Sunday Services.

The services at the various churches throughout the city were well attended both morning and evening. Yesterday was missionary Sunday at Trinity cathedral. In the evening the services were conducted by Bishop Worthington. He preached an eloquent discourse from I Peter, 4:3, "And above all things have charity among yourselves; for charity shall cover a multitude of sins."

Showing that this idea of the text was a completely erroneous one, the speaker pointed out that the charity which covers sins is Christ, whose intercession saves us from the wrath of God. It is a curious thing that in every passage of scripture the word "Christ" is invariably used to denote that charity which covers our sins. His accountability protects us from the results of our evil deeds. When we think of the many sins which Christ will cover at the judgment day, that must be our conception of His love for us. Truly the great love of Christ outstretches all the mountain of guilt.

We also can be the instrument of covering the sins of our fellow man. God may make us the humble instrument of an erring fellow creature's conversion to the truths of the gospel—to shield, in the grace of charity, the sins of a fellow man from the divine sight. Sins can be hidden, but they can also be exposed. We should be careful, very careful, how we expose one another's sins. Very seldom should we uncover the misdeeds of a fellow man, unless we do so tenderly. It is the lowest talent to see the wrong points in any one's character—it is unworthy of any good heart to point them out and discuss them. Beloved, our mission, wherever we are, is to be a "coverer of sins." If we know anything to the detriment of any one, let us keep it silently, to be mentioned, if necessary, religiously, kindly, charitably. More, we do not do to some poor soul a better thing than to hide a sin, or to keep it a hidden place where it may hide its shame from the world?

The bishop closed his sermon with the earnest supplication that the grace of charity might dawn into the heart of each one of his listeners.

At Unity last night, Rev. W. E. Copeland delivered an interesting practical lecture on "The Way to Peace." At the First M. E. church yesterday, the pastor, Rev. McKaig, took as his subject, "Forgiving one another," Matt. 6, 14 and 15.

The regular lecture of the series, "Common Sense in Religion," Rev. W. J. Harsha, of the First Presbyterian church, devoted to a discussion of the topic "Is the Gospel Action or Inaction?" The Y. M. C. A. gospel meeting yesterday afternoon was conducted by Mr. C. A. Kinkel, who discussed on the subject "Christian Liberty."

At the game yesterday afternoon was "immense"—in point of attendance. There were probably 1,500 or 2,000 people on the grounds when time was called, and before the fifth inning had been reached most of them had left their seats and swarmed about the diamond—greatly to the disgust of the special policemen, who had been appointed to guard the "beauties."

The crowd was, as a rule, good-natured and orderly, but a serious outbreak was witnessed at one time when an eye-glassed, short-sighted, light-panted dude walked up to the players' bench and commenced to talk to the fair short stop, with the evident intention of showing the public that he could make an "impression." Loud cries of "Mob him! Mob him!" were taken up and received on all sides, and a forward rush was made. By dint of strenuous effort, the short stop managed to keep back the throngs long enough to allow the dude to pass and make his escape through a crack in the fence.

Aside from his being a thoroughly ludicrous exhibition, the game was of no account. The girls clearly demonstrated their inability to play ball a little bit, while the boys showed their good nature by allowing their fair opponents every possible privilege—such as pitching them droppers, allowing them to strike a dozen times or so, etc. One girl, the valiant second basist, did so far forward herself as to try to catch a ball, but made an ignominious failure, and was fined by the captain for overstepping the bounds of propriety and prudence.

For nine weary innings the game dragged along, the result being a score was 19 to 13 in favor of the "U. P. S."

Below is the authentic score:

Table with columns for AB, R, H, B, O, A, E and rows for various players like Holmes, Emerson, Bishop, Vernon, Rich, Lawrence, Wheeler, Fieser, etc.

By innings: 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9. Females: 0 2 1 0 5 0 0 0 13. Passed balls—Bandle 4, Bolles 4.

Witch-its—Van Dyke 8, Emerson 55. Struck out—O'Brien 14, Emerson 11. Based on balls—O'Brien 16, Emerson 10.

Escaped and Captured. Tim Driscoll, who was serving a sentence at the county jail for taking a horse and buggy from his employer, Mr. Coe, a few days ago, escaped Saturday. He was employed at the court house, sweeping out the halls, when he eluded the guard and sneaked out of the building. All efforts to find him Saturday proved unavailing.

Last evening, about 6 o'clock, William Fitch, of the firm of Guy & Fitch, drove to the corner of Dodge and Fifteenth streets and alighted from his buggy. After trying his horse he stepped into the postoffice building to mail a letter, and when he returned both horse and buggy were gone. The tie-strap with which the horse had been secured had been detached from the bridle and left dangling from the post. He immediately reported the matter to the police, and Officer Cormick was detailed to work up the case.

