THE COWBOYS IN WINTER.

The wall where everybody could see it. It ran as follows: 1. Grand Circle Round-up March, 2. Horse Hunters' Quadrille, 3. Calliope Waltz, 4. Saddle-up Lancers, 5. Broncho Racket, 6. Captain's Quadrille, 7. Circular Galop, 8. Round-up Lancers, 9. Out-of-Scottishese, 10. Branding Quadrille, 11. Cow and Call Racket, 12. Night Horse Lancers, 13. First Guard Waltz, 14. Second Guard Quadrille, 15. Third Guard Newport, 16. Fourth Guard Quadrille, 17. Calliope Waltz, 18. Maverick Polka, 19. Bull Tunes' Medley, 20. Campfire Air.

This is the time of year when the average cowboy is taking a thorough rest after the fatigues of the past season's work. To see the cowboys "at home" one must come to Miles City, Montana.

But here in Miles City one can run against scores of cow-boys on the street corners, in the saloons, on the roads, or going to and coming from the ranches. They are a race worth studying.

The advent of a stranger would be looked upon as a god-send, but now, unless he is very entertaining, he is not made very welcome. Yet the cowboys there of the long winter months, even though they have less to ride and dance at least twice a week.

When the snow is gone and the grass begins to sprout everybody is up and stirring. Old saddles are brought out and supplied with new buckles and stirrups.

But it was a desire of mine to see the cowboys at their winter homes, when they are at home, and to walk with them to the towns. So a day or two ago I walked boldly up to a gentleman of that persuasion whom I saw standing idly in front of one of the leading hotels.

"What you are a tenderfoot, sure enough. Did you ever go a-line-ridin'?" "No," I answered politely, "but I did not mean to go to the cowboys who were on duty, but those who hang around the ranches all winter and who are out of a job."

"Stranger, just you go and saddle up after some of the cowboys who were on duty to a ranch close by where by you will enjoy yourself till daylight. No need of a six-shooter, just come as you are, and nobody'll touch your beautiful hair."

"Don't impose upon your husband because he is good enough to assist you a little in your work. Don't leave the stove-handle on the red-hot stove and don't ask him to empty the ash-draw. Draw a line on the ash-draw and don't run a free horse to death."

"Don't monopolize every look in the crowd, especially the one who is new for his very own—and then in mercy hang your Mother Hubbard, your palerine, your shopping bag and bonnet in some other place."

"Don't use your breath in useless vituperation against his chum. Utterless vituperation against his chum. Utterless vituperation against his chum. Utterless vituperation against his chum."

"Don't put a long hair on the soap or in his hair-brush. Don't mend his horses' with cotton, having knots in it bigger than a pea."

"Don't leave hair in the comb or your neck curls where they will stick to his hair brush. Don't put a long hair on the soap or in his hair-brush."

THE ENTERPRISING WIDOW.

How the Late Mrs. Morgan Spent Millions of Dollars. Her Varied Purchases of Paintings, Engravings, Silverware, Rare Jewelry and Works of Art, Prove a Good Investment After All.

Croffitt, the well known correspondent, writing from New York, says: On last Fourth of July the daily papers of New York city, under the head of deaths, had this announcement: In Saratoga, New York, on the 24th inst., Mary Jane Morgan, widow of the late Charles Morgan, aged sixty-two years.

The average reader likely guessed that this little paragraph referred to one of the most remarkable women of this century; one who, comparatively unknown when she died, has, during the seven months since intervening, become famous the world over, wherever art is studied and cherished.

She had lived for a lifetime in an unpretending four-story brown-stone house, in the very heart of this metropolis, so quietly, so unostentatiously, that the world that dashed about her was unconscious of her existence. And yet, while vigorous efforts were being put forth to establish a museum of fine arts in the city, and new-made two-hundred-millionaires were building palaces and equipping picture galleries and jewelry stores.

After a year or two she advised him to go to Europe for his health, and incidentally presented him with $500,000 in bank bills in order that he might make the trip comfortably. This sum she offered as a round million, and the good man was in Europe when she died.

Mrs. Morgan was a sympathetic and warm-hearted woman, who she confided in and trusted. Thenceforth she gave up the years to making the tremendous art collection which now astonishes the world.

With no children and few warm attachments, she left behind her a woman who she confided in and trusted. Thenceforth she gave up the years to making the tremendous art collection which now astonishes the world.

Mrs. Morgan was born in this city at Day Street in 1843. She was the daughter of Francis Sexton, one of the rich East India merchants of that day, who, with his family, attended the old Presbyterian brick church where the times office now is.

She was especially successful in mathematics. In 1850, at the age of 7, she became the second wife of Charles Morgan, since well known to the business world as a wealthy and successful steamship man.

She lived very happily together for nearly thirty years, when he died in 1878. They were very strongly attached to each other, and he found in her a constant companion and assistant. She kept all of his accounts, and served as a superintendent in the execution of his business schemes.

At his death, eight years ago, Mr. Morgan, having amply provided for the two children left by his first wife, gave his widow his entire fortune unconditional, amounting to several millions of dollars. She found herself in a big house,
