Sunday Services. The services at the various churches throughout the city were well attended both morning and evening.

Yesterday was missionary Sunday at Trinity cathedral. In the evening the services were conducted by Bishop Worthington. He preached an eloquent discourse from I Peter, 4:3. "And above all things have charity among yourselves; for charity shall cover a multitude of sins."

"People of all ages," said the speaker, "have thought that a man's charities are a set-off to his sins. Many a man catching at this straw, when he has no use for his money, has left it to some church, some seminary, some charitable institution, in the hope that this act would cover his multitude of sins."

Showing that this idea of the text was a clearly erroneous one, the speaker pointed out that the charity which covers sins is Christ, whose intercession saves us from the wrath of God. It is a curious thing that in every passage of scripture the word "Christ" can be substituted for that of charity—Christ's charity, and it is he who covers our sins. His accountability protects us from the results of our evil deeds. When we think of the many sins which Christ will not forgive, how can we think of any other day, which must be our conception of His love for us. Truly the great love of Christ outstretches all the mountain of guilt.

We also can be the instrument of covering the sins of our fellow man. God may make us the humble instrument of an erring fellow creature's conversion to the truths of the gospel—to shield, in the grace of charity, the sins of a fellow man from the divine sight, sins which are hidden, but they can also be exposed. We should be careful, very, very careful, how we expose one another's sins. Very seldom should we uncover the misdeeds of a man, and then we must do so tenderly. It is the lowest talent to see the wrong points in any one's character—it is unworthy of any good heart to point them out and discuss them. Beloved, our mission, wherever we are, is to be a "coverer of sins." If we know anything to the detriment of any one, let us keep it silent, to be mentioned, if necessary, religiously, kindly, charitably. More, we do not do to some poor soul a reference—a hiding place where it may hide its shame from the world?

The bishop closed his sermon with the earnest supplication that the grace of God might shine into the heart of each one of his listeners.

At Unity last night, Rev. W. E. Copeland delivered an interesting practical lecture on "The Value of the Sabbath." At the First M. E. church yesterday, the pastor, Rev. McKaig, took as his subject, "Forgiving one another," Matt. 6, 1 and 15.

The regular lecture of the series, "Common Sense in Religion," Rev. W. J. Harsha, of the First Presbyterian church, devoted to a discussion of the topic "Is the Gospel Action or Inaction?"

The Y. M. C. A. gospel meeting of yesterday afternoon was conducted by Mr. G. A. Kinkel, who discoursed on the subject "Christian Liberty."

Females at the Bat. The game yesterday afternoon was "immense" in point of attendance. There were probably 1,500 or 2,000 people on the grounds when time was called, all of them drawn to the spot doubtless by an over-punning curiosity to see the belles of the diamond play ball. A long distance sight at the game was not enough for the majority of the audience, and before the fifth inning had been reached most of them had left their seats and swarmed about the diamond—greatly to the disgust of the umpire and the men who had been appointed to guard the "beauties."

The crowd was, as a rule, good-natured and orderly, but a serious outbreak was threatened at one time when an eye-glassed, short-coated, light-panted, dude walked up to the players bench and commenced to talk to the fair short stop, with the evident intention of showing her his teeth. Loud cries of "Mob him! Mob him!" were taken up and echoed on all sides, and a forward rush was made. By dint of strenuous effort, the umpire and the men managed to keep back the throngs long enough to allow the dude to pass and make his escape through a crack in the fence.

After a loss of his being a thoroughly ludicrous exhibition, the game was of no account. The girls clearly demonstrated their inability to play ball a little bit, while the boys showed their good nature by allowing their fair opponents every possible privilege—such as pitching their droppers, allowing them to strike a dozen times or so, etc. One girl, the valiant second base, did so far forget herself as to try to catch a ball, but made an ignominious failure, and was fined by the captain for overstepping the bounds of propriety and prudence.

For nine weary innings the game dragged along, the result being a score was 19 to 13 in favor of the "U. P.'s."

19 to 13 is the authentic score.

Escaped and Captured. Tim Driscoll, who was serving a sentence at the county jail for taking a horse and buggy from his employer, Mr. Coe, a few days ago, escaped Saturday. He was employed at the court house, sweeping out the halls, when he eluded the guard and sneaked out of the building. All efforts to find him Saturday proved unavailing.

Last evening, about 6 o'clock, William

Fitch, of the firm of Guy & Fitch, drove to the corner of Dodge and Fifteenth streets and alighted from his buggy. After tying his horse he stepped into the postoffice building to mail a letter, and when he returned both horse and buggy were gone. The tie-strap with which the horse had been secured had been detached from the bridle and left dangling from the post. He immediately reported the matter to the police, and Officer Cornick was detailed to work up the case.

