Under reports are to the effect that Mrs. C. S. Clark died in Florida on Friday evening last. The report calls forth the tenderest sympathy for Mr. Clark, who has hosts of friends here.

The storm made such trouble with the wires that the communication between Council Bluffs and Omaha last night was not very satisfactory for supplying the readers with Council Bluffs news.

The Congregational fair proved quite a success, despite the storm of yesterday. There was a large number who took dinner with the ladies, and the entertainment last evening passed off nicely.

The police have nabbed a man whom they thought answered the description of the fellow who recently robbed Mrs. Tiekner. The called at the station to look at him, but declared he was not the man.

The mules, who furnish locomotive power to the main street car, seem to know what the city wants better than the company itself. They took a run up the abandoned track above the Ogden on Broadway, taking the empty, driverless car along at a steady gait for a block or so.

At the Congregational church to-morrow morning there will be services as usual. Preaching by the pastor. Subject, "Encouraging Words." In the evening there will be a union service in the Baptist church, in which the Congregational, Presbyterian and Baptist churches and pastors will join.

The young business man who figured so prominently in the recent Pearl street sensation is not a member of any church in the city much is he an official. Those who are so eager to drag the churches into such scandals should have the manliness to correct any statements they have made in this regard.

Mr. William Ladd is making a move for organizing a merchant police force. Such a force is needed here greatly. Many stores and offices can hardly afford to employ a special watchman, but by clubbing together with others they can secure the needed protection by paying even a small sum weekly. The merchant police would protect against theft from fires, snatches, burglars, and night prowlers. The expense is light when thus divided among many, and the city and the property of the subscribers is given more than enough additional security to warrant the expenditure. It is to be hoped that the move will meet with sufficient encouragement to warrant Mr. Ladd in having a goodly number of men on duty.

Death of Mrs. Mueller.

The death of Mrs. J. Mueller, wife of the well-known music dealer, occurred about 2 o'clock yesterday morning, and as the sad news was passed from one to another of the many friends, sorrow and surprise found many expressions of the deepest sympathy. Mrs. Mueller had been in delicate health, with approaching motherhood, but there seemed no occasion for fear, a bright little girl, robust and hearty, being born, when suddenly the mother's life went out. The blow to the family is a peculiarly heavy one. There are a number of children who need the care of such a mother as she. The husband, too, with all his business and financial troubles, needs sorely such a wife as she has proved herself to be. Mrs. Mueller was a noble woman. Her real worth was most realized in the home, to which her strength and time was so faithfully given, but many there are outside of the home circle, who have had opportunities to know what grand womanhood was here. She was active as a member of the Congregational church, and society, and will there be greatly mourned and missed. Her influence has reached out beyond family and church, and this country has lost a noble woman. The many ways by her kindly, true life. The death of such a one carries sorrow into many homes in this city, and the sorrowing husband and motherless children would get comfort even in the fact that the sympathy could be realized through out this city, where the family have lived so long.

A Scorching House.

About 7 o'clock yesterday afternoon there was a blaze at the residence of S. Theodore, No. 908 Fifth avenue. An attempt was made at three different boxes to send in a fire alarm, but only one house company, No. 4, responded. By the time they got there the fire was about put out. The cause was a defective flue, and the damage was mainly to the building, which was owned by Clay Plummer. The furniture was insured with A. C. Goss in the New York Underwriters for $1,500.

Whirl of the Wind.

Yesterday was the worst one for wind which this city has known in years. The gusts began to sweep down from the north at about 4 o'clock in the morning, and kept at their frolicsome work all day, part of the time becoming quite serious, rather than playful. The streets were pelted with well directed foot passes, and the wind was so strong that only as necessary as to get out. What teams there were out seemed to be out only for the purpose of running away. There never was known to be so many runaway horses here before. Whenever the clouds of dust would clear away long enough to give the observer a glimpse of flying horse and scattering wagon could be seen in almost any direction. Near the Ogden house, on upper Broadway, yesterday morning, there were three teams running almost up the street. It seems that one had started from down Broadway, and as they flew along inspired others to break and join in the run. So far as could be learned no serious results followed, the wagon drivers being given some extra work. One horse, belonging to Mr. Davis, was somewhat hurt. The team was standing hitched to a load of wood, when a runaway team struck the wagon, overturning it.

There were a large number of buildings in the city more or less damaged. The large agricultural machinery warehouse of David Bradley & Co. suffered most. The tin roof was torn off, and some of the timbers of the roof, and a portion of the brick cornice and wall blown down. The amount of damage in dollars has not been accurately estimated.

A number of other roofs were injured. There was a large section of the tin roof on the building occupied by Perego & Moore's wholesale stock, which was torn off and hung for a long time over the edge of the building, threatening all passers by on Main street. It finally tore loose, and came crashing down. There were about thirty telegraph and telephone wires stretched on the poles on that side of the street and it was thought that many of these would be broken by the falling of this tin roof, but when it came down it grazed these so that their united strength proved sufficient to prevent any serious breaks. A portion of the tin roof on the building occupied by the American Express company, corner of Broadway and Main street, was torn off, and came down into the alley breaking one of the electric light wires.

