J. M. Matthews, formerly county superintendent, is being named as one of the possible candidates as member of the school board. He is an enthusiastic edu-cator, and would make an excellent member of the board without doubt. At 5:30 o'clock this afternoon Dennis Moynahan of North Platte, Neb., will lead to the citar in the Catholic church Miss Fannie Dolson of this city. William Ma-loney and Miss Fannie Scott will act as groomsman and bridesmaid respectively. There is some talk by the aldermen of locating No. 4 hose in the building, No. 811 Main street. It will then be quite handy to the large implement houses on lower Main street, as well as in a con-venient location to make a run up town. Harry Inman, who was mentioned in the BEE yesterday as being anxious to support Vaughan for mayor, rises to a correction. He says he is not making tickets or mixing in politics, but is confining his attention to his own business, and leaving political matters to others. The circuit court yesterday closed the case of Stein against the city and gave it to the jury. Adjournment was then taken until this morning. This gave an opportunity for the clearing up of the hall in the afternoon and arranging for the Knights Templar ball last evening.

The Knights Templar last evening gave their ball and banquet in Masonic ball. It was a brilliant affair, largely attended, not only by the best of Council Bluffs social circles, but also by a number of prominent people from elsewhere.

The dime museum opened last evening, and with many attractive features and novelties added from time to time, it promises to prove a popular resort for the people. The rink is centrally located, and there seems no reason why the enter-prise should not prove a success every

Mr. Theodore Beckman vesterday made arrangements for bringing the body of his father-in-law, Mr. Christian Meyer, from Omaha to this city for burial. The body will be brought over on the 11 o'clock dummy train to-day, and will be taken from the Broadway depot to Fairview cemetery direct, Mr. Beckman having purchased a lot there. Mr. Meyer's two sons, Fred Meyer and William Meyer, both of Glenwood, have been notified by telegraph.

He took up some of the planks on which the Knights of Labor stand, and showed clearly some of the truths contained in them. Whether he will differ with them on some other of their fer with them on some other of their principles remains to be seen from his future lectures. George Karll and C. W. Edgerton, two of Omaha's constables, in company with A. W. Sheer, were in the city yesterday. T. J. Lane, of Wilbur, Neb, spent Sun-day in this city with his son Vance Lane, the manager of the telephone office here.

Miss Hattie Blaxsim spent Sunday at home with her parents, having come in from Boomer township, where she is teaching school.

J. C. Milnes, of Cedar Rapids, state veterinary surgeon, was in the city yesterday. He has been looking after six glandered horses belonging to S. T. Grove of Buena Vista county.

Why Not Patronize Home Manufacture. In a recent issue of the Herald there was a statement to this effect: That Kintz & Kleeb have made a mistake at least in one precedent, by not patronizing home manufacture. We simply wish to state why we are not doing so, as we are depending upon the patronage of the people of Council Bluffs and vicinity, and to protect our trade we are compelled to buy as cheap as possible, and whenever home manufacture will meet prices made by our neighboring city we are ready to patronize them first of all.

Cutting the Cards.

At the Methodist church Sunday night there was a very large audience to listen to Rev. Dr. McCreary on "The Gambling Dens of Council Bluffs." The reverend speaker took off his gloves and called things by what he at least considered their right names. Many in the audience doubtless could not agree with all the learned pastor said, but all must have been impressed with the fact that he spoke what he believed to be the truth, and without any regard to any tender corns on other people's toes.

He chose for his text: "Whose is simple, let him turn in hither." He said that sin was one of the oldest things in the world. It was found everywhere, no quarter of the globe, however secluded, being free from its gloomy outlines, the shades being darker and blacker in some places, but still the same terrible results everywhere. Gambling was among the old forms of sin. On the obelisks and tombs of the Egyptians, before the time of written language, appeared the figurative showing of games of hazard. Rome even when it ruled the world with a rod of iron could not rule its own passion for gambling. Greece with all its literature and art could not keep from squandering time and wealth on games of chance.

