A LIFETIME'S RECORD LOST

Christian G. Herold Found Guilty of Fraud With Intent to Cheat.

Mention.

IFROM THE BEE'S LINCOLN BUREAU.! The trial of Christian G. Herold for fraudulently disposing of his property with intent to cheat his creditors, terminated late Monday night with a verdict of guilty. Mr. Burr at once filed a motion for a rehearing of the case, which will be argued within a few days. Herold, who has been at liberty on bail ever since the complaint was made against him, was taken in custody by the sheriff and removed to jail as soon as the verdict was recorded. The parting between the prisoner and his family, who were present with him, was very affecting, the officers of the law having to almost tear him from the embraces of his wife and little sons, after waiting much more than the ordinary time allowed for leave-taking. Previous to the disclosures in this case Herold occupied an enviable position in the community, being one of Lincoln's pioneer citizens and having a good reputation as an honest, straightforward business man. The jury, however, from the evidence adduced, found him guilty of fraudulently hiding $14,925 worth of goods at the time of his failure, and thus the record of a lifetime is obliterated.

When the court was convened yesterday morning Judge Hayward was on the

When the court was convened yester-day morning Judge Hayward was on the bench, and listened to an argument by Judge Mason, of counsel for Dr. Dogge, Heroid's alleged accomplice, on a de-murrer to the information. The position was the same as that taken by Mr. Burr in the Heroid case. Both Heroid and Dogge were presented for trial by the district attorney under the statute prodistrict attorney, under the statute providing a punishment for the fraudulent transfer or sale of goods with intent to cheat creditors. To make this charge good counsel contended that it was necessary for the state to show that afi actual transfer of the goods had been made. The body of the statute might be framed so as to cover the case in point, but if it was it must be unconstitutional, because there was an express prohibition of the legislature's power to make a law the of-fense and punishment described in the context of which was at variance with the object of the law as set forth in the title. Judge Hayward took the matter under consideration when the court adjourned for dinner.
THE RECONSTRUCTED COMMERCIAL.

The era of reconstruction at the Commercial is nearly over, and Landlord Kitchen, for the first time since taking charge of the house, begins to lean back in his easy chair, and view with well founded satisfaction the great transforma-tion that has been worked. In its present shape the Commercial is the pride of Lincoln, and a pleasing surprise to the traveling man who, knowing the house in its ante-reconstruction days, is dazzled by the change of surroundings as he swings his grip onto the counter and inscribes his audacious looking John Hancock on the new register. The walts that formerly cut off the ladies' parlor from the office have been taken out and the guests now have a commodious and well lighted room in which to smoke and read and chat. The ceiling and side walls have been tinted a soft shade, and the wood furnishings, office desks, news stand, wainscoating, and all, are in cherry, the A new tile floor makes the refitting com plete, and finishes what every visitor concedes is one of the neatest hotel offices in the state. In the large room formerly occupied as a barber shop, a reception parlor for ladies has been arranged, while on the P street side the carpenters are at work on a bar which Mr. Kitchen proposes to open about April 10, and which he says will be in keeping with the rest of the house. Up stairs the dark halls have been lightened by putting ground glass panels in the doors of all the rooms facing on the street, so that the welcome daylight now penetrates where it was daylight now penetrates where it was once dark and dangerous. All over the building, inside and out, workmen have been busy for weeks, scrubbing and painting, until the old hostlery has lost every vestige of its former self, and is to all practical ends a new house, hand-some in appearance, and managed in an unexceptional manner. THE CITY COUNCIL LOVE FEAST The meeting of the city council Monday night was not remarkable for important business or spirited debate. The citizens committee appointed to recommend a plan of sewerage, reported that they had been in correspondence with Geo. E. Waring, the sanitary engineer, and advised the council to wire him to either come here in person or send a competent assistant to consult with the committee. A resolution to this effect, introduced by Webster, was lost on a tie vote of 4 to 4, the friends of the Davis system refusing to accept the views of the committee regarding the merits of the Waring plan. What debate there was made it plain that some system of sewerage is necessary, and that the quicker work is commenced the better pleased all classes will be. Finally the mayor was authorized to consult with the citizens' committee, and consult with the citizens' committee and in case they decide not to send for Davis, to ask Waring to come on and look the

to ask Waring to come on and look the ground over.

When the charges against Officer Smith were called up, Chairman Webster, of the special committee, requested that a meeting be held for their consideration, and on motion of Mr. Brock Thursday evening was named for that purpose. Messrs. Sawyer and Lewis, of the Law and Order league, were present, and the latter spoke very plainly on the division of the charges. The charges against Smith's personal character, such as the frequenting of bawdy houses, had been referred to the mayor, who absolutely refused to investigate them while the charges against his official conduct had been left for the council to take care of. Mr. Lewis said he considered all the allegations pertinent to the case, and fit allegations pertinent to the case, and fit matter for consideration by the council.

