Four crippled tramps have been causing much annoyance in and about the Rock Island depot and yards, and the police have decided to run them in on sight. One has an arm in a sling, another has lost a hand, and the two others are each short one leg.

Fred Gerstenberg, who has gained a good deal of notoriety in the courts, is the only one who has yet paid the saloon license for September. He has ostensibly bought the saloon lately run by Brassfield, against whom an injunction was lately obtained by the prohibitionists.

The fire committee yesterday made a contract for 1,500 feet of new hose for the use of the department. The new hose is of the "Red Maltese Cross" brand, and is warranted for four years, and to stand a pressure of 400 pounds. The price to be paid is 95 cents a foot, in general fund warrants.

The divorce case of Anna Gerstenberg against Fred Gerstenberg was heard by Judge Connor yesterday. She claimed that her husband had often abused her, had thrown dishes at her, hit her, and otherwise brutally used her, and that he was too big a drunkard for her to live longer with. He did not appear to dispute any of the charges. This couple seem to be having a stormy matrimonial career, and one would think that they would soon get so used to being divorced and married that they could hardly tell whether they were double or single. She testified yesterday that they were first married five years ago, and then divorced about three years ago, and then remarried, and now a divorce is wanted again.

EXPENSIVE LITIGATION.

An Italian Hops on His Attorney. with Blood in His Eye.

A Dear Deal in Horse Flesh.

Jo Calme, an Italian, who has only been in this country a year, and who has been keeping a fruit stand here, has just been having some experience in law, which does not give him a very high opinion of the justice or economy of legal proceedings in America. He can talk very little English, which adds to his difficulties, and the story of his wrongs is rather mixed in the details, but in substance is as follows: A short time ago he purchased a horse of a professional trader named Campbell, paying for the animal $75 in hard earned cash, and being assured that he was getting a steed which was sound in every respect, but which he soon found both blind and balky. He was naturally indignant at being thus imposed upon, and hurried into court to secure reparation. Justice Schurz heard the case, and advised him to have some attorney look after his interests, and J. J. Stewart and W. H. Ware, two well-known members of the bar, became interested. Papers were filed, and Constable Clatterback succeeded in getting out of Campbell the $75 originally paid for the horse. This amount was paid into court, and the constable took out his fees, and the balance of the money was paid to the attorneys. When Canine settled with his attorneys he received as the balance $46, the rest of the $75 having been used in getting it back for him. He was wrathful, and claimed that Clatterback had no business to settle with the horse trader for $75, but that he should have made the horse trader pay all the costs involved, thus leaving him the original $75. He wanted the attorneys to begin suit against Clatterback for the balance of his money, and indignantly threw down the $46 on the table of the attorneys, and said that he would not take it. The Italian grow hotter and hotter as he thought of how his money had dwindled down, and he had nothing to show for it, and the attorneys, while not thinking that it would do any good to sue Clatterback, followed his instructions and commenced action. This action he soon after dismissed, having been advising with some of his other friends. He concluded he had better take what he could get and quit the courts, but on applying to his attorneys for his money he found that they claimed it as fees, so that he had nothing at all left. The attorneys claimed that the Italian had ordered them to sue Clatterback, and gave them the $46 for their fees, and that it was not their fault if he dismissed the case, they retaining the money under the contract thus made. The Italian could see nothing in the whole affair except the fact that whereas he once had $75, he now had nothing, and that it had cost him all of the money to get the money back from a man who had swindled him out of it on a horse trade. There was blood in his eye, and he yesterday made a demand on Ware for the money, and being refused he proceeded to choke and shake the attorney, and make direful threats. The Italian was arrested, on the charge of assault, and will have a hearing this morning, which will probably cost him ten dollars more. He begins to think that American modes of dealing out justice are very complicated and costly, and the next time he is offered any money he will probably be content to take what he can get, rather than fight for the whole. His temper and his ignorance have cost him so far about $75, and if he carries into execution the threats he has been indulging in he will probably find that the bill will run still higher. His attack on the attorney yesterday caused quite a little street sensation, and no little sympathy was expressed for the fellow who had thus taken his first lesson in the courts and in dealing with attorneys.

After giving bonds for his appearance in the morning to answer to the charge of assault, the Italian was arrested again on another complaint, that of making threats. Mr. Ware being the complainant, and Justice Freaney issuing the papers.
