REMORSE AND ROUGH ON RATS

The Combination Came Near Ending Eloping Annie Brown's Life.

COUNCIL BUSINESS IN BRIEF.

Change of Bank Officers-County Court Jurisdiction-He Proposes to Stop the Funeral-General Capital News.

[FROM THE BEE'S LINCOLN BUREAU.] Annie Brown, the young girl who was brought home from Omaha Monday by her father after an elopement with D. 1. Kauffmann, tried to kill herself last night by taking half a box of "Rough on Rats." She was near death's door but Dr. Speare succeeded in pumping out the poison, and at 11 p. m. she was resting quietly Remorse at her disgraceful conduct in the laison with young Kauffmann is assigned as the cause of Annie's attempt to take her life. She is a good looking girl of 18 years, who lays her downfall to the evil associations of the skating rink.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS IN BRIEF. At the meeting of the city council Monday night Mayor Burr's claim of $124 for money expended by him in raising the now blockade on O street last month was reconsidered and allowed; the ordinance granting right of way to the Missouri Pacific and Northwestern roads was passed; an ordinance providing that no city official can become surety on appeals from the police court was read the first time, and on a tie vote to indefinitely postpone Mayor Burr voted in of the ordinance, Billingsley, Brock, Daly and Lau voting to kill it and Webster, Cooper, Dean and Hargreaves opposed.

MR. BROCK'S RESIGNATION.
Mr. N. C. Brock has resigned his position as vice president of the State Na tional bank, and will probably connect himself in a similar capacity with the Lincoln National. The vacancy in the State National will be filled at the next meeting of the directors by the selection of a member from the present board.

This is undoubtedly in accordance with the plans of Mr. Hayden when he assumed charge of the bank last December, though there has been as yet no public announcement of such intention.

Always a sound institution, the State National, under the liberal management of Mr. Hayden, is fast becoming one of the most popular and best patronized banks in Lincoln, and its next quarterly state-ment will be very gratifying to the stock-holders.

STOPPING A FUNERAL.

George M. Fish, of Chicago, the gentleman who is suing the Nebraska City Barb Wire company in the United States court for $10,000 damages for trying to freeze him out, is on hand again after an absence of several days. Mr. Fish now wants to supplement his bill of damages with items amounting to about $40,000, the principal one of which is a charge of $39,200 for 49 per cent of what the com-pany would have turned out if it had operated his machine for a year under the contract. The company claims it is dead, having been dissolved by order of the court and a receiver appointed. Fish contends that it is a very lively corpse and insists on having his claims adjudicated before the funeral proceeds.

COUNTY COURT JURISDICTION. The supreme court met yesterday morning, and was at once called upon for a writ of habeas corpus by the attorneys of one Max, a saloon keeper at Geneva (Neb.) whom it is alleged is unrawfully deprived of his liberty by the courts of Fillmore county. Max, it seems, was arrested for selling liquor without a license convected in the county. without a license, convicted in the county court, and sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs. This he did not do, and was committed to jail. His attorneys now ask for his release, or an investigation of the case on the ground that the county court has preliminary jurisdic-tion only, and can do nothing more than bind offenders over to appear in the district court for trial.

BUYING A WHOLE STREET.

In March, 1881, Julia M. Gregory sold to George B. Goodrich, for $400, a piece of land in Lincoln, described as the northeast quarter of section 35, township 10, range 6 east, giving a warranty deed. Goodrich afterward found that he had bought the highway on Nineteenth street and now brings an action in the district court to recover his $400 and interest from date of purchase, claiming that de-fendant never had a title to the land, which was owned and occupied by the city at the time the sale was made. Paul Ice Carnival

Mr. Fred Millard, who returned yesterday from a visit in St. Paul, is enthusiastic over the ice carnival which has been the attraction in that city since February 1. He says that the directors of the carnival are so satisfied with the success of the affair that they have concluded to keep up the fun as long as ternoon sports in the palace until probably well into March. On Saturday, the big day, Mr. Millard says the number of vis-itors in the city were estimated at 50,000. The sight of the storming of the ice palace was very fine, he says, as also the parade, in which over 3,000 citizens turned out in the costumes of the various tobog-gan, curling and "ski" clubs of the city.

About 2,000 or 3,000 of these had but one cent postage on them and are now being held. No they will not be delivered, of course."

