The Day They Celebrate. St. Patrick's day dawned bright, beautiful and spring-like on the Missouri slope. A warm sun and a cloudless sky marked the great Irish holiday, typifying the bright hopes of early freedom in the hearts of the sons and daughters of the Emerald isle. Since the abandonment of public parades in Omaha years ago the day has been observed in a quiet way, some attending religious services in honor of the pioneer of christianity in Western Europe, while others observed it in its modern character as an Irish national holiday. The present anniversary, however, gives Irishmen and sons of Irishmen substantial reasons for rejoicing. Never since the infamous era of Castlereigh and the abolition of the Irish parliament in 1801 has the control of the property of the last than the last chance of peaceful warfare has disappeared England will be fought. Ireland will not yield, she cannot fly, she must tight. Who can contempt of the parliament in 1801 has the control of the property of the last time and the charge. When the last chance of peaceful warfare has disappeared England will be fought. Ireland will not yield, she cannot fly, she must tight. Who can contempt of the property o the Irish parliament in 1801 has prospect for home rule and the right of Ireland to make her own laws approached nearer accomplishment than at the present time. The abortive efforts of sincere but misguided men to reach the same end by physical force only strengthened the conviction that moral force and unity were the only roads to success. When Charles Stewart Parnell threw his fame and fortune on the side of Irish independence, less than ten years ago, no one imagined that in 1886 he would stand at the head of united Ireland, representing the will and the wishes, nay the demands, of nineteentwentieths of the people, and backed by millions of exiled Irishmen in every quarter of the globe. He speaks through his lieutenants in every county in Ireland, while in the heart of the English metropolis he himself gives voice form to the only plans for legislative independence which will be acceptable to the Irish people. The position of the Irish mem-bers in and out of parliament is impreg-nable. The life of ministries depend on their support, and the price of that support is a parliament in Dublin and the right of the Irish people to legislate for themselves. Perhaps the day of jubilee is farther away than the more sanguine hope, nevertheless the Irish people have the best of reasons for rejoicing and reuniting under the green flag with a determination to pursue the present pathway to certain victory.

The place and date of St. Patrick's birth are alike uncertain. Some place that event at A. D. 377, while others main-ain that it was at least ten years later. A tew have thought that he was born near reliable biographers incline to the opinion that he was born at Boulogne-sur-Mer, in France. When a youth he was taken captive by a band of pirates and taken to Ireland and sold as a slave. He remained thus ix years, when effecting his escape he went to France and became a monk. In 431 he was sent as a missionary to Ireland, where his labors were eminently successful. It is the boast of the Irish people that they accepted the faith without committing a single act of violence against the apostle or his disciples, but that no violence has ever been able to turn them from that faith. Though St. Patrick was a religious, rather than a political hero, the day has long since come to have a political signification. In all quarters of the world Irishmen gathered together yes-terday to recount the glories and suffer-ings of their native land and to consult

The celebration of St. Patrick's day was fitly closed in Omaha last evening by the grand entertainment given at the Boyd by the united Irish societies for the benefit of the Irish parliamentary fund. There was a large attendance, the house being tilled with an enthusiastic and attentive audience. No especial decorations had been prepared for the occasion, but the flag of Ireland and the stars and stripes waved from either side of the stage, while pictures of St. Patrick, Robert Emmet and Charles Stewart Parnell were nung conspicuously in the background. The meeting was called to order at 8:20 by Hon. John A. McShane, president of the Irish National League, who presided as chairman, and the following gentlemen were named as vice-presidents and took seats on the platform-was Irish melodies by the orchestra, arranged as a delightful medley, which was ranged as a delightful medley, which was rendered in a pleasing manner. The announcement of the song "Killarney," by Miss I. Lorine Gibson was greeted with applause, which was redoubled as the young lady appeared on the platform. The song was rendered in a sweet manner, which completely captivated the audience and called for an encore, to which Miss Gibson responded. Several elegant baskets of flowers were also presented over the footlights.

President McShane then announced at the effort to secure Hon. William J. Hynes to deliver the address had proved unavailing, although it was not known until too late an hour to secure a substi-tute. Hon. Patrick Egan, who had also promised to be present and preside at the meeting, had been detained at the last moment and could not be present. He expressed his regrets at the disappoint-ment and begged the indulgence of the audience. He then introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. T. B. Mina-han.

As the gentleman stepped forward, he was greeted with a round of applause which his subsequent address proved him to be worthy of. It was a masterly effort, and for an hour he held the closest atten-tion of the audience with his bursts of eloquence, being frequently interrupted by hearty applause. His address, in sub-stance, was as follows:

Hatred for England runs in the blood of the Irishman, whether he be at the equator or in the frozen north. For the wrongs she has heaped upon the heads of his countrymen, and the tyranny with which she has oppressed his native land, the Irishman will curse the government of England until the latest generation. England's boast is a proud one. The drum tap of her hired soldners calls thousands to her paid support. Ireland's boast is a prouder one. She rules with boast is a prouder one. She rules with love, and the hand of Parnell holds at his willing beck the united millions of Ireagain take her place among nations of the world. the nations of the world. Right well may Irishmen look proudly on their flag—not a spot on it, not a blemish—unconquered it floats, as it always has. Ireland's spirit is unbroken. Parnell is leading her men to the pinnacle of a political Pisgah where even we can look and see the promised land.

