and His Household Wrecked. A man with his head swathed in a bushel of bandages, permitting but one blood shot eye to peer through, with his arm hung in a sling and a crutch steadying his limping gait, entered Judge Brandes court Thursday evening and asked to swear out a complaint for assault and battery with intent to kill, He gave the name of Julius Puls, a dairyman living west of the poor farm about three miles from the city, and the story he told, as well as could be gleaned from his painful speech, indicated that his recent experiences must have been ex it seems that he had two men in his employ, Rudolph Lambrecht and William Stendar. They drove teams for him and helped about the farm. Thursday both men had abused their horses and after reproving them for their cruelty, a row arose, in the course of which Puls dis-charged them. He then went to the house, leaving Lambrecht and Stendar in the barnyard. It was then about five o'clock in the evening. A half hour later both men walked into the house armed with sticks and fork handles. They at once made a rush upon Puis and began to beat him with their cudgels. Puls was defenseless, but a double barrelled shot gun stood in the next room and this he struggled to reach. next room and this he struggled to reach. He finally secured it, closely pressed by his assailants, but before he had time to use the weapon, they grappled with him, and in the struggle the gun was discharged into the ceiling. The two men quickly wrenched the gun from Puls' grasp, and one of them struck him senseless to the floor with a heavy blow of the butt upon his head. They then beat him some more, and after taking his silver watch and smashing all the furniture in the house, left him lying bleeding and bruised upon the floor. The Puls' family had been frightened from the house and ran to neighbors from the house and ran to neighbors screaming murder as they fled. Later screaming murder as they fled. Later they returned and found Puls just regaining consciousness in the midst of the wreck of the household goods. A doctor was called and his wounds given medical attention. Although it was a perilous effort, Puls insisted upon making complaint at once and was driven into town and to Justice Brandes' court.

The judge issued warrants against Lambecht and Stendar for assault and battery with intent to kill and Constable Paul Stein went out yesterday to arrest the men. Old man Puls is in a critical condition and the case may prove of very serious consequences. Lambecht and Stendar may have a different story to tell when arraigned.

UNITED STATED COURT.

The Day's Grist of Civil and Criminal Business.

TIRED OF LIFE.

Nellic Houston Swallows Quinine and Then Morphine.

Nellie Houston, a young girl living in Cora Miller's baguio on Dodge street, between Ninth and Tenth, came very near crossing the dark border line Thursday night. She had been feeling wretchedly all day and towards determined to commit suicide. She took several small doses of morphine to brace her for the desperate deed and then sailed forth to obtain a heavy dose of the drug, which would put an end to her life at one chp. Going into the drug store at the corner of Twelfth and Dodge streets, she called for a big dose of morphine. One of the pre-scription clerks who waited on her guessed the purpose to which she intended to put the drug and gave her a mild mixture of quinine instead. Nellie took this and prepared to die. She failed to cross the livide as speedily as she anticipated,

"THAT CHARNEL WELL."

The "Infant Sepulchre" Found to Be

Untenanted by Any Babes. Tom Murray's agent, Mr. Charles Selden, and a reporter for the BEE, assisted with a reporter, "I have suspended largely by two hired men, cleaned out the well on the Murray premises at the corner of Fourteenth and Jackson streets Thursday afternoon. The tales of horror told of this well by the neighbors and made known in these colums on Wednesday evening had arroused public sentiment in that locality to such a pitch that an investigation was not to be denied. As soon as the operating party entered the grounds and started to work, the tenants of the score of shanties about the lot came out and supervised the job. The out and supervised the job. The well was discovered to be forty feet deep, and soundings showed that it contained water. Grapuels were first let down and made fast to everything touched. The first haul was made gingerly and every heart beat in high pitched expectancy. A sickly laugh greeted the first disclosure—a scrap of rag carpet. Again and again foreign matter was fished up and in each case the character of the carch, was the same, as character of the catch was the same, as far as it failed to be horrible—oyster cans, fragments of clothing, an old hoop skirt, shoes hats and east off articles of every character. A candle was then let down and as it burned until the water was touched, one of the workmen followed, descending by a constant of the workmen followed, descending by a rope. For a half hour this man scraped and shoveled, sending up bucket after bucket filled with mod, sticks, stone, bottles and trash. When the last had been brought to the top and not a bone or suggression of infant skeletons had been discovered, the tollers rested their labors and discussed the situation. conclusion was unanimously reached that no babes had been entombed in the well or if any had been they had since been able to get out. With this, the well was closed up again and ad-journment taken without a day.

WILD CAT BONDS.

Sherman County's Bad Paper and the New Honest Regime.