Shortly after Fitch announced his loss, word was received from Mrs. Coe's residence, near Thirty-eighth and Farnam, that Driscoll, the escaped jail bird, was there with a strange man and a buggy. Deputy Sheriff Crowell was informed of the fact, and in company with Officer Cormick went to Coe's house. When they arrived there Driscoll had driven away. The officers, however, succeeded in tracking him, and late in the evening found Fitch's horse and buggy at Culver's stables, near the driving park, where Driscoll had left them. The buggy was found almost completely demolished, and the horse showed signs of hard usage.

Dr. McNamara was born near Belfast, Ireland, sixty-four years ago, and came to this country when quite young. He was taken into the family of Dr. Muhlenberg, of New York, and by him was given an education. He then commenced his work as a minister of the gospel, choosing a missionary life in Illinois, Wisconsin, Kansas and Nebraska. During the war he was a chaplain in the union army and was a staunch union advocate. He was prominent in Kansas during the border ruffian troubles. Returning from the war he resumed charge of his parish, and previously coming to Nebraska in 1870, he was located at Waukegan, Ill., La Crosse, Wis., Fond du Lac, Wis., Whitewater, and other points in Wisconsin. In that year he came here and soon afterwards took charge of Nebraska college. A year ago he went to North Platte where he is rector of the Church of Our Savior.

Death of John H. Quinn. A telegram received Saturday brought to his many friends in Omaha the sad and startling intelligence of the death of John H. Quinn, Esq., at the home of his parents in Davenport, Iowa. Death occurred on Saturday morning at 1 o'clock, after a brief illness from diphtheria.

Information reached police headquarters yesterday which led the police to believe that a murder had been committed in this city Saturday evening. A well-known colored man came to the jail early in the morning and informed Roundsman Matza that the evening before, while passing along Cuming street, he had overheard two individuals talking in a low tone. Enough of their conversation reached his ears to arouse his curiosity and he accordingly secured a position near them where he could overhear their conversation. From parts of the conversation which he heard he gathered the information that one of the men had either seen a man killed or assisted in killing a man on the river bottoms at the foot of Grace street. The man who was to be overheard, the colored man was unable to tell, as when he found out the nature of their conversation he quickly left them, not caring to be discovered while acting as eavesdropper for fear that they would do him personal violence.

On receipt of the information, Roundsman Matza, in company with Officer Cowles, went to the scene of the alleged murder but was unable to discover any traces of the crime. A careful search was made of the whole neighborhood, and those living in the vicinity were closely questioned. The information was developed that a shot had been heard Saturday night, but as no disturbance followed it had not been investigated. Ignorance was professed as to the cause of the shot or who fired it. It had been heard, however, by nearly all the residents, only one or two asserting that no shot had been fired.

If a murder had been committed, the police are very much surprised as to what traces of the crime have been so quickly removed. The colored man who informed the officers of what he had heard has a reputation for integrity and veracity, and undoubtedly told his story in good faith.

A clew has been found which, it is thought, will clear up the mystery, and the officers are now working on this end of the matter with a view to bringing the guilty parties (if guilty parties there are) to justice.

The Democratic Convention. The council chamber of the city hall was crowded to its utmost capacity Saturday afternoon with as motley a crowd as ever attended a political gathering in this city. The hall of the democratic county convention occupied the space inside the railing, while the balance of the available space was held by the henchmen of the various candidates who had been appointed to be present to the convention. More numerous than all the rest were the supporters of Pat Ford for sheriff, and they manifested their preferences in boisterous and noisy shouts. They also represented the "great unwashed," although occasionally there was to be found among them members of the party who, by word and action, indicated their disgust at the existing state of affairs.

The convention was called to order by John McShane, chairman of the county central committee. Charles Kaufman was chosen chairman and James McShane secretary. The following are the credentials as appointed as follows: Pat Desmond, A. E. Cozzogoli, Thomas H. Daley, Julius Meyer and A. W. Moore. An absence of half an hour was reported by several properly accredited delegates present. There was a contest in Saratoga precinct, and both delegations were admitted, each member being allowed a half vote.

After a short struggle as to the nomination which should be first in order, it was resolved to commence with county commissioner. Richard O'Reilly, the present incumbent, was named. The nominations closed, and he was made the nominee of the convention by acclamation.

