The fight between the prohibitionists and the saloon-keepers in Iowa continues with unabated vigor. The fact that forty Dubuque saloon-keepers, against whom suits have been begun, have had their cases removed to the federal court, not only shows that there's many a slip between the cup and the lip, but that prohibition continues not to prohibit. The suits have been transferred on the ground that under the prohibition law, which the supreme court has declared in full force, the saloon-keeper can be deprived of the rights guaranteid to him by the civil rights act of congress and by the constitution and its a nendments. This is an important decision, and causes the liquor element to smile.

A Name in the sand Alons I walked the ocean strand, A pearly shell was in my hand; I stoeped and wrote upon the sand My name, the year, the day. As onward from the spot I passed, One lingering look behind I cast; A wave came rolling high and fast And washed my name away,

And so, mathcught, 'twill quickly be, With every mark on carth from me A wave of dark oblivion's sea Will sweep across the place. Where I have trod the sandy shore Of time, and been, to be no more-Of me, my day, the name I hore, To leave no track or trace.

And yet with Him who counts the sands, And holds the waters in His hands, I know a lasting record stands Inscribed against my name, all this mortal part has wrought Of all this thinking soul has thought, Aud from those fleeting moments caught,

For glory or for shame. -[George D] Prentice.
