DISCOVERY OF SUMMITVILLE

How Two Runaway Seniors Were the Cause of Discovering a Rich Camp.

The Little Annie and Ida Mines—John Esmond's Early Experience in the San Juan, and How He Overtook a Small Fortune.

"Do you recognize that Mexican going across the street with the braided bridle?" asked an old Colorado pioneer of a Denver Tribune-Republican reporter.

"On the following day Meria's brother and myself started out to find her, whereabouts, and learned upon reaching the Merino plaza that both girls had run away."

"At this time South Mountain was densely covered with timber on the north side, and we concluded to make our way through the stream which rippled tranquilly about the foot of the mountain."

"The sun was just creeping over the cone of the mountain, and a dazzling reflection of the rays of the sun showed that the ledge was completely filled with free gold."

"The question now appeared to me as to how should we meet them. After a moment's reflection I allowed Meria to be the one to advance toward them."

"The sun was just creeping over the cone of the mountain, and a dazzling reflection of the rays of the sun showed that the ledge was completely filled with free gold."

THE THREE CLAIMS LOCATED AND WORKED were the Little Annie, Del Norte and Major, both of them proving fully rich as the Little Annie.

"Now, I presume," continued Mr. Esmond, "when I get back to the Summit district, I will see a great change, and when I once found two runaway seniors in the wilds of the mountains, I will hear the thumping of stamp-mills and the underground rumblings of blasts."