Shortly after Fitch announced his loss, word was received from Mrs. Coe's residence, near Thirty-eighth and Farnam, that Driscoll, the escaped jail bird, was there with a strange horse and buggy. Deputy Sheriff Crowell was informed of the fact, and in company with Officer Cornick went to Coe's house. When they arrived there Driscoll had driven away. The officers, however, succeeded in tracking him, and late in the evening found Fitch's horse and buggy at Culver's stables, near the driving park, where Driscoll had left them. The buggy was almost totally demolished, and the horse showed signs of hard usage.

The officers continued their search for Driscoll, and shortly after midnight found him at the Merchants' Express stable, corner of Fourteenth and Leavenworth streets, where he was sequestered. He was taken into custody and landed in the county jail shortly after 1 o'clock this morning, having been a free man for thirty-six hours. He will probably pay dearly for his short liberty.

An officer from Council Bluffs arrived in the city last evening, supposing Driscoll to be the man who had stolen a horse and buggy in the Bluffs yesterday afternoon in a manner similar to the Fitch case. Driscoll, however, is probably not the man wanted.

Was a Murder Committed? Information reached police headquarters yesterday which led the police to believe that a murder had been committed in this city Saturday evening. A well-known colored man came to the jail early in the morning and informed Roundman Matza that the evening before, while passing along Cuming street, he had overheard two individuals talking in a low tone. Enough of their conversation reached his ears to arouse his curiosity and he accordingly secured a position near them where he could overhear without being discovered. From parts of the conversation which he heard he gathered the information that one of the men had either seen a man killed or assisted in killing a man on the river bottoms at the foot of Grace street. Who the men were that he overheard, the colored man was unable to tell, as when he found out the nature of their conversation he quickly left them, not caring to be discovered as an eavesdropper for fear that they would do him personal violence.

On receipt of the information, Roundman Matza, in company with Officer Rowles, proceeded to the scene of the alleged murder but was unable to discover any traces of the crime. A careful search was made of the whole neighborhood, and those living in the vicinity were closely questioned. The information was developed that a shot had been heard Saturday night, but as no disturbance followed it had not been investigated. Ignorance was professed as to the cause of the shot or who fired it. It had been heard, however, by nearly all the residents, only one or two asserting that no shot had been fired.

If a murder has been committed the police are very much mystified as to what has become of the body and how all traces of the crime have been so quickly removed. The colored man who informed the officers of what he had heard has a reputation for integrity and veracity, and undoubtedly told his story in good faith.

A clue has been found which, it is thought, will clear up the mystery, and the officers are now working on the case. Every endeavor will be made to bring guilty parties (if guilty parties there are) to justice.

The Democratic Convention. The council chamber of the city hall was crowded to its utmost capacity Saturday afternoon with as motley a crew as ever attended a political gathering in this city. The delegates to the democratic county convention occupied the space inside the railing, while the balance of the available space was held by the "bohemians" of the city, many of whose names were to be presented to the convention. More numerous than all the rest were the supporters of Pat Ford for sheriff, and they manifested their preferences in boisterous and drunken shouts. They loudly represented the "great unwashed," although occasionally there was to be found among them members of the party who, by word and action, indicated their disgust at the existing state of affairs.

The convention was called to order by John McShane, chairman of the county central committee. Charles Kaufman was chosen chairman of the convention, and secretary, and the committee on credentials was appointed as follows: Pat Desmond, A. E. Coggeshall, Thomas H. Dalley, Julius Meyer and A. W. Moore. After a short session, and after the reported seventy-six properly accredited delegates present. There was a contest in Saratoga precinct, and both delegations were admitted, each member being allowed a half vote.

After a short wrangle as to the nomination which should be first in order, it was resolved to commence with county commissioner. Richard O'Keefe, the present incumbent, was named, and the nominations closed, and he was made the nominee of the convention by acclamation.

There were six nominations for sheriff—Patrick Ford, Henry Grobe, William Snowden, James Winspear, Col. E. G. Floyd and Louis McCoy. Three ballots were necessary to a choice, the first ballot resulting Ford 9, Winspear 9, Grobe 27. McCoy 2. Floyd and Grobe had a double confusion the second ballot was taken, Ford gaining two votes. On the third ballot, Ford received forty-one, two votes more than a majority, and was declared the nominee.