There were six nominations for sheriff—Patrick Ford, Hendrick, William Snowden, James Winspear, Col. F. G. Floyd and Louis McCoy. Three ballots were necessary to a choice, the first ballot resulting Ford 27, Winspear 9, Grobo 27, McCoy 5, Floyd 1, Hendrick 1.

For treasurer, Gustave Benke was nominated by acclamation. He, however, refused to accept, and B. F. Madsen was made the nominee of the convention by a viva voce vote.

There were two nominations for clerk, Gustave Benke and T. A. Megeath. The latter, on motion, was nominated by acclamation.

John C. Drexel, the present coroner, was renominated for that office by acclamation.

For judge, Gustave Benke was nominated by acclamation, but upon his refusal to accept, W. S. Shuman was made the nominee. For county surveyor, William Norris was nominated, as was also J. J. Points for superintendent of public instruction.

Nominations for justices of the peace were then made by the delegates from the three judicial districts. In the first district Charles Branding was the successful candidate, beating his opponent, Judge Andrew, by one vote. In the second district, there were three contestants—August Weiss, Constantine Smythe and John O'Connell. After several ballots Judge Weiss received the nomination. Edmund Bartlett was nominated in the third district.

The convention then appointed the county central committee and adjourned.

Death of Dr. McNamara. News was received in Omaha Saturday evening of the death at North Platte of Rev. John McNamara, D. D., which occurred at that place at 5:30 o'clock that afternoon from a stroke of paralysis.

Dr. McNamara was a widely known and honored clergyman of the Episcopal church, and the sad intelligence of his death was received by all who knew him with the deepest regret. The first warning of the disease which terminated his useful career was last August, when he suffered a slight stroke of paralysis. He, however, recovered sufficiently to resume his church work, and hoped for a complete recovery. Three weeks ago yesterday, while in his pulpit, he suddenly lost the use of his eyes, and came to this city for medical treatment. While here he visited his daughter, Mrs. S. D. Barklow, who is in the city, and she, in turn, visited him, but nothing but rest could help his eyes, he returned to his home in North Platte. Saturday he suffered another paralytic stroke, which proved fatal. Final arrangements were Saturday completed for series of races to be run between D. J. Ross, of this city, and John Hourihan, of Boston, Mass. The races are for long distances—twenty-five and ten miles—and will be on the 7th, 14th and 21st respectively of next month. Hourihan is backed by Dennis Cunningham and Ross by Jerome Pentzel. The races will be run for $250 a side and the long-distance championship of America.

Hourihan is a young Irishman who is the long-distance champion of America and has spent the summer in Colorado where he was not beaten in some eight or ten races which he entered. Ross is well known in this city and country as a sprinter and won several races of endurance and speed. H. B. Kennedy has been chosen as final stakeholder. The place of running has not yet been selected, but in all probability, if the weather is too cold, Crouse's hall will be selected.

Contracts Awarded. A special meeting of the city council was held last evening to consider the proposition made by the county commissioners in reference to extending the time for grading the streets around the court house to May 1st.

The following were the contractors accepted with the understanding that if the work could not be completed by that time, an extension would be granted until the 1st of June.

The following contracts were then awarded: To Olson & Falconer, for grading Hurt street from Twenty-third to a point 300 yards north of Division at 13 cents per cubic yard; to Stahl & Hamberg, for grading, north street from Paul to Grace, at 14 cents per cubic yard; to E. E. Callahan, for grading Harney street from Seventeenth to Twentieth and the cross streets between Farnam and Howard at 15 cents per cubic yard.

Prisoners at the Bar. The prisoners to be tried at the coming term of the district court were arraigned before Judge Neville Saturday morning. The following were the culprits: John Harris, burglary, larceny, robbery; William Wilson, receiving stolen goods; Henry Meyers, grand larceny; Charles Wood, grand larceny; John Kelly, assault with intent to murder; Thomas O'Brien and James Manning, grand larceny; W. S. Phelps, assault with intent to kill; John McClelland, burglary, set for Wednesday; McKenna and Brennan, robbery; Frank Wood vs. Charles Mason, bastardy; Lulu Cornish vs. Albert Green, bastardy.

All pleaded "not guilty," with the exception of John Harris, who entered a plea of guilty of "grand larceny," in place of that of "burglary."

A Sensation Spotted. Detectives have been working for the past day or so upon a mystery which was cleared up Saturday, and turned out not to be so very mysterious after all. Mrs. Hilda Larson, a Swedish woman, secured some weeks ago an insurance benefit of $1,000 on the death of her husband from the Scandinavian Brotherhood. On Wednesday before last, she disappeared. It was supposed that she had been abducted with the money, by some sinister individual, and for a time there was considerable excitement over the matter. Detective Emery, who has examined the case thoroughly, however, has discovered that Mrs. Larson left last week for New York, whence she expects to sail for the old country.

