

THE DAILY BEE.

COUNCIL BLUFFS

Saturday Morning, September 12.

Office No. 12 Pearl St.

Delivered by carrier to any part of the city or twenty cents a week.

H. W. TITTON, Editor and Lessee.

MINOR MENTION.

Flower pots at Homer's, 23 Main.

Relter, merchant tailor, for fine goods. Low Hammer rejoices in being the father of a little daughter.

The Washash employees received their July pay on Thursday evening.

In the circuit court yesterday the case of Forschermer vs. Stewart was still on trial.

The pastors of the several city churches are planning for holding monthly conferences.

The controversy over the elevator at Neola came up on a demurrer before Judge Conner yesterday morning.

John Ahles has been heard from as being in Switzerland, pretty well tired out, and thinking of starting soon for home.

M. D. Hardin has been reelected overseer of the poor of the county for the ensuing year. His salary is $50 a month.

The services at the churches of the city on Sunday evenings will now commence at 7:30 o'clock, instead of 8 o'clock, as during the summer.

Mr. Pethybridge's little boy had a narrow escape from death, having partaken of a lot of fly poison. Emetics promptly administered saved him.

The weather yesterday was a great disappointment to many of the Council Bluffs people who were expecting to go over the river and see the sport there.

Mrs. Cora Biggs has commenced suit against James H. Biggs, to whom she was married in May, 1883, and who, she claims, deserted her in the following August.

Services in the Congregational church to-morrow morning and evening. Morning subject, "Loss and Gain." Evening subject, "The Christian's Possessions." Evening services at 7:30.

While J. E. Ratekin was looking after the gasoline stove preparatory to getting breakfast yesterday morning, at his residence, the oil in the pan under the stove blazed up and singed the left side of his face and head.

Officer O'Brien arrested Bill Davis on complaint of Mrs. Smith, living in the southern part of the city, who claimed that Davis kicked in the door of her house. As she did not appear to prosecute him he was let loose.

The full meeting of the Council Bluffs association of Congregational churches is to be held in Glenwood, September 22 to 24. Rev. G. W. Crofts, of this city, will take an active part, and Rev. G. G. Rice is to give a paper on "Prohibition."

The services of St. Paul's church will be in the elegant Masonic hall until further notice. A competent choir will render the music, and from the central position of the hall these services will undoubtedly be largely attended. The sermon topics for to-morrow will be: Morning, "The Promised Rest;" evening, "The Evil of Division."

Does the reform mayor mean by his recent action and utterances that in his opinion no man should hold a position under the city government who lets too much whisky in, or too much talk out? If so, how high up is this rule to apply, and is it to be expected that such officers as are elected by the people, and who are known to break the rule, will send in their resignations?

The contest over the chieftainship of the fire department was to have come up before Judge Aylesworth yesterday, but owing to the fact that some of the attorneys interested were busy in the circuit court, the case has been continued for a few days. It is reported that Walters' time will be up next spring anyway, so he will be out of office by the time the court gets ready to throw him out.

The many friends and admirers of Miss Jessie Couthout, who has given several excellent elocutionary entertainments here, will be interested in learning that invitations are out for her marriage to Mr. Willard E. Shrader, the event to take place in the Baptist church at Englewood, Illinois, September 28. A reception is to be held after the ceremony at the residence of the bride's parents, and the newly wedded ones will be "at home" early in October.

C. J. Beckman indignantly denies that he said there was nothing to show for the 650 poll-tax notices which have been worked out on the streets. Of course there has not been so much work done as could have been secured if the city could have had the cash, $1,300, and had the choosing of its men, but this was not expected. Human nature never overdoes when working out a poll-tax, and when a man has a job of this kind on hand he is not generally afraid of losing it.

W. P. Aylsworth, who lately raised St. Francis academy, left on the premises temporarily a large number of jack-screws, and some one the other night loaded up twenty-five or thirty of the largest of them, and carted them off to some unknown spot. The wagon on which they were loaded was a hay wagon, and it was so heavy that the team got about stilled in front of Dr. Finney's office on Pearl street, and some part of the wagon gave way, but the load was started again, and the fellows got off with the heavy plander.

