Gas Heister is now laid off duty by the smashing of one of his fingers, which got caught while he with others of those who have been at work on the institution for the deaf and dumb, were riding in on a wagon with a ladder and sundry tools.

In the abduction case of Anna Bruhn against Max Alpen the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for $500. There seemed some doubt from the testimony as to who was the father of the little babe the woman had in her arms, but the jury seemed to jump to the conclusion that the defendant having been too intimate with her, whether others had or not, ought to pay at least that amount, and that he got off cheaply enough at that.

C. O. Kempster was arrested a few days ago on the charge of disturbing the peace. It was claimed that while a party was going on in the house of a neighbor, Mr. Hales, on Harrison street, that Kempster came there, and being indignant at finding his boy there, proceeded to chastise the youth in such a severe manner as to excite much indignation among the guests. The case, which has been pending before Justice Schurz, was yesterday dismissed without any trial.

The Garstbergs seem bound to keep well advertised. Lately he bought on the saloon of Braesfeld, an injunction being issued restraining the latter from selling any more. Then on Thursday evening, just after the hearing had been had in the divorce case brought by Mrs. Gerstenberg, Constable Barhyte pounced down upon the goods and chattels, on a batcher bill of $10, and began to cart away the stuff. Mrs. Gerstenberg was not going to have it this way, and she began to flourish a revolver. The officer disarmed her and found another revolver in her dress pocket. The goods were then taken and kept until yesterday, when a settlement was made.

The cases brought against the Italian, Jo Caline, did not reach a hearing yesterday, but went over until to-day. The affair has caused more talk on the street corners than any $75 transaction which has occurred here in a long time. Much sympathy is expressed for the Italian, it so far having cost him $75 to collect $75, and there being a good prospect of it costing him still more before he gets through his troubles arising from the affair. The Bx man examined the docket in Justice Schurz's court yesterday, and found that of the $75 paid in on the Italian's claim, $4 went to the justice of the peace, as his costs, $4 30 went to Constable Clatterback as his costs, and the balance of the money, $66.70, was received for by the attorneys, J. J. Stewart and W. H. Ware, who had given notice that as attorneys in the case they claimed a lien of $20 on whatever money should be collected. It seems then that most of the money went for attorney fees instead of for court costs.

An Emphatic Denial. From the Fort Wayne (Ind.) Gazette, August 21, 1885. The following letter from General Master Mechanic Barnes, of the Wabash, and the subject answer was published in yesterday's issue of the Indianapolis Journal:

To the Editor of the Indianapolis Journal: My attention has been called to an item in your Sunday (August 10) edition, under head, "Railway Company." This item purports to be a copy of an order or agreement which persons are required to sign before being allowed the privilege of working for our company.

This statement and article is a malicious lie, and having its due weight with certain classes, we would kindly ask you to please correct the same in next issue. This article has been going the rounds for some time, yet I have the first copy to see outside of newspapers. If such an article be in circulation, it has its origin outside of those in authority on this line.

We make no distinction in the man we employ, care nothing for their views on any subject, neither do we care to what order they belong. All we ask of them is to act like gentlemen, work like men, and they will be treated as such. No man ever signed or was asked to sign any agreement to get employment with us. We simply claim the right to control our business the same as you control yours, object to be dictated to by any order as an organization. You will readily see our position, and hope you will give us an impartial notice.

J. B. BARNES, Supt. Motive Power and Machinery, Springfield, Ill., August 18.

[The item referred to was taken from the Fort Wayne Gazette, and the order was stated to have been posted in the Wabash shops last week.—Ed. Indianapolis Journal.]

The Gazette defies the Indianapolis Journal, General Master Mechanic Barnes or anyone else to furnish a copy of the paper containing the article alleged, and the statement that the same had been posted up in the shops. Nothing of the kind has ever been published in the Gazette. At the commencement of the second difficulty between the company and its employees, when certain men were refused work, the charge was openly made that they were blacklisted for being influential members of the Knights of Labor, and also that every one taking a position in the shops was compelled to sign the document mentioned above. The Gazette, at the time, referred to these statements, but also, in the same articles, included a denial of their truth by the officers of the company.