An interesting example of the management of county finances, in its most peculiar form, comes from Sherman

Under the act of 1875, authorizing counties to fund their outstanding indebtedness by the issuance of bonds for that purpose, Sherman county put out a heavy series of securities. Parties who held some of these bonds to the amount, with interest added, of $800, placed them in the hands of the local law tirm of Bartlett & Cornish. When the bonds became due some months ago the county declared that it had no money to meet them. Recently the purchasers pressed for their payment, and Messrs. Bartlett & Cornish sent one of their representatives, Mr. F. W. Fitch, out to Sherman county to see what could be done. Mr. Fitch in pursuing his investigations discovered that the county had in reserve a judgment fund of sufficient amount, if so employed, to cover the face of the bonds. He called the attaction of the commissioners to this fact and at his substitution than both fact and at his solicitation they held a special meeting and agreed to pay the bonds out of the judgment fund. This was done and Mr. Fitch returned from his mission vesterday morning.

for years in the past under a reckless ring which has nearly ruined the county. These individuals in their official capacity repeatedly issued wildcat bonds of such peculiar nature that their invalidity, although not apparent, was declared on their face. These were thrown on the New York market and numbers of purchasers were thus swindled out of their money. In this wise Sherman county has built many school houses which, to this day, have never been paid for. This ring, however, has been swept away, and an honest county government raised which is working with growing success to establish the financial credit of the county which has so long been impaired. Many expressions of approval are heard for the county in its new departure.

It seems that Sherman county has been

ANOTHER RAILROAD

Between Omaha and St. Louis-General Railway Notes.

Mr. James H. Bullard, secretary and general manager of the proposed Chicago, St. Louis & Pacific railroad, to run between St. Louis and Omaha, is in the city for the purpose of conferring with capitalists and business men in regard to making Omaha the actual terminus. When asked by a BEE representative concerning the enterprise, Mr. Bullard said:

"We are an organized company, and have obtained our charter. As to crossing the Union Pacific bridge, that is a question to be decided by the board of directors. If we can make arrangements to cross the bridge and make Omaha the terminus we shall do so, provided some inducements are given us. Perhaps we may come in by the way of the Plattsmouth bridge. We want the cities and people along our line to own the controlling share of the stock and to direct the affairs of the road. We have a capital of twelve million dollars, but we want the people to take stock in our enterprise. Flattering inducements have everywhere been given us so far. Our surveyors are now at work. The route will be southeast, almost an air line, running through the best part of Iowa and Missouri, at least forty miles from the Wabash road. The country that will be tributary to our road is a rich farming and live stock region, and will furnish plenty of business. It is the gar-den spot of Iowa and Missouri. We have our officers elected, the capital to work on, and our rolling stock is provided for, and all we now want is the right of way and track.'

Marvin Hughitt, the vice president and general manager of the Northwestern; K. C. Moorehouse, general freight agent of the Sioux City & Pacific, and James Clark, general freight agent of the Chi-cago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha, have made a tour of the northwestern lines of the state, and passed through the city yesterday eastward bound. Reform Treatment for Bad Boys. "There are a large number of boys in this city," said Judge Stenberg to a reporter, yesterday, "most of them under the age of 15 years, who ought to be in the reform school. They are not kept at school, spend most of their time away from home, get into hard company, and go to the bad in a very short time. They fall in with other boys who teach them to he and steal, and commit other crimes and as they grow up they develop into first-class (r)oks. I can't deal with them here in police court, as they should be dealt with. I can send one of these characters to the county jail for a few days, but when he gets out he falls into his old com-pany again, and is as bad as ever. The onty way to deal with one of these incorrigible youngsters is to send him to the the reform school. I shall write to the superintendent of the institution at Kearney and see if he can make room for several 'patients' from this city. I do not think that the number of boys sent to the reform school from Omaha, during the past two or three years, will exceed three. Omaha pays her share toward the support of the institution and she ought to derive some benefit from it."

A Bold, Bad Man.

Pete Rush, a former well-known Omaha tough, became engaged in a quarrel in Sioux City Wednesday and in the melee came very near killing a fellow tough and gambler named Tom Brennan. He is now in jail awaiting trial.

Rush's character in Omaha was that of desperate man. He frequently demonstrated that he had no regard for human life, especially when enraged or under the influence of liquor. On one occasion he shot at a western cattleman at the road-house, and narrowly missed killing him. The cowboy threw up one of his hands, the bullet struck one of his fingers, was deflected in its course and grazed the forehead. One of his most menorable escapades was when he stole $700 and a big pule of jewelry from Jennie Dickinson, the landlady of a house of ill-fame on the orner of Twelfth and Capitol avenue. He was never prosecuted, as the Dickenson woman was afra d to appear against