Americans, do you marvel that the Irish people can never forgive the infamous tyranny of English rule in Ireland? It would be vain to attempt to picture the dark reality of Ireland's wrongs. Irishmen have been com-pelled to be the hewers of wood Irlshmen, the destinies of your native land are trembling in the balance at this very time. England and Ireland are awaiting the action of Parnell. There he stands, calm and silent, and he is steadily closing toward the parliamentary Appoclosing toward the parliamentary Appo-mattox. Is he not the man to rally around and give the fullest support? America can act no mean part in this struggle. Ireland calls for America's en-lightened public opinion, not for her force of arms. The struggle is almost over. England now only speaks of the terms of surrender. Twenty years from now we will see Ireland swing into line as among the nations of the earth, and go forward to a splendid and glorious future.

After the rendition of a medley over-ture by the orchestra, Miss Stacia Crowley stirringly recited, in a manner which completely captured the audience, how Irish "Captain Mollie" beat back the Hessians at the battle of Monmouth, and was rewarded by hearty applause and offerings of flowers. "Ireland and America," written by Mrs. Alexander Sullivan, was feelingly recited by Mr. Ed. Larkin, who was followed by Miss Fannie Arnold in the song, "Oft in the Stilly Night," which she rendered both artis-tically and charmingly. The entertain-ment closed with the stirring chovus, "God Save Ireland," the choir being led by E. McCrary.

THE OTHER SIDE.

What Mr. Hammond Has to Say About the "Strike." Mr. Geo. H. Hammond, the dressed

beef man, now in this city, stated to a reporter for the BEE last night, that all trouble at his packing house had been adjusted and that work would be resumed to-day at full capacity. "The fact is," he continued, "that the places of the strik-Dumbarton on the Clyde. But his most | ing men have all been filled long ago (we could have filled them three times over) and there would not have been any trouble had not false and exaggerated trouble had not false and exaggerated reports of the so-called strike been circulated. The supply of cattle very naturally fell off, and we could not get enough to kill. Why, there was really no strike at all. A few drunken butchers who spind half of their time and all of their money in low grogshops, chose to walk out. Their places were speedily filled, and that is all the affair amounted to. "How did the trouble originate? Over a very small matter. I can assure you. There was a boy in our employ you. There was a boy in our employ whom we had brought from Hammond, ndiana, and were paying $3 a day. Mr. eday had orders from his father to alow the boy money enough to pay for his board and lodging and all necessary clothing, and remit the balance to him. The young man, who is but 17 years old, got into hard company, fell to drinking, and became dissipated. He wrote home to his father, saying that he wanted to spend his own money, and then became angry because we would not turn over to him the full amount of his wages. His father came to Omaha and took him home, and some of his drunken friends this a pretext for inaugurating what they chose to term a strike. They are now the sickest lot of men you ever saw. That is the gist of the whole affair. Tomorrow killing will be resumed with a full set of men, and we can handle all the cattle we are able to get."

Return of the Thurstons.

The Thurston hose team, flushed with success, returned from New Orleans last evening bearing the trophies of their vietories. They arrived on the Missouri Pacific train at 6:30 o'clock, but although their coming had been heralded, no brass band, no delegation of citizens, but only Councilman Behm and three reporters were at the depot to greet them. The returning party numbered twenty-eight, and all declared that they had had a royal good time. Cart and hose were unloaded from the train and the boys pulled the apparatus up town. On the way they were greeted by a few feeble cheers, but demonstration marked the return of the victors.

Brevities.

The police have been informed of a revolting rape case, of which a sick colored woman living at the corner of Tenth and Capitol avenue was the victim, at the hands of a white man. The latter is still at large and the woman is reported to be in a precarious state of health.

A colored woman came up to police court vesterday to ask Judge Stenberg to swear out a warrant for the arrest of another woman who had thrown a tub of hot soansads on her. The judge was too busy to attend to her case and she promised to call later.

The perennial crop of green ribbons sprouted well yesterday and the bits of silk cloth of Ireland's national color were to be seen on many a coat lapel. Quite a number of sprigs of the sham-rock planted on Jefferson square a few years ago, were also noticed.

A Saloonkeeper Convicted.

Peter Schmitz, the Cuming street saloon man, was convicted by a jury in the police court yesterday of having sold liquor to minors, and was fined $25 and costs by Judge Stenberg. THE OLD GAS ORDINANCE.

A Movement Being Made to Repeal It.

The following is the text of the ordinance introduced in the city council providing for the repeal of the old gas ordinance. It recites:

gas ordinance. It recites:

WHEREAS, At the time of the passage of such ordinance. No. 139, the mayor and council had no authority or power to pass said ordinance or to grant to any person or corporation an exclusive right or franchise to use the streets of said city for the purpose of laying gas pipes therein or for any other nursoes: and

WANT TO RETAIN HIM. The Members of the Baptist Church

Express Their Appreciation of Mr. Harris' Work.

