"Square Biggs, one of the oldest residents of the city, paid a friendly call yesterday on Square Biggs at the Congregational office here by Square Biggs in 1860. Biggs was elected justice of the peace, and has since then held office almost continually. To Square Biggs was due his political start.

The old lady, in one of her hallored religious editorials in support of issuing a paper on Sunday, and as a defense against the recent criticisms of the pulpit, says: "The Master gave us the parable of the sower in the field on the Sabbath day when in search of the lambs." Some of those who are better versed in the scriptures than the old lady are anxiously inquiring in what part of the bible the religious editor finds the hunting for the stray lamb was on the Sabbath.

Col. Jas. T. Long, the Kentucky temperance orator, employed by the grand lodge of Good Templars in Iowa, is to give an address here, in the old opera house, March 30. It is said to be one of the ablest and most logical speakers on the temperance platform in this region.

About a week ago Mr. Charles Dobbins and family left their home in Underwood to take up a new home at Leopolis, Neb. Mrs. Dobbins is in ill health, suffering from consumption, when the farewells were said to old friends at the funeral, and the deepest sympathy is expressed for the father and children thus called on to mourn.

Yesterday morning, at 7 o'clock, death ended the sufferings of Mrs. Mary E. Hardy, wife of J. H. Hardy, who is in the employ of Senman's transfer line. Mrs. Hardy was born in Seneca, Iowa, and MeKeen county, Pennsylvania. She leaves beside her husband, her father, a resident of Keg Creek, and several brothers and sisters. She had been ill with consumption for about a year, but not seriously so until this past winter. The funeral will be held Thursday morning, the remains to be taken from the home, No. 2,238 Avenue A, to the Catholic church, where services will be held at 9 o'clock.

A short time ago the Nonpareil, in pasting its clippings into its daily scrap-book, forgot to change the wording, and made itself ridiculous by asserting that Mrs. Whitney's elegant mansion was located on Sixth avenue "in this city." Yesterday the old lady had another snipped article, which she pasted into her scrap-book, and forgot to change the wording, so that her readers were asked to still believe that Mrs. Whitney's residence is "in this city" and that she is a resident of the "Joe," by Mrs. James Brown Potter, at Mrs. Whitney's reception "had so scandalized this city." The old lady should use her glasses, as well as her scissors, in snipping.

PRAYERS FOR THE PEOPLE.

Wonderfully Successful Revival Meetings on Sixth Avenue.

REV. REICHENBACH SURPRISED.

Judge Love Wrathly at the Non-Attendance of Jurors—The Orphan Lad—Tramps Working on the Streets.

A Wonderful Revival.

There are being held a series of revival meetings at the corner of Sixth avenue and Fifteenth street which have been wonderfully successful, and have excited attention and awakened an interest throughout that portion of the city.

Overton has been conducting the meetings. The building used is one which was built for a school, but which has since been changed into a mission. Sunday night there were fully 500 people gathered there, the room being crowded to the utmost and the crowd standing outside thickly packed around the building, unable to gain admittance.

There were present at the Sunday school in the afternoon seventy-eight persons. Each evening there is also a big crowd, there being not even standing room. Last night the crowd was so dense that those who were tramped on the sidewalk, and the speaker had to mount a bench, that being the only platform left him.

A number of persons with the reputation of having been hard cases have been converted. One man who had the maliciousness to disturb the meetings by mocking the praying, shouting "Amen," etc., for the purpose of annoying the others, is now among the most enthusiastic converts. The religious boom in that part of the city promises to result in the organization of a strong church within a very short time, steps having been taken in that direction.

The United States court met yesterday, Judge Love presiding. The call of jurors showed that in the panel for the circuit court only two of the twenty-four were present. In the district court panel twelve out of the twenty-four responded, but three of these were excused, thus leaving out of forty-eight jurors only eleven ready for service.

The judge was wrathly at this showing, and ordered bench warrants to be issued to bring in the laggards. This created a storm among the jurors, many of whom were standing about the front of the building outside, not realizing that their presence in the room was so necessary at that time. Some were called in to fill the panel, among whom was Charlie Adcock, who came here from Kansas last week to visit friends. Charlie is suffering from a fractured arm, and in his crippled condition wended his way into the box, but had no time to make known the fact that he was only a visitor here before all the jurors were excused to take seats in other parts of the room. Charlie Adcock, understanding that he was excused until this morning, went off, and soon his name being called again, the judge ordered him brought in on a bench warrant to answer to a contempt of court. As soon as the matter was explained the young man was released, but he will be careful hereafter how he hangs around a court room when he has a fractured arm, and he will not be approached carelessly on the subject.