For treasurer, Gustavo Bencke was nominated by acclamation. He, however, refused to accept, and B. F. Madsen was made the nominee of the convention by the vote cast.

There were two nominations for clerk, Gustavo Bencke and T. A. McGeath. The latter, on motion, was nominated by acclamation.

Judge Drexel, the present coroner, was renominated for that office by acclamation.

Dr. McNamara was born near Belfast, Ireland, sixty-four years ago, and came to this country when quite young. He was taken into the family of Dr. Muhlberg, of New York, and by him was given an education. He then commenced his work as a minister of the gospel, choosing a missionary life in Illinois, Wisconsin, Kansas and Nebraska. During the war he was a chaplain in the union army and was a staunch Unionist. He was prominent in Kansas during the border ruffian troubles. Returning from the war he resumed charge of his parish, and previous to coming to Nebraska in 1870, he was located at Wakekan, Ill., Lake Geneva, Fond du Lac, Whitewater, and other points in Wisconsin. In that year he came here and soon afterwards took charge of Nebraska college. A year ago he went to North Platte where he was rector of the Church of Our Savior.

Death of John H. Quinn. A telegram received Saturday brought to his many friends in Omaha the sad and startling intelligence of the death of John H. Quinn, Esq., at the home of his parents in Davenport, Iowa. Death occurred on Saturday morning at 1 o'clock, after a brief illness from diphtheria.

About two weeks ago Mr. Quinn received a telegram calling him home to attend the funeral of a beloved sister who had died after a brief illness of three days. The shock was a terrible one to him. Diphtheria had taken hold of almost every one of Mr. Quinn's sisters and brothers, and a few days after the burial of the sister, a younger brother was carried from the world by the same attack. He and a few days of hovering between life and death relief from earthly cares came as above announced.

John H. Quinn was born in Davenport, Iowa, and was in his twenty-sixth year. After attending the schools of his native city, he went through a course at the Jesuit college at Cape Girardeau, Mo. He then entered the law office of Judge James Grant, and after two years of study was admitted to the bar. A year and a half ago he located in Omaha, and was steadily winning his way into an excellent legal practice. His uniform courtesy, gentlemanly manner, quiet and unassuming disposition, and above all his purity of character and devotion to his religious faith, won for him many warm and fast friends. The writer knew him as an intimate friend of John Quinn from childhood, and among all the associates of his youth he can point to no one who has gone to his eternal resting place with the unblemished reputation that he left behind him.

The courts adjourned Saturday as soon as the intelligence of his death was received, and the members of the bar arranged to take suitable action. Saturday afternoon next the courts will listen to eulogies on the life and character of the deceased.

Contracts Awarded. A special meeting of the city council was held last evening to consider the proposition made by the county commissioners in reference to extending the time for grading the streets around the court house to May 1st. After considerable discussion the proposition was accepted with the understanding that if the work could not be completed by that time, an extension would be granted until the following October 31st.

The following contracts were then awarded: To Olsen & Falconer, for grading Park street from Twenty-third to a point 300 yards north of Division at 15 cents per cubic yard; to Stahl & Hamill for grading Seventeenth street from Paul to Grace, at 14 cents per cubic yard; to E. E. Callahan, for grading Harney street from Seventeenth to Twentieth and the cross streets between Farnam and Howard at 15 cents per cubic yard.

Prisoners at the Bar. The prisoners to be tried at the coming term of the district court were arraigned before Judge Neville Saturday morning. The following were the culprits: John Kelly, burglary; Frank Martin, alias Dowd, robbery; William Wilson, receiving stolen goods.

Henry Meyers, grand larceny. Charles Wood, grand larceny. Eddie James, grand larceny. John Kelly, assault with intent to maim. Thomas O'Brien and James Manning, grand larceny. W. S. Phelps, assault with intent to kill. John McClelland, burglary, set for Wednesday.

Benjamin and Brennan, robbery. Ben Wood vs. Charles Mason, bastardy. Lulu Cornish vs. Albert Green, bastardy.

All pleaded "not guilty," with the exception of John Harris, who entered a plea of guilty of "grand larceny," in place of that of "burglary."

A Sensation Spotted. Detectives have been working for the past day or so upon a mystery which was cleared up Saturday, and turned out to be so very mysterious after all. Mrs. Hilda Larson, a Swedish woman, secured some weeks ago an insurance benefit of $1,000 on the death of her husband from the Scandinavian Brotherhood, on Wednesday before last, she disappeared. It was supposed that she had been abducted with the money, by some sinister included individual, and for a time there was considerable excitement over the matter. Detective Emery, however, has discovered that Mrs. Larson left to sail for New York, which she informed certain of her friends, she expects to sail for the old country.

