One of the special officers recently placed on the police force has already started out in a little "crooked work."

The other evening it is said, while on his beat, he visited a lady of easy virtue at her room.

On the table there was a pair of opera glasses, and when he left the room the officer slipped them into his pocket.

The lady missed the glasses and reported the matter to Marshal Cummings, who interviewed the officer on the subject.

The new "coop" said he had only meant to borrow the glasses, and intended to return them.

Last night he presented to the marshal with a note from the above mentioned lady acknowledging their receipt and urging him not to discharge the policeman, as she could recommend him as a faithful officer.

A WOMAN'S WAIL. An Aged Wanderer Loses Her Way and is Cared for by the Police.

About 9 o'clock last evening Officer Curry walked into the police station with an aged lady leaning heavily on his arm, as if she were greatly exhausted.

The officer pulled out a chair and the lady sank into it with a groan. She looked thin and pale and seemed hardly able to sit up.

She was dressed in plain black and carried on her arm a small basket and a hand bag. The officer had found her at the corner of Twenty-second and Cumming streets wandering around in an uncertain manner.

When addressed she said that her name was Mrs. Van Ralston, and that she had lost her way. She had been around the locality all day, walking back and forth.

She stated that she wanted to find her son, who lived near Twentieth and Pierce streets, but had been unable to do so. Mr. Curry informed her that she was a long distance out of her way.

She objected to this, however, as she had no money to pay for a conveyance, and would not allow the officer to pay for it.

Mrs. Van Ralston did not seem to fully grasp her situation, but kept up a constant moaning, bewailing the loss of a son who, she said, had taken care of her until recently, when he died.

The officer finally concluded that it would be best to remove her to the rooms of the Woman's Christian Aid association for the night, and she was assisted to the place. She was immediately taken care of, and her son will be informed of her whereabouts this morning.

Amusements. THE PHOENIX LAST NIGHT. A packed house witnessed for the half-dozenth time in Omaha the presentation of "The Phoenix," the closing production of Milton Nobles' three nights engagement.

This great sensational play, the production of Nobles' genius and the great vehicle of his talents, loses with age none of its attractiveness which has lifted its master spirit to fame and fortune. Not a word of fault is to be had against this perfect drama either in itself or in its presentation of last night.

In this instance the opera house management shares largely the credit and approval. To the energy of the managers and the skill of Mr. Booth, the Boyd stage carpenter, "the great fire scene" was given with a realism which Mr. Nobles acknowledges is seldom attained in the cities of his travels.

One last word--let Milton Nobles hang to "Phoenix" for at least once whenever the great drama will bear witnessing time and again.

THE RAG BABY TO-NIGHT. To-night and to-morrow evening, Charles Hoyt's latest creation, "A Rag Baby," holds the boards if the house stands the roaring strain which will be put upon it.

If there is one marvellous relief-spring, dyspeptic in this wild city who misses the performances, he had better retire to ancient English history and "never smile again."

IS

It so that you are intending to buy yourself a new suit or an overcoat; if you can find one to please you in style, price and quality. If so don't fail to embrace the opportunity afforded you at the Misfit Clothing Parlors, 1119 Farnam Street.

THERE

Are all of the most prevailing styles in cut and fabrics that the woolen mills of America or Europe place before the public for inspection. There is no question but that will be pleased if they are blessed with a little faith and wish to wear clothing of character, cut in proper shape, trimmed with silks, atines serges and Italian cloths. The Misfit Parlors have found no mistaken idea of the people

In Omaha

For they pronounce the Parlors the savings bank for mankind by patronizing them for their clothing, as they save from 50 to 100 per cent on every purchase and get the best purest and cleanest made, as every garment is made by a merchant tailor.

Who Has

Made them expressly for their customers placing all of his reputation at stake in turning out the proper garment. In consequence of these garments having

Not Been

Called for and left upon his hands, he will readily sacrifice not alone his profits, but to dispose of them he will sell them for less than his first cost. The Misfit Parlors make this a business by giving it their whole attention.

They employ agents who are assigned to special territories throughout the United States to buy up these garments from the merchant ship per orders to the Misfit Parlors, and it is reasonable to say, when these garments, from so many different merchant tailors, are found in one stock, that the equal actions, of elegant and durable clothing is found nowhere outside of where your attention is now directed.
