I suffered for more than five years with indigestion, scarcely able to retain the simplest foad on mys stomach. The burning sensation was almost intolerable, and my whole tystem was deranged I was wakeful and could not sleep, and consequently more or less nervors all the time. I decline in fiesh and suffered all the usual depression attendant upon this terrible disease. In a word, I was miserable. At last, falling to find relief in anything else. I commenced the use of Swift's Specific. I began to improve at once. The medicine toned up the stomach, strengthened the directive organs, and soon all that burning ceased, and I could retain food without difficults. Now my beath is yeard for the conditions of th that burning ceased, and I could retain food without difficulty. Now my health is good, and can eat anything in the chape of food, ond digest it without the slighest difficulty. I most cheerfully bear this testimony because there are bundreds suffering as I was, and I am sure can be as readily healed. Take the prescribed dose after esting instead of before.

LINCOLN'S SAILOR LIFE,

Affoat Down the Mississippl on the Flat Boat,

Crofutt Letter.

This seems to be the day of reminiscences. Men who can remember something about war times or men like Kelley and Admiral Porter, who imagine they can remember something, are at a premium. Yesterday, in a down town office I ran against Gen. Egbert Viele, in war times. civil engineer and member of congress for half of New York Island. I asked him circumstances brought me into intimate relations with Mr. Lincoln. In 1862 I accompanied him on a trip down the Potemac to Fortress Monroe, Secretaries Stanton and Chase also being of the party. We laid for our transport party. We laid for our transportation party. book. We heard him read it to strangers several times during the passage.

I asked Gen. Viele if Mr. Lincoln ever made any revelations of his own history.

"Yes, I'm coming to that," he said.

"Yes, I'm coming to that," he said. 'One day we found ourselves compelled to listen to a long, dry and presy account of the personal history of the captain of the revenue cutter. In one of his pauses, Mr. Lincoln kindly protected us by saying, 'Captain, excuse me, but you re mind me of my marine experience.' H then passed in review that bit of his lif except that he once helped take one flat-boat down the Mississippi. This he told us about, and I can pretty accurately preparations.

"I was a young fellow, about 18," said Mr. Lincoln. "I worked for a Kentuckian, and helped him distill whisky. When spring came, he had nothing to pay off with except whisky. It occurred to me, however, that when I got to New Orleans, it is a pure tonic, and the best preparation of iron in existence. that when I got to New Orleans whisky might be as b'g a drug as in Kentucky, so I traded half the whisky for tobacco. After a while we got started. One night, when we were snubbed up to the levee, a couple of gentlemen came down the bank, and, looking at the little boat we that steamer that is coming down the river?' I told them I thought it was worth a shilling apiece. I rowed them out, and when they got on board the ateamer, they gave me a bright silver dollar. I felt good. When I got back I dollar every two working hours, I might yet be a rich man before I died.'

"Here Mr. Lincoln's narrative sudden ly ceased." We waited till it was obious that he dld not mean to continue it, when the captain said: "Say, Mr. Lincoln. how about that whisky and to-based Did you get rid of them all right?'

narrating my marine experience, and thousand hogs per day, old no more.

"One day," continued Gen. Viele
"Mr. Lincoln picked up a new axe that was sticking in a socket at the side of the vessel, for use in an emergency, and taking it by the extreme end of the helve with his extended thumb and forefinger, he held it out at arm's length for several minutes without any difficulty. He remarked that he could do that trick when he was 18, and had never seen a day since when he could not do it. After that I saw every sailor try to do what they had seen Mr. Lincoln do, withou being able in a single instance. He reminded me of Peter the Strong, who held the offensive bugler out the castle window." "The fund of sneedote and appropriate allusion possessed by Mr. Lincoln was marvelous. Of course he told a good many stories not intended for miscellane ous society; and he told those stories for the same reason that other men told them-not because they are 'off color, but because they are exceedingly ludicrous, and often opposite." I asked the general if he recalled any thing about the other distinguished "Only a little," he said, "and that lit-tle is associated with Mr. Lincoln. The fact is, that while Stanton may have been his superior in overmastering qualities and Chase in the possession of an analytic ntellect, Mr. Lincoln surpassed them immersurably in interesting everybody who saw him. I remember that Stanton made the remark, Mr. Lincoln, just before I left my office I received a letter from Gen. Mitchell, in Alabama, asking certain things. It was vague, I didn't understand it exactly, but I took the chances and telegraphed back, 'all right. Go shead ' Now if I have made a mistake I shall have to get you to countermand my order.'

'Mitchell won't make any mistakes there. He's like the horse—you know about the horse? He was for sale at a crossreads in Kentucky. A crowd was gathered to bid. A small boy was employed to ride the horse up and down and show his points. One of the men fellowed the horse out a rod or two, and then quietly said to the boy: 'Boy, hain't that hose got the splints?"

" 'I dunno wot the splints is,' said the boy, 'but of they're good for 'im, he's got 'em, and of they aln't, he hain't got Gen. Viele sald he thought Mr. Lin-

He developed, to my surprise, a large knowledge of English literature and belles-lettres, and an appreciation of all that is grand and beautiful in the English language. I never met a man who seemed to me to have such a tenaclous memory. He repeated some of the plays of Shakeepeare almost entire, skipping from character to character with a droll twinkle of the eye, that showed a nice perceptien of the dramatic situation. Browning, too, seemed to be ene of his favorites; and from Bryon he recited whole cantos, one after the other. He must have given us twelve or fifteen pages from the "Corrair," At the same time his humor exhibited itself in a remarkable degree. I remember that one morning, as we were sitting on the upper deck, he picked up a copy of Frank Lealie's, in which was a funny poem full of the conclusive edicated by it, unterested the curse effected by it, unsurpassed and seldom equalled by any other medicine. Send to C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass, for book containing the many statements of cures.
