

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE.

FIFTEENTH YEAR.

OMAHA, FRIDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 16, 1885.

NUMBER 100.

COMPLICATION IN THE COURT

Nothing Absolutely Certain but Judge Foraker's Overwhelming Election.

THE LEGISLATURE IN DOUBT.

Great Indignation at the Frauds in Cincinnati—Judge Foraker Congratulated—Retarded Returns.

The Ohio Election.

The progress of the count is very slow and gathering up the loose ends of the returns seems almost beyond achievement. The frauds in Cincinnati and irregularities in outlying districts are the great impediments. Foraker's net plurality will be 18,575. At sitting that Hamilton county is about even and that Brown and Ottawa will give Hendry a majority equal to the majority for Cincinnati last year, Foraker's plurality will be 18,575. Very little now can be said regarding the legislature. The republicans claim the representative in Hardin county and admit the election of a democratic representative in Stark county. Otherwise the situation remains unchanged.

CHRONICLES IN CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, October 15.—[Special to the Bee.]—There is a great deal of crooked work in connection with counting the returns in this city and at other points in this state where they were not counted last night. The republicans claim that word has been given out to hold the ballots in the boxes till further orders. The claim is stoutly made that the democrats have elected their legislative and county tickets. Nearly twenty precincts are still out. In one precinct in the Fourth ward counted last night 300 more votes were returned than registered. The Lincoln club (republican) has gathered unofficial returns on the head of the ticket from all but three precincts, two in the Nineteenth ward, and one in the country. These put Foraker 357 ahead, and so far the republican legislative candidates have been running ahead of Foraker, indicating that the republicans have elected their full delegation here. On the other hand it is said to-night: "There are some returns in, but we are making up the count to-night," but refused to name more. Newspapers have collected all but fifteen precincts, but no one seems to know where the rest are to be counted. Notwithstanding, the hardy reporters that have been running more deuteh than is known will be made public before the official count is made. There is much more out-spoken indignation here over the frauds than was voiced before the riot of last year. This is not confined to republicans, but comes also from democrats who claim more for the purity of the ballot box than for the election of their candidates. One office of one hundred is demanded because it did not receive funds. Said one citizen of high standing last night, "greatly fearing such a provocation, occur something terrible, which will bring the most serious trouble."

INDIGNATION IN CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 15.—The irregularities and frauds in the election in connection with St. Louis's election in this city have had a profound impression on all classes of well-meaning people. The palpable crime of putting more than two hundred votes in one box to pass as the legitimate result of a vote taken by the people, and a general understanding reached that such frauds must be taken to-day for calling an indignation meeting. The matter was discussed to-day, but a few hours later. Notwithstanding, there was a gathering in the hall to-night and application was made for the hall for the purpose of holding an indignation meeting. The proprietor took advantage of the opportunity to hold the meet. Impressed above all place, notwithstanding the violent denunciation of the leaders, whom they regarded as responsible for the violations of law and unscrupulous measures. Other than the fact of moderation, the republicans did not feel that the full possible support could be given the committee of one hundred, which is now at work preparing for the discovery and punishment of offenders against the law. As there was no time to hold a meeting, a meeting the crowd immediately dispersed. A police authority had noted of the proposed indignation meeting, and fearing that it would result in a riot, held a special hall to denounce the riotous trial. When the mob burned the court house, they strengthened the force and used all precaution to meet such a result. The holding of an indignation meeting had disengaged Mayor Smith and all who wished to see. But there is a wide-spread feeling that some action should be taken to preserve the purity of the election.

Dakota Democrats.

MICHLIN, Dak., Oct. 15.—The democratic central committee held an all-night secret session last night in this city and formulated an address to the democrats, advising that they take no action regarding the constitution recently framed for South Dakota and separately participated in the election called to adopt the state constitution and elect state officers. They denounce the constitutional movement as unjust to citizens of North Dakota, who were given the same rights as the citizens of South Dakota, and the Standing Rock agency in Dakota, for the Standing Rock agency in Dakota, of which he was an illustrious member and distinguished ornament. Nor was this grief shared by those who were in the household of faith. It extended to all classes and creeds of the community. The great heart of New York has mourned him as well, because this eminently laudable the death of one of its most illustrious sons.

The archbishop then briefly sketched the cardinal's life and touched upon a few salient features in his long and eventful career.

CARDINAL MCLOSKEY'S BURIAL.

Grand and Imposing Ceremonies Attending the Last Sad Rites—The Eloquent Funeral Sermon.

Cardinal McCloskey's Funeral.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—[Special to the Bee.]—The Herald's Washington special says:

"The white house was the attraction for a number of people to-day. Over a dozen senators were among those who had interviews with the president. The number of prominent callers were also somewhat larger than usual. New York was very strongly represented. Mr. Hodges of Haverstraw, and Joseph W. Kay, of Brooklyn, presented the president some resolutions adopted by the Grand Army of the Republic, the Veterans' Rights association. The resolutions recommended that the soldiers should have preference in not only retaining offices now held by them, but in securing others. Just before the president came down to hold the usual afternoon reception in the east room, it was noticed that Miss Zobelski, who claims to be the grand niece of Count Pulaski, was among those seated in the east room. Miss Zobelski is regarded as a mild kind of a nutmeg and habanera at any time to create a scandal. She was a number of years with some kind of a claim against the government, and well known to almost every one who has business about the capitol. She looks gaunt and perfectly thin. She knew the exact nature of the east room. So to get her out of the east room as quickly as possible, Doorkeeper Dennis sent a lady after her to invite her to examine the house. She was very considerate, but insisted on keeping her in the room until the reception was over. The old body of the cardinal had been placed in the mahogany coffin prepared for his reception. The heavy drapery purple-bordered with yellow fringe hung over the casket. Red and gold.

In this order they continued for the first quarter of a mile. Hanlan and Lee gradually increasing their lead until nearly a quarter of a length gained. Then Courtney turned to come to shore to work and the crew kept the same relative distance to the half mile. From this on both crews seemed to be pulling for all they were worth. THE FUNERAL SERMON.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The sermon at the funeral of Cardinal McCloskey this morning at the cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, Baltimore. The text of the sermon was Ecclesiastes v: "These words spoken originally of Aaron," said the speaker, "may be fittingly applied to the great high priest who modelled himself after Aaron, and was also chosen out of all men living to fill the highest ecclesiastical position in this nation that he might teach Jacob his people and give light to Israel in his afflictions." The sacred text refers to a fold signature. They symbolized in the eyes of the people the spiritual dignity and authority of the pontiff. Hence the term "interior ornaments of virtue with which he should be adorned, and without which the most precious ornaments lose their value." The cardinal's robes of cardinal red remind you of an angel in purity of which he was raised. They remind him of the garments of innocence worn by his Divine Master, and crimsoned with his precious blood, necessary that he lay down his life for the faith. The cardinal's death has been sorrow to the universal church as well as the church in America and New York.
