The opening of the Parisian millinery company held Thursday and yesterday was a great success. A Strange Find. Street Commissioner Barnett was yesterday at work on the creek, near Main street bridge, cutting a ditch to turn the water, so as to avoid further cutting away of the banks, which threatened the approaches of the bridge. In the course of the work the men found a buggy embedded in the creek. The vehicle had evidently been buried there since the big flood of June, 1883, having been washed down with the rush of waters. Inquiry leads to the belief that the buggy was owned by Charles Orvis, who had a buggy were way from his place during buggy swept away from his place during that flood, and who never found where it had gone.

THE DAILY BEE. IN AND ABOUT THE BLUFFS,

President Adams Has a Long Consultation With the State Railway Commission.

VARIOUS MATTERS DISCUSSED.

A Buried Buggy Found in the Creek Bed - Many Important News Items and Personal and Minor Mentions.

President Adams Here. The announcement in yesterday's BEE that President Adams and other prominent officials of the Union Pacific would be over on this side of the river caused some comment, but not much surprise, as the understanding has been for some time that when the president visited this part of the west he would not forget Council Bluffs, but would give an opportunity for its citizens to present such grievances as seemed most important. The BEE man on starting down to the transfer yesterday inquired of George F. Wright and others, supposed to be posted on railway and city matters, as to what on railway and city matters, as to what was to be done, but he seemed not to know anything about the arrangements for a conference. At the transfer Mr. N. P. Dodge was found waiting for something, but he seemed also to be there for some other purpose than for a conference. As the Bee man was making some inquiries of Mr. Dodge, with no very satisfactory results, George F. Wright appeared on the patform. It was not long before the special train bearing the official party came steaming across the cial party came steaming across the bridge. Superintendent Dorrance came up to where Mr. Wright and Mr. Dodge were chatting, and invited those gentlemen to go with him to the car to see Mr. Adams. The BEE man was not invited to join in the conference, so that all that passed within the little palace on wheels cannot be given.

Enough was learned, however, to satisfy the curiosity of the news gatherer. The party in the car consisted of President Adams, Director Frank Adams, Manager Callaway, Thomas L. Kimball and Mr. Dorrance. After being joined by Mr. Wright and Mr. Dodge, two other Iowa notables were invited in, they ther lowa notables were invited in, they having arrived at the Transfer hotel on the morning Rock Island train. These were L. S. Coffin, of Fort Dodge, and Peter A. Dey, of Iowa City, two of the railway commissioners of the state. They kept closely closeted in the car, which stood on the track for about two hours. The chief topic discussed was the taxation of the road on its property in Council Bluffs. Recent action was taken by the executive board of lowa by which the Union Pacific is assessed for its mileage in Iowa the same as other roads. The assessment under the mileage system was made on the basis of 2 37-100 miles, the valuation of which was made at $100,000 a mile, so that the assessed valuation made by the executive board is $237,000. The Union Pacific officials, as well as some Council Bluffs citizens who were sup-have to pay less or greater taxes. It seemed from the showing that the Union Pacific would save taxes by the new method, and that Council Bluffs would lose. Mr. Wright claimed that this would not do, for the people here would never be content with having the Union Pacific pay less taxes here than they had been paying. Such was the talk in substance.

Another subject of conversation was the feeling here in regard to the Union Pacific. Mr. Wright and Mr. Dodge both felt, and so expressed themselves, that it would not do to ignore the claims of Council Bluffs, and that a full free chance should be given Mayor Chapman and other prominent citizens to voice their sentiments, and to show their causes of complaint, and to present their requests. It was decided that President Adams and his party would come over here again this morning, and would then see these Council Bluffs gentlemen, and look over the city and its needs. The conference closed about noon, and the special car was whirled back to Omaha again, with-out any of the distinguished visitors leav-ing it to even take a look at the stock

The Mercer Case.

The testimony yesterday was on the part of the defense, the attempt being made to break down the reputation of the girl.

The first witness was Joseph Lewis, who drove the hack in which Mrs. Huber went to the Mercer house. He had no conversation with them, but he under-stood from what he heard that the girl

Bert Beardsley, an employe of Met calfe's saloon, swore that he saw Luiu Mercer in one of the stalls of the saloon prior to the time she went to Omaha. He did not know of her drinking with men, but he knew of her having drank after 9 o'clock at night. He also swore that

Metcalfe's saloon was a respectable place so far as he knew.

To Western Real Estate Owners, Municipal and School Officials who have Bonds for Sale-Gentlemen: I have just returned from New York city, and while there I arranged with a number of posed to have caused this new assess-ment to be made, supposed that this was an additional assessment, instead of one wealthy and prominent gentlemen to open in that city on July 1, 1886, a large real estate exchange and bond dealing to take the place of the assessment made here as before, it having heretofore been office. The matter has been the sub will find it to your interest to write me fully as to the same, giving description, encumbrance, price, terms, etc., as I have had much experience in selling city bonds, and am personally acquainted with very many bond buyers east. I should be pleased to aid you in selling your bonds. My home and family will be in Council Bluffs, Iowa, where letters will always reach me, but after July 1, it will be best to address me at 443 West Twenty-third street, New York City. W. R. VAUGHAN.

Iowa References—Ex-Governor Sherman, Hon. John Van Valkenberg, Fort ject of some investigation, and has led to the discovery that possibly this could not in law become an additional assessment, but the only one.
It was this point which was the topic of talk yesterday by the closely closeted party. This was the purpose of seeking a conference with the state railway com-missioners, and probably the two Council Bluffs citizens were called in to give exthe executive board, at so much per mile for what track it had in Iowa, then it

Pardue. He did not consider her reputation very good. Mrs. Huber herself testified that she her character while she was at work in hotels in Omaha. They swore she wore short dresses, and that her reputation was not of the best.

The testimony against the girl's character was not so strong as was threat-ened, and seemed to be made mostly of opinions and from small actions which of themselves were far from showing her to be the hardened character Mrs. Huber would have the public believe.

The County Bonds.

The peculiar manner in which the county board has advertised for bids for its court house bonds has caused some comment already. Some of the banks feel touchy because the board favors one of the banks of the city to the exclusion of the others, giving this bank free advertisement and special prominence by declaring that the bonds will be deposited there, and that the successful bidder can there get the bonds and there pay for them. It is also claimed that the board can make no such arrangement, as under receive no bids except for the entire amount of bonds, $120,000, although only $40,000 will be delivered now, $40,000 to be delivered in October, and the remaining $40,000 not to be delivered until June, 1887. The idea of pidding on bonds which the purchaser cannot have for a year yet is said to be very foolish, and those who are posted in such matters de-elare that the county will by no means get as favorable bids as would be made if only $40,000 at a time was offered.

The bonds are first class, and with any reasonable chance to allow a good field for bidders, there would be a farge num-ber of bids, and a lively scramble to get the bonds. By the peculiar restrictions made by the board, it is claimed that the number of bidders will be smaller than otherwise, and the bids will not be as high. It is also urged that some broker might bid on the whole amount, intending to take for some customer only $10,000 of the amount, and after getting what he wanted, might afterwards decline to take the rest of the bonds a year from now.

It seems that there is no end to the amount of criticism called forth by the manner of advertising for the bids.

The Poet Preacher.

The Burlington road is putting out some beautiful little pamphlets illustrating the beauties of Oregon, Ill., and its attractions as a summer resort. There is a probability that during the coming year the fugitive pieces from his ven will be gathered up in the form of an attractive volume. Some of his friends are strongly urging him to have a volume published, and this will probably result.
