A STRANGE MOUNTAIN STORY.

Charles Thurston, the Mysterious Man of a Colorado Mining Camp. A Mystery to His Neighbors. He Eventually Meets a Heroic Death—A Man Who Lived for Years Under a False Accusation of Murder.

The bell of the little church in the mountain town of Sylvanito was tolling its mournful record—84, the age of the man whose funeral was about to occur.

Some years before Charles Thurston had made his appearance in the camp with his wife and young daughter, and engaged in mining, having sub-leased a claim on the Granddora.

After the death of his wife Thurston was, if anything, more morose and disagreeable than ever, hardly ever speaking and seldom deigning to answer questions.

It was about a week after the funeral that a singular thing happened. A fine looking stranger landed on the stage at the one little hotel in the town.

HOW TO BREAK A BRONCHO.

Some of the Peculiarities of this Fervid Western Animal. A Well-Known Hostler Considers the Mule an Angel as Compared With the Bucking, Untamed Broncho.

"How do you break bronchos?" asked a Denver Tribune-Republican reporter of a well-known hostler man.

"When a broncho gets so that he becomes almost decently all the time if he has him as soon as possible, because you can bet your life that he's got his will made and is going to croak very soon.

"The first thing he'll do is to run like lightning, and shake himself from side to side. A part of the time he'll run sideways, and a part backwards, and now and then he'll stop and look back at you.

When I have seen him wrestle with his English. "Yes, I have seen him wrestle with his English."

THE APACHE PROBLEM.

An Interview with Delegate Joseph of New Mexico. A Washington special to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat says that Delegate Joseph, of New Mexico, has a firm resolution to appoint a committee of three members of the house under instructions to investigate the management of the Apache problem.

"I recognize that Gen. Crook is an excellent officer and brave soldier," he says, "but with the troops now at his command—and it would be a long time even if he had the whole army—I believe he will be unable to subdue and capture these Apaches.

"The Apache problem is a very serious one," he says, "and it is not necessary to indicate to Gen. Crook that it is not his intention to attack the general."

DEMPSEY LOOKING FOR A FIGHT.

New York Sun: Pugilist Jack Dempsey read in the Boston Police Gazette the morning of Jan. 18, a notice of the fight of LeBlanche, the Marine, had accused him of cowardice.

"I will fight you for $1,000 a side," answered LeBlanche.

"I will fight you for $1,000 a side," answered LeBlanche.