The Watchman Changes Hands. The Nebraska Watchman announced a change of proprietors last week. Mr. T. J. Fitzmorris, having decided to remain with the BEE, has sold the paper to the Nebraska Watchman Publishing company, and the present issue is published for the new management. The gentleman composing the company are trained journalists, having filled creditably positions of the highest responsibility on the Omaha press. Under their careful management the Watchman will take high rank as a local family newspaper, and continue to wield an influence for good second to no weekly paper in the state.

Printers to Give a Ball. At the meeting of the Omaha typographical union yesterday afternoon it was decided to give a grand ball on Thanksgiving eve, and a committee appointed to take the affair in hand. The gentlemen composing the committee are and I propose to spend it right here in Canada. Smith further intimated his intention of opening up gambling rooms a few months hence in one of the larger cities of the province.

Gone After Game. The annual hunt of the Omaha Gun Club occurs to-morrow, and yesterday a number of the members started for the lands where game abounds. They went prepared to capture any wild creature which may fall in their path, from a mouse to a grizzly bear. Others will leave this morning. To-morrow will be spent by the whole party in the search of prey, and they will then return to Omaha and count their captures Wednesday evening. The following are the gentlemen composing the outfit, and the fields where they will slay the denizens of field and forest: Dr. Warley W. H. S. Hughes; destination, Cozad; George Kay, Frank Parmelee; destination, Elm Creek; C. B. Lane, J. J. Hardin, S. C. Nash; destination, Seligler; Ed. Leeder, Prof. Strausberger, Ichener; destination, Waterloo; Thomas Cotter, H. B. Kennedy; destination, Stillwater; Dr. Warley W. H. S. Hughes; destination, McPaul, Iowa; George Smith, Eugene Finger; destination, Missouri Valley.

Suicide by Hanging. The body of Frederick Flohr, native of Hanover, Germany, was found Saturday morning hanging from a small tree on the premises known as Osage Orange, a half mile from Hanscom park. He had tied an old suspender about his neck and fastened the end to the limb of a small tree, threw his weight upon the cord and evidently strangled to death. On the fence he wrote a statement to the effect that he was poor, out of work and unable to support his wife and two children. The coroner was notified, and the body cut down and taken to Drexel & Madsen's undertaking establishment, where an inquest was held. The jury returned a verdict of suicide.

Flohr was 72 years old, and resided near the corner of Twenty-second and Prospect streets. He was in comfortable circumstances. He leaves a wife and two children. The funeral takes place this afternoon at 2 o'clock from Drexel & Madsen's, the body being interred at Prospect Hill cemetery.

The Approach of Age. From the Whitehall Review: The approach of age shows itself about the eyes. Lines come, faintly at first, then deeper, until the incipient crows' feet are indicated, developed and revealed. The woman who, looking in her glass, sees these fatal lines diverging from the outer corner of her eyes, knows that she has reached an era in her life. She recognizes it with a sigh if she be a virgin, a heavy, gloomy shadow if she be a widow, a deadly, ghastly specter if she be a widow with a child. It is the sign of age, and she who has reached this point, should be careful to preserve her eyes.

can live her own youth over again. But it can never be a gray smile, none of us men or women, like to feel youth—that precious possession—slipping away from us. But we should never be on the lookout for crows' feet or gray hairs. Looking for them is sure to bring them, for thinking about them brings them. Tears form a part of the language of the eye, which is eloquent enough when used sparingly, and which should be sparingly used for other reasons than that of adding to their mute eloquence. Tears are a disfiguring expression of emotion, and those who get in the habit of weeping over every small vexation do much to acquire a careworn, miserable expression, and are sure to look old before their time. Excessive weeping has been known not only to injure, but actually to destroy the sight. Few women look pretty, or even interesting, in tears, though it has long been a pleasant fiction in poetry and romance to suppose that they do. Many women, some men, most children, make most disfiguring and disgusting grimaces while crying, and a lady who thinks she can work upon a man's feelings by a liberal display of tears should carefully study a becoming mode of producing them before her looking-glass. Grimaces soften no heart, and tears, accompanied by the usual distortions, have a hardening effect if not a visible one. In a prettily written work, now probably out of print, purporting to be the story of the life of one of Milton's wives, the author makes the poet say of his wife's eyes, after crying, that they resemble "the sun's clear shining after the rain," a very pretty simile, indeed, but during the rain itself the observer is not inclined to be complimentary.
