John Short has prepared a communication for Progress, which will appear in its next issue. He is using his pen as well as his brains in the helping along of labor interests, and seems to lese none of his enthusiasm in his favorite cause. Plattner's hall has been left unlocked night after night, and vagrants, who are quick to take advantage of any such opening, have been sleeping there. On Sunday night, in some careless way, they set fire to some banners in the hall, and there was a narrow escape from a damag The stock of millinery goods of Mrs. O.

When Mr. Moody was here recently, Rev. Mr. Croft, of the Congregational church, wrote some appropriate verses entitled: "Go Forward." Since then the verses have been set to music, and on Sunday evening the choir at the Con-gregational church sang the verses, the hearers seeming greatly pleased with Labor organizations in the city are arranging to take action to urge the repre-sentatives from this county to aid rather than oppose the Knight bill providing for the protection of laborers in factories and securing their wages. Several letters have already been written to the senator and representatives, and more formal action is to be taken at once.

Died, Sunday morning, at her home, No. 417 South First street, Mrs. Hannah A. Smith, wife of D. W. Smith, engineer of the City Roller mills. She had a long illness, and was aged 42 years. She had resided in this city for nearly five years, having resided previously in Missouri Valley. The body will be taken to Dunlap to-day to be laid beside her father and mother, this being her special re-

At an early hour yesterday morning there was a family row on Engle avenue. The most there was to be seen by the out-side world was the form of the wife being pushed out of doors by the irate husof another name. After Smith had pushed the woman roughly out of doors, he is then said to have grabbed her and dragged her back into the house, and the door closed on the scene. The screams and sounds of a big row left the imagination plenty of ground on which to Congressman Lyman's Suit. A suit was started yesterday in the circuit court which is somewhat of a surprise to many, and which indicates that Congressman Lyman does not care enough for being re-elected to use any policy. He has commenced a suit against the county treasurer to prevent the collection of special assessments made by the city against his residence property on First avenue, and certified up to the county treasurer for collection. The as-Lyman protests, and which Congressman Lyman protests, and which he refuses to pay, are for the placing of curbing in front of his residence, grading and a new sidewalk. The total amount which he thus proposes to tight is about $75. The reasons he assigns for refusing to pay are that the city has no legal right to make such assessments, that no notice was given him, that the 10 per cent interest charged is illegal, and that the sidewalk was not laid according to the requirements of the ordinance.

The Sewer Ditch. There seems a pretty fair prospect for a long litigation in regard to M. Vincent's claim that he has the contract for extending the new sewer ditch south of the city. In view of the possibilities of delay, and the importance of having the work done as soon as possible, arrangements were being planned yesterday for the work to proceed, and the questions in litigation to be settled afterwards. If such an arrangement can be completed the sewer ditch can be made a practical outlet, and then the city and Mr. Vincent can determine their rights at their lei are.

THE SPRING CITY CLEANING

The New Broom Sweeping Clean, and No More Short Dress Parades.

TROUBLED MUCH WITH TRAMPS.

Congressman Lyman Refuses To Pay For a New Sidewalk-The Fitzgeralds Can Be Accommodated-The Knight Bill.

Spring Cleaning Up. The avowed policy of the new city administration to have the streets cleaned up morally as well as otherwise seems not to have been given out for mere buncombe. The order that all saloons should be closed on Sunday was pretty generally observed, only two or three violations being reported, and these offenders were yesterday interviewed by the chief of police to learn whether they understood the order and whether they intended to obey or not. The trouble seems to be that such orders have been issued from time to time by the old administration until the cry of "wolf" has ceased to have any force. Some of the saloon men say that if it is evident that all are to be treated alike and all made to close, they will cheerfully comply, but if some are to be allowed to keep open then they want the same privilege. It is generally conceded that this time all are to be treated alike, and there will be no distinction made as to fowl and fish. The saloon men had a secret meeting yesterday, the result of which is not known, but it is understood that the chief theme of talk was the question of license.

Another feature of reform started by the new administration is in regard to prostitutes, who have been heretofore alowed to parade the streets rather boldly. The chief of police has been notifying them personally that hereafter they will not be allowed to appear on the streets in short dresses or in any dress which shall serve as an advertisement of their busi-ness. When it is necessary for them to be upon the streets they shall so array themselves and so conduct themselves as not to draw public attention to their character and occupation. Other practical suggestions have been given them, with the assurance that if they do not heed these hints they will be treated in a manner which will cause life to be a burden. Some of the other proposed changes in the street manners of the city are to be put into effect as soon as pos

Troublesome Tramps.