MORMON MATTERS. A Group of Elders and Missionaries in the City.

What they Say About Polygamy.

Several elders and missionaries of the Mormon church are in the city, making headquarters at the Western house, they being William M. Palmer, T. S. Jones, J. H. Wright, L. A. Thurstip, N. Mortenson, T. E. Wrightman, Charles Barrett, C. W. Peterson and H. E. Peterson. From Elder Palmer was learned the purpose of their visit and their plans and views. It seems that they all are workers in what is known in the church as the northwestern mission, which includes in its territory nine states, extending as far east as Ohio, and on the south to the line of Iowa. They are on their way to a conference to be held in Minnesota, and are then to attend similar conferences to be held in other states within the mission. Besides attending these conferences the purpose is to enlighten the public so far as possible concerning Mormon practices and opinions.

Elder Palmer was quite communicative, and in reply to the query as to the effect of the prosecutions against the Mormons, expressed the opinion that they had tended to strengthen the church. He said that the mission had been growing this year. From November 1, 1884, to May 1, 1885, there have been forty-nine converts, and from the first of May last to the first of August there had been sixty-nine converts, and the increased per cent of growth he attributed to what he termed persecutions.

On being asked about the law against polygamy he declared that he did not object to much to the law itself as to the illegal way in which it was brought about and tried under it. The Poland law gave the Mormons a chance to sit as jurymen, and half of the jury could be of that faith, but under the Edmunds law no Mormons could sit on the jury, although eighty-five per cent of the population was of that faith, and although they had to take an oath to decide according to the evidence. This he deemed unfair. Another objection to the law was that it did not permit the defendant to testify in his own behalf. With these two defects in the law, and with the prejudice against the Mormons, a warrant was about the same as a conviction. He cited the case of Cannon, who was not allowed to testify in his own behalf, and who was denied the privilege of explaining that before the law was passed he had several wives, but numerous children by them, but since the law went into effect he had cohabited with only one, and had supported the others, as he could not in justice disown and desert them. Elder Palmer claims that this is the position taken by all so far as he knows. He says that he did not know of any polygamous marriages taking place since the law went into effect. There might be such marriages, but, if so, he did not know of them, and they were kept very quiet. Those who had a plurality of wives were living only with one, and simply supporting the others.

The elder further showed the feeling on the Mormon side of the affair by complaining that the government was using despicable means to work up its cases, employing spies, creeping into the privacies of homes, questioning children, and taking undue advantage of every possible hook and eye. He thought that it was not fair to use such means to convict men of doing what the church had made one of its tenets, long before the law had made it a crime.

The hanging of flags at half mast on the Fourth of July, by Mormons, having called out many expressions of indignation, the elder was called on to give his explanation of the thought that it was not done in defiance but in sorrow. The Mormons felt that they were under a reign of terror and tyranny, and that while others were enjoying the liberty of their own views, they were being persecuted, and not allowed freedom of expression in this way. He said that on the 24th of July, when the flags were also at half-mast, it was telegraphed all over the country that it being the celebration of the coming of the pioneers into Utah, the Mormons were putting their flags at half-mast, on that account, whereas it was on account of the sorrow felt at the death of Grant. In all such ways they had been so far as possible misrepresented.

The elder seemed quite bitter about the Utah commission, claiming that the powers were abused, and that their governor was so clothed with almost kingly power, and so bitter against the Mormons, that justice has almost died out in the land. Local interests had been easily demoralized, summary changes being made in officials, Mormons being turned out and Gentiles put in, and business, especially the mail, greatly interfered with. He said that the Mormons were willing to submit peacefully to the law; but they wanted it impartially and equably administered. He claimed that gentlemen were not convicted of the same crime which Mormons were charged with, and that a decision was recently given in a case of a gentleman, who debauched his sister-in-law, discharging him, on the ground that he was not guilty of cohabiting with her, as he did not disclose her before the public as his wife.