John Farrell seems to be in bad luck.

He came here the other day from Quebec and proceeded to test the question as to whether prohibition was being enforced in Iowa or not. A hackman complained of him for not paying for being driven about, and when the police went after him, they found him in a box car pretty drunk and complaining that he had been robbed of $8 or $10 by some stranger who had acted at first friendly to him and had got him off to one side. After getting sober he was allowed to go free, but proceeded to fill up again, and the police, hearing that he had slipped a $10 bill out of the pocket of a companion, arrested him and he was again locked up. He had no money, and had lost even his gripack. As there was no one to appear to charge him with doing any harm only to himself, he was allowed to go free again, and his experience in the West will do him good perhaps.

Substantial abstracts of title and real estate loans, J. W. and E. L. Squire, 102 Pearl street.

Workers with metals generating electricity escaped the cholera of '49. Then use our electric belts. Judd & Smith, Council Bluffs. Agents wanted.

A HIGH TREE CLAIM.

An Ambitious Maple Takes Root and Grows on Top of the Methodist Church.

Those who pass the Broadway Methodist church pass right by one of the most curious sights to be found anywhere, and yet so few people look high, and so few notice what there is to be seen, that there are probably not a dozen persons who have noticed this strange freak of nature. It is nothing less than a tree growing on top of the church itself. At each corner of the church is a tall square pier of brick, the piers being about three feet square, and reaching up above the edge of the roof and flat on top. On the top of the southeast pier is a tree, apparently growing and flourishing as well as if its roots were not at such a giddy height. The tree appears to be fully three feet tall, and is pushing its green branches out as though it meant to live and thrive for a long while yet to come. The idea of a little upstart of a tree getting such proud notions in its head that it must live fifty feet above its mother earth and look down upon the world filled with men, is not the reach of any ordinary or stone-throwing urchin, calls for an explanation as to how the tree got so far up in the world. The supposition is that the dirt has accumulated on top of this pier during the long years since the building was first erected, and that at last there was sufficient to nourish some stray seed blown from a world filled with men, and the reach of any ordinary or stone-throwing urchin, calls for an explanation as to how the tree got so far up in the world. "SEEING" THE MAYOR.

The Opera House Manager Tells His Experience and Beliefs.

The recent sparring entertainment at the opera house was so interfered with by the mayor as to lead Mr. John Doherty, the owner and manager, to give the mayor the following dig in the ribs:

The admission fee was $1, seventy-five and fifty cents. More gave $1 and seventy-five cents than fifty cents; many went away, getting tired of the delay caused by the mayor's unwarrantable interference. The mayor was not on the ground, as his article says, but he made it known when he could be seen, with an intimation that unless he was seen the entertainment could not come off. The management knew what seeing the mayor meant as well as the saloon and gambling house keepers of the city knew, but did not choose to see him in that way, and again the idea that a party of friends travelling, giving sparring exhibitions would be likely to hurt one another with boxing gloves on, is too foolish to think of. I don't think a committee of citizens made such a request as stated. He says the authorities were not consulted, meaning, I suppose, the mayor. Why should the mayor be consulted concerning every entertainment that comes along. He might then get free tickets and a box at the opera that he does not get. Not because he was not cheeky enough to ask for it. The company did not require a license. The house is licensed by the year. How does the writer know that Boyd would not allow the entertainment in his house, as they did not apply for a date at the skating rink, a much better place for them for less money? The party used the opera house in Cedar Rapids, Dubuque, Davenport, Iowa City and Des Moines, and every place they applied for them. The Sullivan company gave a sparring exhibition here. The mayor at that time did not request to be seen before the performance, as he did not expect a $10 for his sanction. The guarantee and committee business was all a blind, after finding he could not be seen to show free, and his son was one of the first to apply for a comp to see the exhibition that the mayor did not want to go on.