President Joseph H. Real made the opening address. He spoke of the growth of the manufacture of artificial butter, Dairymen everywhere found their vocation ruined. The 18,000,000 mileh cows in the country had depreciated $10 a, head, and the land on which they were kept, something over 75,000,000 acres, worth nominally $50 an acre, has declined 25 per cent. These reductions represented a loss of $1,000,000,000. This was not brought about through honest and fair competition but in consequence of the most outrareous and glaring fraud that could fair competition but in consequence of the most outrageous and glaring fraud that could be practiced, for the substitute was not sold to the consumer for what it was but as butter. The people of New York alone were paying not less than $10,000,000 for stuff they supposed to be butter, and which brought to the manufacturer one half profit. Some 700 grocers of the city have refused to deal in the article. Boston, New York, Cleveland, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Louisville and St. Louis have large bogus butter factories, while Chicago manufactures more bogus butter than all the other cities together. Something all the other cities together. Something must be done to stop this encroachment upon he dairy interests.

Two Brutish Pugilists Pound Each Other Until Roughs End the Fight. LONDON, Feb. 16 .- A prize fight which had been arranged to take place to-day in or near Paris between Smith and Greenfield for the English heavy weight championship and £2,-000, was fought for over an hour with vary ing fortune, when roughs broke into the ring and interrupted the contest. The referee then declared the match a draw. The right when stopped was much in favor of Smith.

London, Feb. 16.—It is now stated that the stakes were only £200. The fight took place at Chantilly, a suburban village on the river Nonette, about twenty-five miles northcast of Paris. The excitement attending the contest was very great, there being at least P20,000 up in wages. Greenfield is from Birmingham, while Smith is a London Irishman. Each combatant had with him, it is stated, twenty bruisers, hired at £5 each, to protect his interests. The Birmingham roughs broke down the ring and compelled a stoppage of the fight because Smith was evidently on the point of winning.

PARIS, Feb. 16.—Liberte, in its report of the prize fight, says that the stakes were awarded to Smith, who was carried off the field in triumph by his supporters. Greenfield submitted in the twenty-fifth round, being the in a frightful condition. The right ing then in a frightful condition. Chicago Claimants to an Immense Property in the Sandwich Islands.

> The Romantic Story of John Young-His Descendents the Relatives of Queen Emma.

A Chicago lady claims an interest in large estates in the Hawaiian islands, and has retained a Chicago law firm to prose cute her claim. It is based on her blood relationship to John Young, who married into the royal family of the islands, became governor of Hawaii, and grandfather of the late Queen Emma. About the year 1789 John Young, bont swain of the ship Eleanor, Capt. Metcalf. sailed from Cape Cod. A year later she dropped anchor at Owhyhee, and, after tracing with the natives for a few days, she went to Mawhee, another of the Hawaiian group.

While at anchor there two native chiefs swam to the Eleanor one night and stole a small boat which floated astern of the ship, and in which was a sailor who had fallen asleep. The chiefs pushed the boat silently ashore, where they murdered the sailor. They burned the boat to obtain the nails in it, which were almost invaluable to them for the purpose of making Capt, Metcalf offered a reward for the return of the sailor's body and any part of the boat. This brought to the vessel many canoeloads of natives bearing remains of the sailor and bringing produce for purposes of trade. Many came through curiosity. Capt. Metcalf gathered all the cances on one side of the vessel, and then suddenly running out the gans, loaded with grape-shot, bullets, and nails, fired upon the natives, killing and mang-ling over one hundred of them. The vessel then sailed to Karakakooa bay, in the island of Owhyhee.

At this time a small schooner of twenty-six tons, a consort of the eleanor, commanded by Capt. Metcalf's son and a crew of six men, lay of the coast of Kauaihal trading with the natives. The crew knew nothing of the massacre which had occurred, but the natives did, and they determined to have revenge.

A high chief, Kameeimokie, went aboard the consort with several men with apparently peaceable intentions. Watching their opportunity they seized young Metealf and threw him overboard, where he was drowned. All the sailors but one, named Tenry Daves, were killed with clubs. Davis was carried ashore, badly wounded, to be burned as a sacrifice.

A day later the Eleanor sailed from Karakakooa bay, accidentally leaveing on shore John Young, the boatswain. Discovering this, Capt. Metcalf stopped the vessel about two miles from shore, where he waited for two days signalizing for Young, whom the natives restrained.

