buggy dashed up the street, scattering things in a lively manner. At Harney street the horse turned west, and was still running at last account.

The cricket match which was to have been played Saturday afternoon on the artillery grounds at the fort, did not come off owing to the failure of the Omaha team to appear. The High school boys were promptly on the grounds and when it became evident that the others were not coming, they played a scrub game with an eleven made up by the soldiers.

The following startling item was communicated to the Bee: "A young lady residing on North Seventeenth street, less than a dozen blocks from California street, had a very narrow escape from breaking her neck last night. She was at the top of a long steep flight of stairs when she made a misstep and suddenly she went down to the bottom, and strange to say she escaped without a scratch, but murmured to herself, 'I might have broken my neck.'"

THE PASTOR'S FAREWELL.

The Exercises of Leave-Taking at the First M. E. Church Upon Rev. Savidge's Retirement.

The farewell services attendant upon the retirement of Rev. C. W. Savidge from his three years pastorate of the First Methodist church, occurred Sunday morning and evening. A large congregation filled the church in the morning, and the pastor delivered his farewell sermon, an eloquent and touching address, which in the respect and love of his auditors, was received most impressively.

The evening was devoted to the children, and the church was filled to the doors beyond standing room. The exercises, in the first part, consisted of recitations and musical efforts. The pastor then made his farewell address to the children, in words touched with much feeling. He said that both in Omaha and throughout his experience as a minister the children's words and actions had been of so much encouragement to him as the kindly assistance of more mature people. At the conclusion of his remarks he was presented with a beautiful floral harp in white and red blossoms, from the hands of little Miss Weston, in behalf of the infant class. The class of little girls tendered its tribute in the form of a beautiful poem, written by John F. Staley and read by his little daughter, Maude. The pastor acknowledged these briefly.

Rev. Mr. Haines, on behalf of the church, delivered the farewell remarks, in which he called to mind the disadvantages which the pastor had met and overcome, with what energy and success he had performed the duties of the pastorate, even to the smallest detail, and presented the complimentary facts that whereas, upon his accession to the charge, the congregation had numbered but one hundred, he left it now with a membership of more than three hundred.

Rev. Savidge leaves Wednesday next for the north Nebraska conference, whither he has been transferred, and where Bishop Andrews will assign him his field of work.

AGAIN WARNED.

Marshal Cummings Receives a Second Missive from His Guardian Angel.

Marshal Cummings has received another letter from the mysterious party who was to have transferred him to the happy hunting grounds a week ago, but failed to do so. The writer apologizes for his failure to keep the agreement, as he was "unavoidably detained by some of the heavenly throng." The writer continues and says:

"I was in close communion with my poor friend, Charles J. Galtman, yesterday for an hour, and he told me many things for your benefit which I will disclose at our meeting which will surely take place Friday at 11:10 p. m. Do not fail as so much is at stake. I also hear you want a detective. If this is true, why not hire me? I am your friend. It's true I have but one eye in the center of my forehead, but that eye can take in more than one second than any human being in a year. My eye is crooked. Some fools say it looks like Satan's eye. Vile wretches! They laugh, but their laughing will soon be changed into weeping and gnashing of teeth. Woe be unto them when I get after them."

I hear uneasy whisperings among angels. They may be offended with poor me. I must go. Adieu.

YOUR GUARDIAN ANGEL.

P. S.—I have a plan formed for carrying Mayor Boyd to heaven also. I will disclose it to you when we meet.

Owing to the failure of his "guardian angel" former plan, Marshal Cummings is not in the least alarmed about the present one. If it is carried out, however, he intends to pray his heavenly visitor to secure Mayor Boyd for company, in order that they may enter the heavenly gates together.

TOUGHS IN TOWN.

The Police Determined to Drive Them Out Before Fair Time.

"We'll give you reporters something to write about in a day or two now," remarked Marshal Cummings to a Bee man last evening. "It has been very quiet lately, but its nearly fair time now, and already crooks and toughs have begun to swarm into the city. The police have spotted a good many of them. Among the number are rogues of all descriptions—pickpockets, sneak thieves, confidence men, gamblers and crooks. Almost all of them are strangers in the city, this being their initial appearance, but occasionally we see the familiar face of some old offender who has returned after a protracted absence to work the fair."

