POULTRY—The receipts were light to-day. The market is now in a very healthy condition and will probably remain thus for the next two weeks. Attention of shippers is again called to the danger of shipping immediately before the holidays. The receipts from December 23 until 25 are usually far in excess of demand and cause a break in the market. In order to avoid being caught in a glut, shippers should make it a point to have their poultry on the market not later than the morning of December 22. The greatest care should also be observed in the dressing of poultry. Well dressed stock will hardly ever lose the shipper money, while inferior stock invariably has to be sold at a discount alongside of choice. Turkeys and chickens should be dry picked, head and feet cut off and entrails drawn.
