The Revival.

Another small audience greeted the Rev. Butler last evening, but all seemed intent on receiving the Holy Spirit. The usual song service was rendered, and the whole congregation singing.

Rev. Butler then arose and preached one of his interesting sermons, calling to the minds of the assemblage all the wrongs they had ever committed.

Next Friday night will be the great event of the season at Boyd's opera house. The evening, "The Judge," Grand Opera Company, under the management of Col. J. H. Mapleson, will appear in "Carmen" with Minnie Hauk in the title role.

He Kalmeholds the Plasterers' Union in Laid Colors.

OMAHA, April 19.—To the Editor: In the Saturday evening edition of the BEE was an article headed "A Denial," on which I wish to say a few words, and request the Plasterers' Union to answer a few questions. These gentlemen say they are ready at all times to defeat an enemy of organized labor.

There is a certain class of so-called workmen in this city who spend the majority of their time loafing around in shabby shops and street corners, disgruntled agitators, not willing to work themselves, who try by all means in their power to prevent honest workmen from making a living for their families.