Two brick chimneys on Officer & Pusey's bank building came tumbling down, the bricks flying in all directions. One brick struck John Hart on the head as he was passing. It left a bloody wound, and bruised his arm somewhat. A hatchway door blown from the roof of the Shugart block came dashing down toward Main street. Harry Curtis, secretary of the Young Men's Christian association, was passing along there at the time, and a young lady, Miss Jensen, was coming from the opposite direction. The falling hatchway barely missed striking both as they were passing each other.

One of the large transoms in the front of the county auditor's office, in the Masonic building, blew in with a crash, startling the occupants of the office, and narrowly missing some of those at the desks. Another window in the county recorder's office was blown in. A number of the windows of the Bloomer school building were blown in, and the cupola rocked as if it would come down. The pupils in the upper rooms were sent home, and the parents of some of the smaller scholars came after their children and took them home.

One of the large doors of Mr. D. A. Spooner's stable was blown from its hinges, and struck a domestic employed in the family, Miss Anna Johnson. Her collar bone was broken. Her collar bone was broken.

Sad havoc was played with the telephone and telegraphic wires. Frank Vandenberg, while trying to fix some of the telephone wires, was blown off from the pole he had climbed. He fell quite a distance, sustained one ankle, and was badly shaken up. He was able to hobble home, but will find himself pretty lame to-day.

A portion of the brick chimney of Hayes & Gleason's store was blown down into the alley. A wooden structure on the north side of the new Episcopal church was blown to the ground, giving rise to a report that the church had been seriously damaged. A window was blown in at the residence of County Clerk Shea, and numerous small breakages of glass were reported. One of the turrets of the Congregational church was blown in.

The two story carpenter shop of Mr. Lawson was moved from its foundation two or three feet, but no special damage done to the building.

Throughout the lower part of the city the wind had a full sweep. On the bottom haystacks were blown over, out-houses removed, and smaller articles carried hither and thither. At the river the wind, as usual, was still stronger. It was a gale. One man went down to the river with his wagon for a load of willows. The wagon was blown over as if it had been a feather. The wind, as it swept across the bridge, was so strong that it was considered unsafe to run the dummy trains, and they were abandoned after 10 o'clock in the morning. At that time the last run was made from Omaha here. Even then there were not over a dozen who would venture to ride over in the cars. The wind almost lifted the train from the rails.

There was little use trying to use the telephone yesterday. There were thirty-five instruments rendered of no avail. There could be no communication with Omaha by telephone.

The wind did a little mischief at the pump house of the water works. It blew some three-inch oak timbers from a temporary roof on the north side, and these timbers came tumbling down, knocking some of the slate roofing off.

By 5 o'clock the wind had so toned down that the dummy trains were able to make their trips again across the river.

Who is She?

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., Dec. 3.—Editor of the Bee.—In your issue of the 2d I find an item under the head of "A Sensational Partner," in regard to a dressmaker from the east. One bearing a like description to the principal in your item arrived in Grand Island December 1, on the evening train, and was coming out herself with two of the first families of this city. My suspicions are that she is the same party who cut the figure in the Council Bluffs case. If you can send me the name of the lady and will do so I will be greatly obliged.

The Bee, in publishing the sensation, suppressed the names, as it was not desirous of attaching unpleasant notoriety to those who were unfortunately connected with it, through no fault of their own. It was also thought best to let the little dressmaker from the east quietly retire from public notice, although she seems to have hardly deserved such charitable treatment. By hanging out the sign of a respectable business, and soliciting the patronage of respectable ladies, who in visiting her own reputation, she injured others as well as herself. In order that no others may suffer through any further shielding of her identity, the Bee would state that the name by which she went here was that of Mrs. A. R. Roberts. She claimed to have come here from New York. It is hoped that if any innocent dressmakers are in Grand Island, or any other place within reach of the Bee, that they may not suffer by any suspicion of being the one referred to, now that the name is given.

Cash on Warrants.

The difference between Judge Alyceworth, of the superior court, and the city council, as to whether the city should receive warrants for licenses, promises to now reach a conclusion. The council has informally decided to pass an ordinance, or resolution, by which those saloon-keepers who choose to pay their monthly licenses before the tenth of each month can do so by putting up $25 cash. After the 10th of each month they will have to pay $50, but they will be given the choice of paying this amount either in city warrants or in cash. Of course, those who wait until after the 10th will pay in warrants, but will have to pay in warrants twice as much as if they paid in cash before the 10th. The idea of appearance money for gamblers and prostitutes will still have to be in cash, according to this plan of the council. The change will only affect the saloons.