Under the new order of things vagrants are to be made to either go to work for themselves, leave the city, or go to work on the streets. There were in jail over Sunday twelve of this class who had been sentenced to ten days each at labor. Lest they should fall asleep and roll out of the city calaboose they were put into the new revolving jail of the county. They proved to be over-smart, in their own opinions, and attempted to cause Jailer O'Neil a good deal of trouble. When ordered into their cells they were in no hurry to comply, and when an attempt was made to revolve the jail they stopped its rotation. O'Neil had invested in a good revolver of another kind, and promised to show them how it would revolve if the jail didn't. They came to time, and yesterday morning they had bread and water for breakfast. They were then marched up to the city jail and from there started out to work on the streets with shovels in their hands and chains on their legs. In the afternoon seven of the twelve balked and declared they would work no longer. They were accommodated, but given to understand that no work, no feed, except bread and water. This sort of diet will soon cause them to change their minds about

The Knight Bill. COUNCIL BLUFFS, March 22 .- [To the BEE.]-Allow me to make a few statements in your widely read paper to clear up the cloud that is agitating labor by the statements in the Nonpareil yesterday. The Knight bill in the senate now will not be affected by a public meeting, which did not take place except in a private office, and on paper, and not attended by any number of Council Bluffs manufacturers, but only a few real estate and tax title gentlemen, who are not much concerned in labor. At the right place it will not be believed that Council Bluffs will stand out against most of the manufacturing eastern states, against civilization, Christianity, morality and common sense by opposing a bill for the protection of labor. Council Bluffs has been made ridiculous enough with its mayor's bills, gaming and scheming. Labor would not tolerate such resolutions to be carried as were published. If this is not believed, only let the gentleman try it once instead of publishing it.

AUTOGRAPHS.

Collector. Chicago Herald: Among the best of these is one owned by Mrs. George M. Moulton, who has spent over seven years in gathering a collection that now com-prises between six and seven hundred autographs, arranged in over seventy well filled and carefully classified vol-umes, with letters enough to fill a dozen volumes that have not yet been ar-

The Interesting Album of a Zealous on November 13th, 1878, a timid little note was sent to Theodore Thomas, asking him for his autograph. Had the note remained unanswered it would forever have restrained Mrs. Moulton's autograph hunting proclivities, but Mr. Thomas courteously returned his signature, and to his politeness is greatly due ture, and to his politeness is greatly due the present valuable callection. It is particularly rich in treasures of American history, nearly twenty volumes being de-yoted to the pen tracks of the men who founded this government, or have been running it. Nearly all the signers of the declaration of independence are there, and most of the prominent leaders in the zovernment a century ago - George Washington and all the presidents, John Hancock, Josiah Bar; lett, Cæsar Rodney, Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Francis Hopkins, Arthur Lee, Walter Living-stone and scores of other dead and forgotten lights of the dark days of our country's earlier history. A sharp and caustic letter characteristic of Aaron Burr is among the number. To whom it is written cannot be told, for is simply endorsed "A. B. to G. E. He writes:

"It will be out of my power to receive you at 8 o'clock to-morrow morning, or at any other hour to-morrow, it being a day of extreme and oppressive occupa-tion. Whatever is thought or imagined can be written, the more especially by one who has so great a command of the English language as you have. Your refusal I consider as mere obstinacy and disobligingness.

John Quincy Adams writes to thank a thoughtful neighbor for a present of a barrel of flour, and in the collection is an affectionate letter written by Gen. Grant to Mrs. Grant while the general was at-tending a soldiers' reunion at Minnetonka Beach, Minn., Sept. 28, 1883. About three months before he was shot, in the course of a general conversation with a little family group at Gen. Garfield's home at Mentor, the subject of changes in signatures came up. "Here are the changes," said the general, "I have made from time to time," and taking a slip of paper, he showed his various signatures as a school how state. as a school boy, state senator' member of congress and president. The slip now forms a part of Mrs. Moulton's collection. There are several interesting relics of the war, among them a prophetic letter from Robert C. Greer, of Pennsylvania, one of the justices of the supreme court of the United States, written December 29th, 1865, to A. H. Smith, New York. In it Judge Greer says:

it Judge Greer says:
"I begin to fear this will be my tast quarter's salary from the United States. Buchanan is wholly unequal to the occasion. He is surrounded by enemies of the Union. "Bill Arp" feels called upon to give a bit of advice to an applicant for his autograph, and writes:

"Let no man hanker after sudden wealth. It would embarrass him. A big pile of surplus money will make a fool of anybody on short acquaintance. "CHARLES H. SMITH."