Rev J. W. Harris, of the First Baptist church, is undecided as to what course to pursue, with regard to his resignation. At the meeting held at the church the question of retaining him in his present relation came up and was acted upon by silent ballot. One hundred and one members of the church voted to retain the pastor, while fortyfive cast their ballots the other way. The membership of the church is about 300, so that more than one-half of the congregation did not vote. "I want you to understand," said Mr. Seaman, whose circular letter against smoking, addressed to Pastor Harris, has already been mentioned in the Bee, "that I have got nothing against our minister except his vile habit of smoking, which I know to have been a stumbling block in the way of many. This habit I think he ought to drop, and I sent out the cir-cular letter as I did to call his attention and that of the congregation directly and forcibly to the pernicionsness of the habit. I am on good terms with Mr Harris, have had a thorough understand-ing with him and he thinks more of me ow, I have no doubt, than he did be

"Another thing I want you to notice," concluded Mr. Seaman, 'and that is that this circular letter of mine had nothing to do with the meeting last night. That was called independently by some of the members of the church who think that Mr. Harris' term of usefulness as pas-tor, of our church has closed and desire to secure another man."

HE DID NOT FLINCH.

A Reminiscence Called to Mind by Death of an Old Mail Clerk. News has just been received in Omaha of the death, in Baltimore, of P. L. Killingsworth, who was well known in Omaba, having been for years in charge of the through mails between Omaha and Davenport. Mr. Kiilingsworth was appointed to his position as mail agent through the influence of Postmaster General Cresswell, on account of valuable services to the union in the Baltimore riots during the war of the rebellion. Mr. Killingworth's own relatives and those of his wife in Baitimore were wealty, and he did not need to enter government employ for a livelihood, but he chose to be independent and to earn his own living. Some three or four years ago the position of through mail agent, which he occupied, was abrogated. before this time he was bequeathed a competency by a relative, and so when his services were no longer in requisition he re-turned to Baltimore, where he re-mained enjoying a quiet existence up to the time of his death.

Mr. Killingsworth was in the mail and express car when the Younger and James boys perpetrated the robbery near Anita in 1873, and was bruised considerably when the obstructions derailed the train. One of the robbers held a revolver to his head and cried, "Show me the bullion—where's the bullion—quick, or I'll blow your d—d head off!" Mr. Killingsworth pointed to a pile of bricks of silver and bars of gold on the floor of the car, and said: "There's the bullion." "D-d that stuff! Where's that bullion? Ye can't fool me. Quick, now (rapping Mr. K. on the head with the butt of the revolver)-where's the bullion?" that time another robber who had com pelled the express messenger to open the safe, had bagged its contents, gave a safe, had bagged its contents, gave a signal, and Mr. K.'s robber jumped from the car with his victim's watch and wallet. Mr. K. was also a witness against one of the Younger boys, at the trial for the celebrated robbery committed at Northfield, Minn.

The Building Inspector. Councilman Bailey, of the committee to whom the matter of revising the building ordinance was referred some time ago, met yesterday with City Attorney Connell and City Engineer Rosewater to draft the new ordinance. The matter was informally discussed for some time, and the result is that a new ordinance and the result is that a new ordinance will be framed in time for introduction at the next meeting of the council. "This ordinance," said Mr. Baily to a reporter, "will be based upon the old one, which is really a good one. Heretofore the chief of the fire department has had to act as a building inspector, but on account of other duties has had but little time to attend to this branch of work. time to attend to this branch of work. The new ordinance will create the office of building inspector, who will be obliged to issue permits for the erection of all new buildings, of whatsoever nature, within the city limits."

Police Court Docket. Frank McNamara, Tom Connolly and Joseph Meyers were fined $5 and costs in police court yesterday for drunkenness. Meyers could not pay and went to the county jail. George Robinson was

His constant illtreatment of his wife was a theme of comment on the part of the neighbors who, however, did not interfere to pre-yent his brutality. For some time past Freeman has been wooing a grass widow in Council Bluffs. Mrs. Chase by name, whose husband had deserted her on account of her giddy conduct, and a plar was formed between the two to elope. This scheme was carried out, and Tues day the twain shook the dust of Omaha from their feet and departed for California, taking advantage of the cheap rates Before going, Freeman took care to dispose of all his valuable property, leaving nothing whatever for the wife. She knew that he was going, and asked him for a share of the money that he was jingling in his pockets. He replied by throwing lown $1.50 on the table, saying at the same time, "Go to —, you —, I'm going to quit ye." Mrs. Freeman has three children to support, and is reported to be in destitute circumstances. She is undecided what to do.

Lawless Men Arrested. Thomas Lawless and John H. Walburn were arrested by the police yesterday afternoon on the bottoms near the water works pumping house and taken to the central police station and locked up. The former was arrested on a warrant sworn out by James Henry, who lives in the locality where the arrest occurred. He claims that Lawless, whose name correl sponds with his character, has been continually raising a disturbance in that neighborhood, and while drunk has made breats against Henry and his family Walburn, the other man arrested, had been ordered to leave town as a suspicious character, but was discovered by the police in company with Lawless.