There were several reasons for this passion of gambling. One was a desire to get a dollar without sweat. Ever since the divine benediction, which many called a curse, that man should earn his bread by the sweat of his brow, man had been trying to get around it, or dodge it. They all wanted to eat bread made from the whitest of the wheat, but they didn't like the sweating. These gamblers al-ways got the whitest of the wheat, but their victims did the swearing. Another reason for the passion of gambling was the excitement which attended it seemed to start a fever in the blood which could not be altayed. Men could often stop drinking easier than they could stop gambling. The passion for gain was often the stronger.

The city authorities knew that these dens were running and just where they were located. These officials had taken a solemn oath to enforce the laws, but they had not the backbone, the manliness to stir even a finger or make the ness to stir even a finger or make the slightest move to keep this solemn oath. The trouble was not altogether with the officials, nor with the keepers of these dens, but was in the public sentiment which allowed them to run openly. It was common to call them "sporting men." They ought to be called thieves. A spade should be called a spade.

The speaker then proceeded to outline some of the forms of gambling. The reg-ular dens were pictured, the cappers denounced as worse than highwaymen, nounced as worse than highwaymen, being less manly and more wicked. Boys were allowed to play. The speaker did not think the blame was altogether with the boys, or with the gamblers, but that the parents were responsible. There was no use for parents losing their authority over smooth-faced boys. He would smile to see a stripling belonging to his home run the streets. These dens were not the only ruinous gambling places. There only ruinous gambling places. There were private poker rooms, causing bank-A team attached to one of Seaman's express wagons came up Main street yesterday noon on a dead run, and as the team turned west on Broadway Harrison Price, who had been standing on the corner, jumped out in the street and caught one of the horses by the head. In so doing he slipped and fell, the heavy there a Baptist, yonder a Methodist, church members at tables gambling. So-ciety called it a progressive euchre party. Prizes were offered, and they played a game of chance for gain. That made it gambling, no matter what it was called. It mattered not whether a man played for a dollar or for a porcelain kettle, a little jug, probably a brown one, it was all little jug, probably a brown one, it was all gambling.

Instead of calling such an organization a "married ladies progressive euchre club," it should be called a "married ladies gambling club." Instead of calling such a club a "young folks' progressive euchre club," why not call things by their right names, and call it "a young folks' gambling club." He had been saddened and surprised to see in the papers the names of some of his church members as having won some of these prizes. It having won some of these prizes. It was as bad as the soldiers who at the foot of the cross cast lots for the garments of of the cross cast lots for the garments of the dying Christ. It was a disgrace. This was plain talk, but those who did not like it could think less of it. He proposed to tell the truth.

There were some good folks who had cards in their homes. He did not believe this was right. Cards were the dwills hook and known as such the cards in their homes. He did not believe this was right. Cards were the devil's book, and known as such the world over. A christian had no business playing with the devil's tools. Wherever you find a pack of cards and a Bible in a home you would find the cards well thumbed and the Bible hardly touched.
A dozan packs of cards would be worn out and the Bible look as good as new.
Some played cards to kill time. Those who killed time murdered eternity. God did not give us time to kill. It was to be used in improvement and helping others.
How ridiculous for a father to say, "Well, let's stop this game of euchre and have family prayers." Praying and cardplaying did not go together.
In regard to these forms of sin "Who so simple, let him turn in hither." When a man entered a gambling den let him write over his forchead "simpleton."
The lady who was about to join a social card party or join in progressive euchre

The Pot a-Boiling. Since the citizens' convention met, and nominated a ticket with John W. Chapman as its head, there have been many mutterings heard about it among republicans. Some claim that it is demoralizing to have the republican party abandon its organization, even in city matters, others object to the candidates elected. Yesterday a move was put on foot to have a republican citp convention called. The city committee did not seem to know whether to call one or not, some republicans pulling one way, others the opposite way. Finally a petition, or request was started in circulation for republican signers, urging the committee doubts about his being willing to accept under any circumstances. There is also talk of bringing a pressure to bear upon Mr. Z. T. Lindsey to accept a nomination for mayor. He is as wide awake, sterling and stirring a business man as there is in the city, but it would be doubtless almost as difficult to get him to serve as others whom the people would gladly elect.