The Mormons were found guilty under the law, not because they were cohabiting with more than one woman, but because they were supporting as their wives other women besides the one with whom they were living. The courts held that this in the eyes of the law was cohabitation, which he deemed very unjust.

THE CORNER STONE

That of the Scandinavian Baptist Church to be Laid Tomorrow.

The laying of the corner stone of the new Scandinavian Baptist church will take place tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the site selected for the new building, corner of Seventh street and Seventh avenue. The services promise to be unusually interesting, and all are invited to be present. The services will be in English. Capt. Sladen, the aid of Gen. Howard, and Messrs. Powell and Holmes of Omaha, will speak. The pastors of the Methodist, Congregational and First Baptist churches will assist in the services.

The new building is to be 36 by 56 feet, the first story to be of brick, and the superstructure to be a frame one.

The whole improvement will cost about $5,000, and it is expected that the church will be ready for occupancy by Christmas time. Until then the Sunday services will be held in the old church on Mynder street, this building has been sold and the proceeds to be put into the new one. The pastor of the church, Rev. Mr. Reichenbach has worked ably and successfully, and the church and congregation has grown in numbers and strength until it has become the largest Scandinavian religious organization in the city.

Making Up After a Quarrel. She stands beside the door in white disdain. For some portentous nothing is at stake, And she will not unlay the words she speaks, Nor his make right or wrong, though he were vain. Alack! their honeymoon is on the wane; The hearts that beat as one have learned to ache. The stream wherein they two have come to stake Love's threat is parched for drought of love's sweet rain. They brood in sullen silence 'neath the cloud That now first shadows this fair wedlock. When, lo! it bursts in tears from both their eyes, And, on each other's lips, their anger dies. Upon his breast her golden head is bowed, And, in his arms, he clasps his life once more. —[Life-Democrat.

EDUCATIONAL. The corner stone of the Nevada State university will be laid September 9th. Children will not be admitted to the schools of Chicago this fall unless they have a certificate of vaccination. Cambridge university in England has a total of 2,863 undergraduates. Trinity college has the largest attendance, 613, and St. John's comes next with 520. A lady has suggested that the English government provide schools on wheels for the education of gypsy and van children, as estimates and other travelers of this class are greatly increasing. Prof. F. L. Pitter, of Vassar college, says it is possible Miss Cleveland will be offered the presidency of that institution, the election of which takes place next month. "She is a bright woman," he says, "and well fitted for the position."

By the authority of the general of the Jesuits in Rome the College of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, Woodstock, Md., has been declared "The Collegium Maximum," the principal institution under the charge of the Society of Jesus in the United States. This high honor will be honorably celebrated at the college on Monday, September 7th, when a large gathering is expected. If the teachers were as scarce in the east as they are in some far western towns and the demand for wives as great, there might be some sense in the attitude of the Plainville, Conn., school board, which has voted not to engage any teacher who will not agree to remain single during the school year. The main teachers have unanimously refused to sign any such agreement and we glory in their pluck. —[Providence Star.

The Vienna girls are kept at their studies until they are fifteen years of age, and then go through a course of teaching in the pantry and kitchen under a member of the family, or sometimes under trained cooks for a year or two. It looks as if the girls of Vienna got very little time to devote to the German, Russian work, lawn tennis, fondling puppies, painting pictures and other accomplishments, in order to fit themselves to make their debut in society at the age of 18 years. —[Norristown Herald.

The Greatest Pies. O, the apple pie is a very nice pie, And a very nice pie indeed; And some there are who say to me, "Of all the pies it is the best." And the mince pie, too is a good pie, As good as good can be. If the crust is crisp and brown enough, And the raisins and prunes are in, And the pumpkin pie is a very nice pie, For now and then, you know, It's well made 'tis fairly good pie. As squawb and pumpkin go, And the cherry pie is a very good pie, Of fruit so tart and red; And many a child will call this pie Of every sort ahead. But the greatest pies in all the land, Are the dear sand pies the children make In the Summer by the sea.