Young and Davis would have been killed had it not been that Kaoanacha, a high chiefess, fell in love with Young, and, by her intercession with the king, saved the lives of both sailors. Kavanlha was the most beautiful woman on the island of Owhyhee, anr was the admiration of all the sailors who visited Karkakooa bay. She was the only daughther of Keliimaiki, the favorite brother of the great king, Kamehameha

John Young and Kaoanacha were soon married. King Kamehameha appreciated the superior talents of the white men, and made them high chiefs. They taught the natives many things, and sewed the seed of Christianity among them. When the navigator Vancouver visited the island, in 1793, he was entertained by King Kamehameha and John Young, who was then the chief counselor. Young built the first house on the island of Hawaii. Its ruins are still to be seen. It is of stone. Young had no tools but a hatchet and a wooden trowel. He made the door with the hatchet, hewng it out of a koa tree slab. He white washed the house with lime made from white coral, fished from the sea. Young and Kaoanacha lived and died, and here their daughter, Fanny Young Kekelaokalini, was born. In 1794 each island of the group was a separate kingdom. About this time Kamshameha made war on the other islands. and eventually conquered all of them, becoming the first king of the Sandwich In these wars he was greatly aided by Young, by the firearms and the military instruction he had received from ancouver and by the vessel taken from Metealf's son. King Kamehameha was the greatest of his race. He was of immense stature and prodigious strength, while his voice was like the roar of the sea. He was a most skllful warrior. When his forces were engaged in battle he would take a commanding position, where he could watch every movement. So long as his war-riors repulsed the foe or held their ground, he was silent, but if he saw any point of his lines weakening he would rush into the thickest of the fight, dealing death with his terrible club, and by awful voice cheering on his men and terrifying the enemies. quered all the islands he made John Young governor of Owhyhee, and presented him with a vast amount of John Young died in 1835, at an advanced age, leaving to his daughter an immense fortune in lands and cattle. The last descendant of Kamehameha Queen Emma Kaleleonalani, died last April, leaving no issue. She was born in Massachusetts. Her first November husband was Charles Adams. She was a warm personal friend of Cardinal Mo-Closkey, Mrs. Parmelia Crane's daughter is Mrs. Josephine Smith of Chicago, and her daughter is Mrs. Josephine Fisher of 208 Morgan street. THE NEW CARDINAL

something About His Early Life-a Man of Great Piety and Kindness. A special dispatch from Baltimore in Baltimore observers were struck by the marked personal contrast between Archbishop Gibbons and the other pre-lates. Nearly all the Cathotic Bishops are above the average hight—handsome and commanding in appearance. The first of them, however, the president of MISSOURI VALLEY-Fair weather; slightly the council and the primate of the church in America, and now soon to wear the robes of a cardinal, might have been taken for the numblest of attendant priests were it not for his archiepiscopal robes. At St. Charles' College, Md., where he received his classical education, where he received his classical education, he was conspicuous for humble piety rather than brilliant achievements in studies. He was in bad health during most of his college course. He graduated near the bottom of his class and entered the seminary without any marked reputation for ability. After his ordination to the priesthood he was assigned to a little church in Howard county, near Baltimore, while his more brilliant classmates filled city pulpits. To-day, while most of his classmates are still in the city pulpits. he is the first prelate of the church in America. His rise is not due to any world-ly achievements. Called by Archbish-op Spalding to the assistant rectorship of the cathedral, he gained the affection of all by his piety and simple eloquence, When North Carolina was made a vicariate apostolic he was appointed vicar on the recommendation of the archbishop, who was much attached to young priest. The bishopric of Richmond Va., having become vacant shortly after wards by the death of Bishop McGill, the vicar of North Carolina was given that see in connection with his vicariate. Archbishop Bayley, the successor of Spalding, inherited the latter's affection for the youthful bishop of Richmond and called him to Battimore as coadjutor "cum jure successionis" The death of Archbishop Bayley a few months after-wards left Bishop Gibbons occupant of the see and primate of the American Catholic church.

While Archbishop Gibbons presided over the small country parish of Elk-ridge, near Baltimore, small-pox broke out in the village, and a general exodus immediately followed. An old negro at the point of death was deserted by his family, who left him neither food or med-icines. Father Gibbons hastened to the bedside of the dying man and remained with him till the last. Nor was this all No one could be procured to carry the corpse to the grave. Father Gibbons ob-tained a coffin, placed the body therein, and, hiring a wagon, took the remains to the cemetery, and after performing the funeral rites buried the body. His career as vicar of North Carolina was filled with occurrences equally as note-worthy, but of a humorous rather than a pathetic nature. He still talks with zest of his all day rides on horseback through the North Carolina pine forests of nights spent in the flea-covered logcabins of the negro, whose best accom-modations consisted of a corn-husk bed, meals spread out on the floor, and gourds for drinking-cups; of savory dinners of fat bacon and hoccakes, and of other accompaniments of missionary life among the southern negroes.

Archbishop Gibbons is the author of "The Faith of Our Fathers," which has met with a larger sale than any Roman Catholic book published in America. More than 100,000 copies have been sold since its publication in 1877. As a pulpit the primate has neither an im pressive presence nor a good voice, but he is at best in simple appeals, and to this fact is due his great missionary suc cess.