"They won't have such an easy time of it, though, as they anticipate. We have got all the men on the force prepared for them, and are keeping close watch of all suspicious characters. Before the fair commences we are going to have a grand round-up, and expect to make a big haul. We'll make the city so hot for them that they'll be only too glad to leave. You can depend on it that during fair week Omaha will be as free from toughs as it ever has been. The reason is that they are keeping shady, and that the police do not know them. If they stay in town, though, they will find out to their sorrow how badly they are mistaken."

That the marshal is in earnest about the matter there can be no doubt. Not only imported, but local criminal talent will have to leave the city of their own accord or else be driven out. The authorities are bound to have good order and ample protection for property during the fair, and crooks and toughs will receive no mercy at their hands.

The Black Flag System.

"Our signal station is now equipped to furnish Omaha and the vicinity with full news about the cold waves," said Mr. Pollock, chief observer, to a reporter yesterday. "We have secured our black flag from Washington, and are prepared to hold it upon a moment's notice from the government building. We have orders to display when intelligence is received from Washington that the temperature is going to fall to 45° or less. When the temperature falls 20° but still does not reach 45°, we are ordered to announce the approach of a 'cold wave' in our weather observations. Yes, this black flag system will be used throughout the entire state, there being fifty towns in-

EVIL FOR GOOD.

A Young Man Returns a Kindness by Stealing from his Benefactor.

Shortly before the Missouri Pacific train left the Union Pacific depot last evening a man rushed wildly up the platform gasping for breath. As he came opposite one of the car platforms he suddenly made a dash for it. Another man, who had been standing idly on the car steps, just as suddenly gave a bound and started on a run. "Stop him!" yelled the first man, but all was of no avail, for the fugitive quickly disappeared in the darkness of the yards. His pursuer was so badly blown by his run that he gave up the chase and entered the car on the steps of which the man had been standing. He examined all the seats, and as his eye rested on two large valises he smiled in triumph. He quickly picked them up, and walking out of the car deposited them on the depot platform. By this time a crowd had gathered and an officer put in an appearance to find out the cause of the disturbance.

The man with the valises, as soon as he regained his breath, said that his name was Nels Anderson, and that one of the "bribs" belonged to him and had been stolen from his room by a man who was rooming with him. Anderson is a plasterer, and boards on the corner of Seventeenth and Nicholas streets. Last week Frank Castello, a father who had formerly been in Anderson's employ, arrived in Omaha from Kansas City financially "busted." Anderson took him to his own room to sleep, and they have occupied it together since. Last night, when Anderson returned from work, he found his room-mate gone, and also his best suit of clothes, a lot of underclothing and his "grip" missing. He immediately investigated and found that they had been taken by Castello. He at once gave chase to his recalcitrant bed-fellow, which resulted as above stated.

Castello, in running away, lost his hat, which, together with the two valises, were placed in charge of the depot master to await an owner.

Moore (formerly private company "C," Fourth infantry), sentenced to be dishonorably discharged from the service of the United States, and then to be confined at hard labor for six months, as much of the sentence of confinement as remains unexecuted September 5th, 1885, is remitted, on the recommendation of his company and post commanders.

In the case of Private George Yates, Troop "F," Ninth cavalry, sentenced to three months confinement and to forfeit thirty dollars of his pay, so much of the sentence of confinement as remains unexecuted is remitted, on the recommendation of his troop and post commanders.

Family Feuds.

Judge Selden was occupied yesterday in the trial of a peace warrant case which is one of many interesting features. For a number of months past there has been trouble between the families of Fred T. Shirock and William Mulhall resident on Twenty-first and Nicholas streets. This has cropped out in various ways, and if as alleged the family of Mr. Shirock has been the aggrieved one though in this Mr. Mulhall denies.

The case was on trial before Judge Selden nearly all day, and will not be finished in all probability for a day or two. Yesterday the table of the lawyers was covered with small brickbats and other implements of neighborly warfare, which it is said were thrown by the smaller members of the Shirock family at the children of the Shirock family. It is also said that Mulhall at one time fired off a revolver for the purpose of frightening the Shirocks.

Police Docket.

The following cases were disposed of by Judge Stenberg in the police court yesterday morning:

Minnie Mitchell, keeper of a disorderly house. $10 and costs. Six female and five male inmates, $5 and costs each.

Mr. Saffern, principal of the Musical Art institute of New York City, will give a lecture on the voice at 3 o'clock today, a lesson on light singing at 7, and a rehearsal at 8 p. m. at the United Presbyterian church, North Eighteenth street. All are cordially invited.

For Assaulting a Cripple.