A Happy Surprise.

On Monday night the Rev. Mr. Reichenbach, pastor of the Scandinavian Baptist church, was happily surprised by a large company of friends, members of his church and congregation, together with others, who marched into his residence in a body without warning. The surprise was complete. The evening was happily spent in social chatting, music, etc. One of the pleasant features was the presentation to the pastor of a well filled purse, a worthy expression of the appreciation felt for his services. He has been an earnest, faithful laborer, and to him as much as to any one man is due the fact that there is now a new church in which to worship. He has been wonderfully successful, and has borne his burden and performed his labors with a willingness and self sacrifice which has endeared him to all. It is hoped that he may be able to bring the church building enterprise to a successful ending, by having the building free from debt. For this he is now working earnestly, and his people are standing by him nobly.

They Don't Like Work.

The working of tramps on the streets continues to be attended by difficulties. Only five out of the dozen in the gang would do any work yesterday, but they were marched out on the streets and kept there sitting around and loafing all the afternoon until the moon was high, where dinner was served to only those who had worked. In the afternoon two of the bally fellows managed to make good their escape. While sitting on the curbstone they slipped off their shoes, and fled from the scene. They were then taken to the lock up, and for those who would work, bread and water for those who balk.

The Orphan Lad.

The press of this city has been a little premature in announcing that Ross L. Folger "has been taken," as the Nonpareil says, "by Hon. William Paxton, of Omaha." The boy is such a bright and gentlemanly fellow and having by his mother's insane act in taking her own life on Thursday last, been left an orphan, with no relatives to look after the welfare, Mr. Paxton did not put his hand in his pocket and hand him $10, and also told Mr. L. J. Van Orman, the Union Pacific hotel manager, to give young Folger a room and care, until he could be provided for from the east when he would see that the boy was provided for. Mr. Paxton went east on last Thursday evening and has not yet returned, so there is no telling what he will do.

Now is the time to get bargains in gross grain silks. A few of the best shades, such as navy, navy, white, bronzes, and myrtles, will be closed out this week at E. Dowling's.

Merely Married.

At the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. A. L. Gilbert, No. 389 Scott street, last evening, W. W. Chapman was united in marriage to Miss Anna Gilbert. Mr. Chapman is one of the wide awake young business men of this city, with a wide circle of friends, who congratulate him heartily on having won so worthy a bride. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of invited friends. Eddie Gilbert and Miss Reine attended the happy couple. The rooms were adorned with floral decorations, and all the details were in keeping with the joyfulness of the occasion.

How a Shoemaker Wins $15,000 in Gold.

Frederick Schnarf, a shoemaker of 701 De Kalb avenue, Brooklyn, received notice that a Louisiana lottery ticket, had drawn the capital prize Feb. 9th, of $25,000, entitling him to $15,000. One of his friends named Meyers, one day lathered him to buy a lottery ticket for $1. The two men got a list of the lucky numbers and Schnarf was among them. Wanting to do with the money he had not decided, although a multitude of advisers are seeking to give him wisdom.—New York Tribune, Feb. 16.

A COMICAL ADVENTURE.

An American Imprisoned and Fined for Joking in Bad German.

Washington Republican: Some time ago a successful but somewhat impudent young man, residing in the valley of the Mississippi, married a beautiful maiden who had fled from a convent in order to share the joy and burden of life with him. It was determined that the wedding trip should comprise a tour of Europe.

The excursion across the sea and as far as Heribral, near where Belgian borders on the confines of Rhinish Prussia, was accomplished in a piping and pleasant way.

At Heribral the French "garde" gave way to a German "schaffner," and when the young American was asked by the new conductor to show his ticket, he swiftly marshaled the "schaffner" to the station and inquired: "Shud wir in Prussien?" (Are we in Prussia?) and, receiving an affirmative answer, he said: "Aus diessen land kommen alle unseere spitzen bubben her?" ("From this country come all of our tramps.")

Among the Germans of the Mississippi valley the word "spitzbuben" is sometimes used in the sense of tramp. In Germany it means a thief. What was more unfortunate still, the railroad on which the American was traveling was the property of the state, and the conductor knew the regulation uniform of the imperial railway service, and according to law as well as to public sentiment an insult offered to a uniformed person of the imperial railway service, in any capacity, is a grave misdemeanor, punishable with fine or imprisonment or both.

