"Port" Kirkland's Stooked Ways Revealed by His Absconding.

SUNDAY HUNTING FOR COONS.

A Nice Young Man Seeks a Loan on a Forged Abstract This Week's Sensation at the People's Store -In and About the City.

A New "Port" for Canada.

The report that P. C. Kirkland, known here as "Port" Kirkland, has absconded from Oxford, Kansas, taking with him the funds of the bank there, is causing no little surprise and comment here. He lived here for a number of years, and was closely associated in business with Mr. James Brewster, an old man, who had built up a good business here, and had accumulated considerable means. Kirkland's relatives live near Minneapolis, but he had been with Mr. Brewster since boyhood. He used to drive the delivery wagon, then was given a place in Brewster's store, gradually getting more and more into his confidence, until he trusted him with the most important transactions. When Mr. Brewster went out of the wholesale grocery business here, and went to Kansas, about eighteen months ago, Kirkland went with him. Before leaving here, Kirkland had become engaged in the jewelry business with W. D. Kirkland, a gentleman who is not related to him, although of similar name. The latter Kirkland is a brother of the county auditor, and come here from Milwaukee at his brother's solicitation. "Port" Kirkland had a small stock of jewelry, which he had got from a man named Buchanan, who was at one time in business on Broadway. W. D. Kirkland entered into partnership with "Port," and with this small stock, with a few additions, business was opened up. W. D. Kirkland is a practical jeweler and a good workman. He gave the business his personal attention, sticking closely, working hard, until he has worked up a nice business, and got quite a stock of goods. In the meantime the other Kirkland went to Kansas with Mr. Brewster. of similar name. The latter Kirkland is

Mr. Brewster. Mr. Brewster opened a bank at Oxford. The young man who had been with him so long and in whom he had such confidence, did nearly all the business. few days ago be was missing. He had taken all the cash in the vault, wrapped up a lot of blank notes, marked the package $3,000 and put this in the place. The time lock had been set forty-eight hours ahead, so as to prevent too speedy an examination of the vault. It now appears that the books have been sadly muddled, so that it has been difficult to get, at the exact amount taken. It is suspected that Kirkland has been speculating heavier than was generally thought, and that losing heavily he did not dare to meet the final crash, and hence skipped. In view of this theory it is thought by some that he did not take with him more than two or three thousand dollars. He left an in-valid wife and one child. His wife is a daughter of Mr. Charles Brewster, a wealthy resident of Fort Madison, a brother of Mr. James Brewster.

His absconding caused creditors to begin jumping onto his interest in the jew-elry store here. Mr. Brewster, to secure himself, telegraphed here and had the stock attached. Other creditors of the ouse here then came in and as a result the stock is in the hands of the sheriff This is a hard blow on Mr. Brewster, as he is pretty well advanced in years. It is thought that when everything is ex-amined it will be found that Kirkland has used Mr. Brewster's name on a great deal of paper, perhaps enough to cripple him, if not ruin him.

It is a hard blow to W. D. Kirkland. He has struggled so to build up a business, his wife has stood so nobly by him in his efforts, that to be now called on to face the probability of losing all is a try-ing place in which to put him and his. He cannot tell just what the outcome will be. The finances of the jewelry house were handled by "Port" Kirkland, and the principal accounts were in his pos-session. Just what shape he has them in can not at present be learned. W. D. Kirkland told a Bee man yesterday that he never suspected anything wrong with his partner. The only suspicious cir-cumstance which he can now recall is as tollows: He was lately in Kausas, and called 'Port's' attention to a bill against the house here, of $150. There was necessity of it being paid at oace, and 'Port' made out a draft, en closed it in a letter to the creditor, and dropped it into the box with other mail, in the bank, to be taken to the postoffice. To his surprise he afterwards learned that the draft was not sent. He had written to "Port" about it, since his retero home, but he got no answer. It now seems that it was all a blind, dropping it into the box, and that it must have been taken out afterwards, and the draft appropriated. Aside from this there were no occurrences to arouse his suspicions.

A Coon Hunt.

