row at Ayoca, which occurred on Thanks giving day. The further details are now learned, and the latter results. Mr.

James Graham is a wealthy and rather prominent farmer who has lived near that place for some years. It appears that he and his wife have not been living happily together, particularly of late.

He seems to have an almost uncontrollable temper, which flashes up on short notice. She had applied for a divorce, and he had been endeavoring to induce her to drop the matter. He gave her until Thanksgiving dinner to decide whether she would join in a treaty of peace. The hour having arrived, the matter was the so badly injured, however, as was at the

It is now learned that Graham and his wife have come to an understanding, by which she is given certain property, in-cluding the homestead, while he has moved into Avoca. The separation thus made, with the division of the property, will probably end the matter, and the divorce which she is seeking will prob-ably be allowed by him by default, that hour having arrived, the matter was the subject of talk at the table, and she de-clared she would not drop the proceed-ings. At this he is said to have become very angry and began to use abusive language. His son, Walter, a lad of about 16, protested against his mother being talked to in any such man-ner, and declared he would not stand it. The ire of the father and husband was then aroused against the son, a stormy scene ensued, closing with the elder Graham picking up a pitcher and hurling it at his son. It struck the boy on the side of the head, felling him to the floor, while the blood fairly gushed from the wound. The father, startled to the floor, while the blood fairly gushed from the wound. The father, startled by the result of the blow, felt the deepest remorse, and hurriedly picked up the lad, placed him on a couch and staunched the blood. The report flew over town that the son's skull had been fractured, and that he might die. Graham was ar-rested and gave $400 bail for his appear-ance.