(Bill Arp.) "Dear Eli," Mrs. Moulton wrote to that genial liar of liars, Eli Perkins, "please give me your autograph." The answer

"MY DEAR FLORA: I am sorry to say I cannot give you my autograph. I promised my wife after marriage never to correspond with any other girl. Of course, I would be glad to give you my verbal autograph, but I cannot send it to you in a letter. You appreciate the trouble I am in no doubt. Yours affectionately, ELI PERKINS." (Melville D. Landon.)

Another from the same source, from its intentional lack of punctuation, becomes quite humorous:

"May a kind heaven always protect you from your friend ELI PERKINS."

"Bob" Burdette finds it hard to be funny in answer to all requests for his autograph, so he scribbled. There is a time for all things under the sun; There's a time to weep and a time to laugh, But the time when you can't think of anything fun-Ny is when you're asked for your autograph? Roment J. Burdette. But five autographs of Shakspeare are in existence, and of these three are in the m existence, and of these three are in the British Museum.

Among the most prized screeds in the collection is the entire manuscript copy of "Kathleen Mayourneen" and "Dermot Asthore," with the music revised and inscribed to Mrs. Moulton, by and from her friend F. Nicholas Crouch, with a beautiful little madrigal, "Flora," composed for and dedicated to Mrs. Moulton by Prof. Crouch. There is also a letter from Charles de Rudio, of the Seventh cavalry, U.S. A., one the three men who tried to assassinate Louis Napoleon. De Rudio was condemned to death and his head was already on the block when beautiful wife rushed frantically through the crowd waving a pardon that saved his life, but forever banished him from France.

There is a wealth of interesting reminders of people we all know in Mrs. Moulton's collection, and there are but two others in the city that will compare with in—one owned by C. F. Gunther, the other by Attorney Laing.

CAUSED BY A CRIME.

Sixteen Years a Wanderer - Return at Last to Die at Home. An Evansville, Ind., special of March 19th says: There arrived in this city to-and died fifteen minutes after his arrival and died fifteen minutes after his arrival here, at the residence of a sister. The man's name was Eugene B. Van Devier, and his family is one of the most prominent in Posey county. The story of Van Devier's flight and wanderings is of a sensational order. Your correspondent obtained the following story to-night from his aunt, Mrs. Filingham: In September, 1870, during the progress of the county fair at New Harmony, a party of young men became involved in a dispute, all being more or less under the influence of liquor, which was renewed at a saloon in town late in the evening, fluence of liquor, which was renewed at a saloon in town late in the evening, when a general fight ensued, knives and pistols being freely used.

During the row four or five pistol shots were fired, young Van Devier being one of the men doing the shooting, and Warren Pitts, who was engaged in the disturbance, received a ball in the left breast, dying almost instantly, while another man named Dietz was seriously wounded but eventually recovered. The wounded, but eventually recovered. The parties were arrested at the time, but it was impossible to convict on account of the impossibility of procuring direct evi About a year after this trial the grand jury of Posey again commenced investi-gating the matter, and before any indictment was returned, young Van De-vier left the state. A true bill for murder was subsequently found against him, and a reward of $1,000 offered for his capture. Several detectives followed him at vari Several detectives followed him at various times, but he was always warned and succeeded in eluding them. Finally, pursuit was abandoned, and the incident well nigh forgotten. But Van Devier was uneasy. His conscience troubled him, and he walked all over the south, most of the time being spent at St. Francisville, Ark., where he went under the name of Edward Geary. He kept up a desultory correspondence with his relatives and a few intimate associates, but tives and a few intimate associates, but was never betrayed.

About a year ago a wound in the left lung, which he received in the fatal fair ground fight, began troubling him and gradually developed into consumption. Knowing his hours were numbered he longed to come back to the scenes of his boyhood, and friends at St. Francisville furnished him means by which he could return and die among his relatives and friends. But his strength failed him and his dream of seeing his boyhood home again was never realized.

In all his letters he never disclaimed the shooting, but thought his shot took effect in Dietz, who recovered, but he could not say positively, as several were shooting at the same time. All parties concerned in the fight were highly connected, and with the death of Van Devier all hopes will probably die of ever discov-ering who killed Pitts. Van Devier's re-mains will be taken to Posey county to-