Some vesterday were urging the name

Some yesterday were urging the name of L. C. Baldwin for nomination as mayor. Mr. Baldwin declares that he will not consent to the consideration of his name even, and objects to even being thought of in this connection, much less would be allow his name to be used in a convention.

Another subject of yesterday's gossip was the possible declination of John W. Chapman to run for mayor. It was re-ported that he had declared that in case the republicans made another nomination he would draw out of the race.

The democrats are rather jubilant over The democrats are rather jubilant over the prospect of getting the republicans divided up by having the citizens' ticket and the straight republican ticket in the field, feeling that this would ensure the election of the democratic ticket. The citizens' ticket seems to be falling to pieces, and if the republicans make a ticket, and Colonel Chapman withdraws, there may be a change in the situation there may be a change in the situation which may turn the laugh onto the other side. It may be that the democracy may have a double ticket, the Vaughan faction leading one, and the Bowman faction the other. Such were some of the possibilities alked over yesterday.

The Police Investigation. are not satisfied with the result of the secret investigation by the committee, and to him a good time to be over-active. He was out of the city when the investigation quickness. The men if unjustly used should not be kept under a cloud, and if guilty should not be kept on the force.

Hartford (Conn.) Times: A couple of fartford (Conn.) Times: A couple of tame crows, which have been kept as a sort of household pets by a New Hartford family, at length became such mischievous nuisances and thieves—stealing every bright and glistening thing they could pounce upon, including ladies jewelry of all kinds, and hiding it in distant trees and once pearly making of jewelry of all kinds, and hiding it in dis-tant trees, and once nearly making off with a gold watch—that it became ex-pedient to get rid of them. They were taken (tied up in a bag, so that they couldn't see) to a piece of woods eight miles distant, and there liberated—the wagon being driven off in another direction. Next day one crow was back again, hunting about the kitchen for again, hunting about the kitchen for food, and showing every evidence of great satisfaction at getting back, while the cook joyfully welcomed him, and his the cook joyfully welcomed him, and his companion wasn't long in returning. This first returning wanderer was a knowing fowl. When a hard, dry piece of bread was given him he would take it off to his basin of water, put it in, and let it soak a little. If, on taking it out, it was found to be still too hard to suit him, Mr. Crow would put it back and with one foot hold it down under the water for a good while. Then he would devour it very contentedly. If that was not reason, what was it?

began to cool and finally cut the visitor short by asking him what he wanted.

"Only a chaplain in the army," was the reply.

"Look here," said the President, "don't you think it is about time that the administration should have some of the offices itself?"

"Well," replied the Congressman, undaunted, "there are two chaplains. I'll take one and the administration can have the other."

"No," replied Cleveland; "the ministry is a good place for the administration to begin with. I think I'll take them both."

The mayor does not seem to be in a great hurry to act upon the report of the council committee which investigated the police and found the charges against them true. The mayor says that the men want an open one before Judge Aylesworth. There the matter rests. The police force is going on as before the investigation and report, and will probably continue until after the election. It is a skittish time for the mayor to do anything, and the others concerned are evidently not over-anxious to have enything done. It was supposed that the mayor would have enough backbone to either declare the report of the committee as unjust, or to lay off the officers concerned until he could investigate, or accept the report and dismiss the guilty ones. The mayor has always boasted of his activity and promptness, but this does not seem was in progress and now he does not seem to want to get mixed in it. As the head of the police force, with full power over it, it seems strange that he does not show some of his vaunted activity and

The city council last Saturday passed a resolution instructing the marshal to serve notices on the saloons to pay their licenses, and in case of failure so to pay up to report them to the city solicitor. In other words the city council proposes to have the saloons pay a license or else have the city commence action to compelthem to put up or shut up. The mayor threatens to veto this resolution. The marshal had not commenced serving the notices yesterday, and the resolution seems to fall rather dead. It is not very likely that under the present feverish political state of affairs the matter will be pressed very vigorously, The mayor will hardly dare to veto the resolution, and should he do so he would get little thanks and make small capital out of a veto, as the saloon men look upon it as spring election buncombe anyway. There are a good many side plays now, and it is hard to tell when men are in earnest.