If such was not the course he did not think the Law and Order league would care to follow the matter any further, but he would not make a positive assertion to this effect until Thursday evening. The ordinance fixing the salaries of city officials was read a second time. The pay of the city clerk was made $500 a year instead of $400, and that of councilmen $200 instead of $50. The ordinance was referred to the city attorney to incorporate a section providing for the payment of the firemen.

RAIL NOTES.

Funeral of an Old Railroad Man-Per sonal Matters.

Andy Borden, of the Union ticket office, and John E. McClure, the well known western passenger agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road, have arrived from St. Louis, where they attended the funeral of Andy Atkins. Mr. Atkins was one of the oldest traveling railway men in the service, and had many friends here and elsewhere. His funeral, which occurred Sunday, was largely attended by railway men from all over the country, who assembled to pay the last token of respect to the memory of their dead comrade. The floral tribute of their dead comrade. The floral tribute presented by the Omaha boys was a splendid piece, bearing the device, "Faith, Hope and Charity," and consisting of a heart, cross and anchor. It compared favorably with any of the floral offerings which covered the bier of the dead. Those who attended from Omaha were J. E. McClure, Andy Borden and wife, G. N. Clayton and Nat Brown.

TWO STORIES,

And Highly Conflicting Ones Told by

Robert Irving-Morning Docket. "No, sir, your honor, I never stole them clothes, and I don't know nothing about where they came from, either," and with a look of righteous indignation, Robert Irving, Esq., backed into his seat on the bench before Judge Stenberg yesterday

Robert, who had been picked up by Officer Bellamy under very suspicions circumstances while trying to sell a large valise full of clothes and miscellaneous property, evidently be-longing to some young woman. He had explained to the officer that they belonged to his dead wife and had just been expressed to him from Ireland. He was hard up and trying to sell them. In the morning, as he said, he had made up his mind to tell the truth, and accordingly regaled the court with a story of how he had been approached by a stranger who placed a valise in his hands, telling him to sell its contents and hands, telling him to sell its contents and keep half the money. "That story don't go down," said the judge, "you can't make me believe that you came honestly by a valise full of ladies' underwear, corsets, bustles, stockings, bibles, hymnbooks and prayerbooks—no, sir. Twenty-five days on bread and water." Robert was whisked off to jail.

AMUSEMENTS

A Successful Presentation of the "Silver King."

A large audience greeted the prsduction of the "Silver King" at the Boyd last night. The play is a melodrama of the best kind, possessing lively action and a number of striking situations. Frank C. Bangs, who appears in the title role, is always good, and last night's performance did not detract from his reputation. The character of Wilfred Denver is a hard one to delineate, and the only fault to find with Mr. Bangs is that he, perhaps, overdid the part. However, it was a strong character, and as such was well delineated. The minor parts in the play are such as to require good acting, and Mr. Bangs has been fortunate in securing an excellent company.

Miss Grace Thorne as Nellie Denver won a great deal of well-merited applause.

She comes from a family of actors, being a daughter of the late Charles Thorne, a daughter of the late Charles Thorne, than whom there was no better man on or off the stage. She is an actress of great merit, and unless she allows certain defects of intonation get too firm a hold upon her, is destined to have a successful future. The rest of the support did their work conscientionsly, and showed the results of good training and careful study. DEEPENING THE PLATTE.

Scheme of a Louisville, Neb., Man-Its Details.

P. P. Haddon, of Louisville, Neb., is a man with an idea. It is an idea of large proportions, and perhaps if ever put into execution, would yield wonderful results. In conversation with a reporter for the BEE yesterday, Mr. Haddon fully explained his idea. In brief it is this:

The Platte river is at present shallow

The Platte river is at present shallow and unnavigable. By proper treatment it might be made deep enough to permit flat boats, barges, and even steamboats to be floated on its surface. Of this Mr. H. has long been convinced and he has studied out a plan by which he thinks this deepening process can be put into execution. Supposing that the river is a half mile or three-quarters of a mile wide on an average, he would have rows of piles driven in slanting directions from out each bank, towards the center of the river, leaving a space in the middle of the channel free from this piling. As a river, leaving a space in the middle of the channel free from this piling. As a natural consequence, the banks on either side would become gradually extended, (the piles acting to stop all debris, and gradually causing the formation of artificial ground), so that finally the water would be thrown out into the 300-foot channel in the middle of the river. This, of course, would gradually be-come deepened, as the artificial banks on either side extended outward until on either side extended outward, until finally it would acquire a sufficient depth to allow navigation of all sorts. "I have experimented on this scheme somewhat" said Mr. Haddon, after he had fully explained his ideas"and I believe that it can be successfully carried into exe-cution. Certainly such a river running through the state would be an immense advantage to the farmers who desire cheap transportation for their grain."