A warrant was issued yesterday afternoon for the arrest of Mrs. J. Taylor, a woman of considerable notoriety, for assaulting Mrs. Tisher, a neighbor, and beating her in a most cruel manner. Mrs. Taylor was brought before Judge Stenberg, who sentenced her to pay a fine of $10 and costs. Mrs. Tisher is a small woman and badly crippled, while her assailant is of large proportions. The fracas was the result of a neighborhood scandal.

A Puerile Policeman.

Several ludicrous incidents have lately been whispered in certain circles regarding recent escapades which a well-known police officer has experienced. The incidents are not only ludicrous, but impress the idea upon an outsider that the said officer is not exactly in the business for which he was intended. It is related of him that one night, recently, during a rain storm, he sought the shelter of a certain house which contains a number of "lady boarders." Not wishing to dampen the costly carpets which covered the floors he removed his rubber coat and hung it up on the porch to drip. This act was observed by some of the occupants of the house and while the officer was enjoying a pleasant teleo-tele with the "ladies" the coat was removed and secreted. The consequence was that the officer had to spend the balance of the night in the rain, without any protecting "allicker," and did not dare complain. His coat still remains in hiding, and the parties who concealed it refuse to tell where it is.

The same officer was the victim, last night, of a practical joke, perpetrated by some wag. A colored man, in search of a warrant, secured an order which read about as follows: "I hereby give Col. Frank Simms authority to bring the body of Mrs. C. to the city jail for safe keeping until morning, for disturbing the peace." The "warrant" was signed, "A. J. Simpson, master in chancery." Col. Simms presented the "warrant" to the officer, who immediately proceeded to execute it. He called at the lady's residence and told her that he had a warrant for her arrest. She, however, refused to accompany him, and locked the door in his face. The officer decided to take counsel in the matter, and called upon two gentlemen to find out if he had a right to break in the door and take her prisoner by force. After carefully inspecting the "warrant," the gentlemen, as gently as they could, broke the intelligence to the officer that he had been duped.

A Sick Man's Frank.

Peter Thuesen, a victim of a severe case of typhoid-malarial fever, created a sensation early yesterday noon in St. Joseph's hospital such as the peaceful precincts of that great sanitarium seldom witness.

He was in a ward on the first floor and attended by one of the ministering sisters of the night watch. A call from up stairs took the watches away for a moment, when Thuesen took it into his delicious brain to escape. He bounded from bed, rushed from the ward and in the hallway sprang through a window, busting out sash, glass and all, to the ground. Alighting safely, he sped out through the darkness, the white skirts of his night robes streaming behind him in the wind. This morning a policeman brought him back, much enfeebled and suffering from an ugly gash across his shin which he doubtless received in breaking through the window. The man had gone directly to his home in the south end where he had taken refuge in a hay mow. This performance may cost him his life, as he was already a very sick man.

A Counterfeiter Caught.

Sunday afternoon Officers Turnbull and Cormick were summoned by telephone to a saloon on the corner of Tenth and Jones, where it was found two fellows were trying to pass counterfeit money. Both fellows escaped, however, before the arrival of the officers and ran down to the Slaven house, whither they were hotly pursued by the officers. One of them, John Heeny, ran out of the Slaven house and dodged under a platform next to Paxton & Gilgner's wholesale establishment, where he remained until dislodged by Cormick, who drove him into Turnbull's arms. He is now in jail awaiting trial.

Funeral Rites.

The funeral of Martin Taylor, son of J. H. Taylor, of West Omaha, took place Sunday afternoon and was largely attended by the friends and relatives of the deceased.

The deceased was born and raised in Omaha, where he was highly esteemed as a young man of great promise. He went out to Northwest Nebraska some years ago and established a home for himself. He met with his death, as already mentioned in these columns, by falling from a saw in a mill, being in a hurry in a manner that he died in a short time thereafter.

The Injunction Suit.

The injunction suit brought by Thirtieth street property owners to prevent the paving of that thoroughfare with Colorado sandstone, came up for a hearing before Judge Neville yesterday. Nothing was done, however, as the city filed some papers, which the attorneys for the injunctionists desired to examine. The case comes up for a hearing this morning.

Lost His Lucro.

Mag Johnson, a very ducky daughter of Sam passed disconsolately through the bars of the female cell in the city jail yesterday. "Won't tell you no big 'tob what I've been doing," she said sullenly. "None yo'r business if I is arrested." Mag, it appears, had robbed a German named Henry Stinkmeyer of $20 Sunday night. She has the reputation of being a clever thief.