The Watchman Changes Hands. The Nebraska Watchman announced a change of proprietors last week. Mr. T. J. Fitzmorris, having decided to remain with the BEE, has sold the paper to the Nebraska Watchman Publishing company, and the present issue is published by the new management. The gentlemen composing the company are trained journalists, having filled creditably positions of the highest responsibility on the Omaha press. Under their careful management the Watchman will, we think, rank as a local family newspaper, and continue to wield an influence for good second to no weekly paper in the state.

Printers to Give a Ball. At the meeting of the Omaha typographical union yesterday afternoon it was decided to give a grand ball on Thanksgiving eve, and a committee appointed to take the affair in hand. The gentlemen composing the committee are

"and I propose to spend it right here in Canada." Smith further intimated his intention of opening up gambling rooms a few months hence in one of the larger cities of the province.

Gone After Game. The annual hunt of the Omaha Gun Club occurs to-morrow, and yesterday a number of the members started for the lands where game abounds. They went prepared to capture any wild creature which may fall in their path, from a moose to a grizzly bear. Others will leave this morning. Tomorrow will be spent by the whole party in the search of prey, and they will then return to Omaha and count their captures Wednesday evening. The following are the gentlemen composing the outfit, and the fields where they will slay the denizens of field and forest:

Dr. Worley, W. H. S. Hughes; destination, Cozay. George Kay, Frank Parmelee; destination, Elm Creek. C. B. Lane, J. J. Hardin, S. C. Nash; destination, Schuyler. Ed. George Smith, Eugene Finger; destination, Missouri Valley.

Suicide by Hanging. The body of Frederick Flohr, native of Hanover, Germany, was found Saturday morning hanging from a small tree on the premises known as Osage Orange, a half mile from Hanscom park. He had tied an old suspender about his neck and fastened the end to the limb of a small tree, threw his weight upon the cord and evidently strangled to death. On the fence near by he wrote a statement to the effect that he was poor, out of work and unable to support his wife and two children. The coroner was notified and he took the body to the morgue, where an inquest was held. The jury returned a verdict of suicide.

Flohr was 72 years old, and resided near the corner of Twenty-second and Pierce streets. He was in comfortable circumstances. He leaves a wife and two children. The funeral takes place this afternoon at 2 o'clock from Drexel & Mall's, the body being interred at Prospect Hill cemetery.

For the American Championship. Final arrangements were Saturday completed for series of races to be run between D. J. Ross, of this city, and John Hourihan, of Boston, Mass. The races are for long distances—twenty-five and ten miles—and will be on the 7th, 14th and 21st respectively of next month. Hourihan is backed by Dennis Cunningham and Ross by Jerome Pentzel. The races will be run for $250 a side and the long-distance championship of America. Hourihan is a young Irishman who is the long-distance champion of America and has spent the summer in Colorado where he was not beaten in some eight or ten races which he entered. Ross is well known in the East as a champion sprinter of wonderful powers of endurance and speed. H. B. Kennedy has been chosen as final stake-holder. The place of running has not yet been selected, but in all probability, if the weather is too cold, Crouse's hall will be selected.

can live her own youth over again. But it can never be a gay smile; one of us, men or women, like to feel youth—that precious possession—slipping away from us. But we should never be on the look-out for crows' feet or gray hairs. Looking for them is sure to bring them, for thinking about them brings them. Tears form a part of the language of the eye, which is eloquent enough when used sparingly, and which should be sparingly used for other reasons than that of adding to their mute eloquence. Tears are a disfiguring expression of emotion, and those who get in the habit of weeping over every small vexation, do much to acquire a careworn, miserable expression, and are sure to look old before their time. Excessive weeping has been known not only to injure, but actually to destroy the sight of young women. Look pretty, or even interesting, in tear-stained eyes though it has long been a pleasant fiction in poetry and romance to suppose that they do. Many women, some men, most children, make most disfiguring and disgusting grimaces while crying, and a lady who thinks she can work upon a man's feelings by a liberal display of tears should carefully study a weeping face, and producing them before her looking glass. Grimaces, sooty heart, and tears, accompanied by the usual distortions, have a hardening effect if not a visible one. In a pretty written work, now probably out of print, purporting to be the story of the life of one of Milton's wives, the author makes the poet say of his wife's eyes, after crying, that they resemble "the sun's clear shining after the rain," a very pretty natural object indeed, but during the rain itself the observer is not inclined to be complimentary.