When the conductor heard the words of the American he replied with some exclamation which was interpreted as "spitzbuben sind wir wir in Aachen ankommen." (I will show you where the spitzbuben are when we arrive at Aachen.) The window of the coupe went down with a crash, and the train crossed the Prussian frontier, on over a spur of the Ardennes, and twenty minutes later rolled into Aachen, the famous old Kaiserstadt.

The conductor was true to his promise. As the train halted two policemen approached the coupe occupied by the bride and groom, and requested the husband to step out. He indignantly refused, and was helped out. No words were wasted. No explanations were allowed. The prisoner was hurried along the dark and narrow streets of the city, and in a few minutes was confined in a prison cell, and unable to comprehend what was transpiring saw her husband dragged forcibly from her, and found herself alone at night in a strange land, amidst strange faces, hustled along by an officer of the law toward a second-class hotel, where she threw herself on a sofa and lay prostrate for hours, dumfounded at the whole remarkable scene which had taken place. About midnight a policeman came to the United States consulate, and, arousing the consul, related the case. The consul, handing him the prisoner's passport, intimated that the American citizen would like to have him call at the prison as early as possible the next day.

The consul dressed himself and went to the place of imprisonment at once. He found the American in a narrow cell resting on a bed of straw. He told the story of his misfortune and begged the consul to ascertain the whereabouts of his wife and afford her all necessary protection. The consul left the prison and proceeded to the residence of the chief of police, where he presented the details of the case to that officer with the request that the American should be released, vouching at the same time for his appearance at court the next day. The chief of police release was granted, and at 3 o'clock in the morning the western gentleman was given back to his young bride, whom he found half crazed with fright and anxiety.

At 10 a. m. the next day all parties concerned met at the office of the police commissioner, and the consul, fully aware of the severity of the courts in all cases of majestats beleidigung (insult to the crown) endeavored to effect a settlement, but without avail.

The testimony was heard. The conductor swore that the prisoner said, "Alle Prussien sind spitzen bubben." (All Prussians are spitzen bubben.) The American insisted that the conductor had misunderstood him, and that he had only intended to say in fun that "from Prussia came all of our western tramps." Of course the grave German court saw nothing very funny about it, and the consul's testimony having been taken, the prisoner was sent before the assizes, where the evidence was reviewed, and from there the case went to the schaffengericht for final trial.

It usually requires days, and sometimes weeks to dispose of such a case, but by energetic management seven months after the alleged offense had been committed the final judgment of the court was made known. The prisoner was sentenced to pay a fine of $90, in addition to $40 in costs and he was warned that if the mild and merciful sentence was owing to his ignorance of the law and the true meaning of the offensive phrase by which he had insulted a uniformed servant of his majesty the king.

The prisoner eagerly settled the demands of the court and started at once with his bride for America.

As the train moved away he opened the window of his compartment and said, in somewhat muffled tones, to the consul:

"Mum is my name until I get out of this country, but I'll watch for the frontier, and when we cross I'll open my mouth as wide as the delta of the Mississippi and shout: 'Thank God, we are safe once more!'"

She Was Too Kind.

One of Buffalo's would-be "mashees" several times met a young and good-looking girl and determined to become acquainted with her. He tracked her to a prayer meeting at a prominent church one evening recently. After the service, noticing that she was alone, he approached her, begged her pardon for intruding in the usual way, and walked beside her. She entered into conversation in a pleasant way and the "mashee" began to think he had made a conquest. At length he asked her to go with him to a certain restaurant. She politely declined, but said that she could go to her home. After a little he said:

"Will I be liable to meet any one there?"

"Oh, yes," answered the girl; "you will see my father and mother."

"But won't they object to my accompanying you?" she replied. "You have done me no harm, and though you have not treated me like a gentleman, father and mother do not know anything about it, and they will treat you like one. I am sure they would be glad to see you, and they might, perhaps, offer a prayer in your behalf."

By this time it was pretty hot for the "mashee," and he hastily excused himself from proceeding in the direction of the sensible girl's home.

A Famous Diamond.

The famous diamond, the Kohinoor, which Queen Victoria wears on great occasions, belonged to an Indian prince, but was appropriated by the English during the Indian mutiny of 1857. Diulce Singh, whose property the Kohinoor was before the English seized it, now demands its restoration. He wrote to Lord Salisbury on the matter shortly before the latter's resignation from office, and received in reply a note in which Salisbury "refused to discuss such chimerical nonsense."
