DETROIT'S FUNNY WAR.

It is Waging Between the Daily Newspapers and Four Big Railway Companies.

The Latter Caused the Trouble by Making a Bid for Free Advertising.

A curious warfare, of which the public has heard nothing, is being waged in Detroit. It is between the Michigan Central, the Wabash, the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, and the Detroit, Lansing & Northern railroads on the one hand, and the four English daily papers—the Free Press, the Tribune, and News, and the Journal—on the other.

About a month ago the roads named resolved to no longer pay the papers for publishing their time-cards. For years regular advertising rates have been charged for this service by the papers.

The railroad argued that the newspapers must publish the announcement of the arrivals and departures of all passenger trains as a matter of news, the same as the weather reports, the market quotations and similar articles which are presented to the public.

The roads were somewhat surprised when the newspapers, as if a previous understanding, simultaneously quit publishing the time cards, and Jan. 10, when the annual passes expired, refused to accept the new ones offered.

The spirit spread to every person connected with the press, and, although no orders to that effect were issued, it was understood that what had been declared and that the campaign was to be a long one.

Such an unusual verdict was, of course, treated by the press as its importance deserved, and the facts were given to the public under eye-catching captions.

The fact that an number of railway gates are needed at a great number of street crossings in this city has but recently been discovered, and the discovery was mentioned in bringing the railroad companies to town for the purpose of inspecting the alleged dangerous conditions.

The funniest circumstance of the war is that the Grand Trunk, under the direction of its general manager, refuses to join the other roads in their action against the press.

What the final outcome of this novel fight will be cannot be conjectured. Nothing like it ever occurred before in Michigan. The Detroit papers have nothing to say about it for obvious reasons.

An Essay on Cock-Roaches. Chicago Tribune: From our esteemed contemporary, the Boston Advertiser, we learn that a meeting of the Boston society of Natural History was held last Wednesday.

The president of the society read a paper on this interesting subject, and also made reference to former comments of his on the cockroach of the paleozoic age. His investigations, he said, were pursued chiefly by the study of the fore wings.

THE DUTY OF A NEWSPAPER.

Some very queer notions obtain among the people as to the duty which a newspaper owes to its readers, but the most prevalent one is that it should leave out important items of public interest at the request of those who may be injured by their publication.

The object of a newspaper is to give the news. Its very name indicates that. Unless it does so, it is not in any sense the word "newspaper," but rather an anti-newspaper.

A marriage has vast responsibility, hanging upon it the perpetration of one man family; therefore no man wants to become the father of a race of pigmies or deformed dwarfs—physical cripples, to the disgrace of himself, his wife and his progeny.

Next, the salt of common sense, is an important necessity. Since marriage resolves itself into a permanent covenant, instituted by God, to be broken only by the death of either party, it is an issue that can be put on in the morning and removed at night, it is an issue that should occupy the mental, the moral, the spiritual, the practical and the consoling of both parties when they are united to the sobered degree.

Death of Captain Crawford. To those who are unacquainted with the character of Capt. Crawford's command, it is a matter of surprise that a Chicago Daily News reporter, by telegram announcing that it had been fired upon by Mexican troops and its leader killed must have seemed strange in view of the fact that the captain and his men were at peace.

A company of Indian scouts is usually commanded by a lieutenant, though in these days a captain is appointed and a chief of scouts. The latter is the means of communication between the Indians and the commanding officer, and is a frontiersman who has lived long enough in the Indian country to acquire the Apache tongue, and who has a good knowledge of the country.

HOW TO MARRY.

A Treatise That Should be Read by Every Fellow Seeking a Sweet-heart.

The following is a Philadelphia physician's advice to a young man prospecting for a wife: When the adult age is reached—what? As truly as every positive requires a negative, every knife its fork and that opposites attract, so, too, with the genus homo, like birds they must mate, and it is not good for man to be alone.