Charles Crump, a colored man, who works for Keeline & Feit, had a lively Surday Early in the morning he got into a row on Pierce street with Ice Cole and wife a white couple living there The police were sent for in hot haste, and Marshal Guancita and Deputy Bates went to the spot, reaching there just in mne for the finish. The Coles and Crains were arrested. Mr. Keeline, one of Crump's employers, went security for his appearance for trial In the afternoon Crump got on his war paint again. He bor, owed a double barrelled shot gun from a neighbor, Harry Kumball, who works with Crump, and started up onto Parce street to c can out the whole crowd. The report coming to head quarters that he was starting another row, the police went up. When Officer O'Brien arrived Crump had hid the gun in Alex Jennings' house, and had stowed himself away in an outhouse. He was captured, the gun given up by Jennings, and started for the station. On the way he tackled Officer O Brien, striking the policeman a stinging blow He was locked up, and a charge of resisting an officer was added to the others. To day the parties against whom he made threats of shooting are to file their charges.

deceive the sharpest. His father was formerly recorder of Onawa county, where the young man's home still is. Young Bacon has become familiar with abstracts and all the details of real estate transactions, and hence knew just how to go about his scheme. It appears that he forged a complete abstract of certain property in Onawa, signed by the present recorder of that county.

With this and other papers to prove his identity, the nature of the property, etc., he came to this city and sought to get a loan of $350 on a mortgage. The firm upon whom he called took him to the office of J. W. & E. L. Squire, introducing him there. That firm, relying on the fact of the young man being thus introduced, had their suspicions allayed, and devoted their attention mainly to an examination of the papers, the mortgage, etc., having been prepared at the office of the firm who introduced him. The papers all seemed straight, and the firm concluded to grant the loan. Under the strict methods of business which characterize the office it was soon discovered that the abstract was a forgery. One of the firm at once took the trail One of the firm at once took the trail with an officer, and nabbed the fellow in Omaha. By their promptness and care-fulness in the matter they have managed to save themselves from any loss, while the young man has placed himself in rather a gloomy position.

ments over tried in the city is to be made. Eiseman, Rodda & Co., who have made the name of their People's Store so familiar to all, are going to try it. They have kept very closely to their original policy of selling many goods with small profits, rather than few sales at big margins. They have been so successful that their store, which is really a dozen stores in one, has been crowded with purchasers on the dullest days. Now they have decided that they have surely struck on the right track, and as a feather trial they propose to make this week an effort to double their sales. They are to hold a great reduction sale, commencing this morning, and continuing through the entire week. Profits are to be whittled down still closer so that prices will astonish everybody. There are such fre-quent pretensions of closing out sales, etc., that the public has grown a little suspicious, but when this firm make an announcement, the people jump at the bargains offered. The simple reason is that the people have learned that the People's store means business. When a reduction is announced, or special bargains offered, the reductions are actually made, and the big bargains are there. Hence, it is safe to predict that the Peo-ple's store will be throughd with eager buyers this week, and the experiment of doubling sales will prove a grand suc-

In dress goods there is an immense stock, and prices are this week to be from twenty to forty per cent below the usual value. Camels' hair diagonals, which have within thirty days been sold for one dollar, will be offered at sixty cents. Two Sisters.

Don't fail to see the operatta of the Two Sisters, which will be presented the second evening of the Catholic fair, Tuesday, November 24, at Dohany's opera house. The orchestra is replete with many beautiful choruses, duetts and solos, in which over one hundred misses and children participate. A party of school children assemble to choose and crown a Queen of May. During the joyous festivities a band of gypsiles make their appearance, having among their number a child stolen by them who afterwards proved to be the long lost sister of the newly chosen Queen of May, who discovers her at this time. Rejoicing is entered into by the whole chorus closing by crowning both sisters Queens of May. Tickets only twenty-live cents admitting to both the opera house and Masonic tenude.

The Opera House License. The filing of a complaint against Mr. Dohany for not taking out a license for his opera house seems like a bit of spite work. Not long since a snide band of female ball players were allowed to give a series of street and hall entertainments without paying a dollar of license. They put a little advertisement in the mayor's campaign paper. Mr. Dohany has hved here for years lins spent his money here, has built an opera house which is a credit to the city, has taken upon his shoulders a heavy finanilal burden in order to give Finest display of meershaum and smokers' goods for holiday gifts.
