The police last evening raided a gang of thirteen tramps and placed them under arrest. One of the prisoners was seen to throw away a package which he had on his person, and the officers, inveshad on his person, and the officers, investigating, found it to contain a dozen ladies' white kid gloves. The goods were marked with the name of Wiig & Westberg, of Omaha, and as that firm was burglarized one night last week it is supposed this gang are the robbers. The Omaha police were telegraphed the facts and will come over and look the matter up this morning. up this morning.

Yesterday the daylight gave a better opportunity of seeing the results of the falling of the high bluff in the rear of Hattenhauer's carriage factory. The huge bank of dirt which fell crushed in the side of the brick building used as a blacksmith shop, necessitating its abandonment. The loss falls heavily upon Mr. Hattenhauer, but he is going in pluckily to make needed changes and improvements. He will move one of his large buildings nearer the street so as to leave room for a new blacksmith shop in the rear, and will hereafter use the space near the treacherous bluff for keeping lumber and material. Had the land-slide occurred in the day time it would very probably have resulted in the severe injury or death of several.

The Wrong Mrs. Frank.

Since the disappearance from Omaha of Mrs. Hueber, alias Frank, a search has been made for her, as she was to appear for trial at this term of the district court, on the charge of enticing the Mercer girl into a house of ill-fame. A telegram was received from St, Paul by the marshal of Omaha that Mrs. Frank had been arrested there. After some further telegraphing Sheriff Reel started for St. Paul to bring her back. The sheriff at St. Paul had telegraphed that the woman would come without papers, but he thought best to prepare himself. On arriving there he found that it was a arriving there he found that it was a different woman entirely, and not the one wanted. Her name was Mrs. Frank, and she came from Omaha. She had left some little bills behind her, and she thought that this was why she was arrested. In proving clearly that she was not the Mrs. Hueber, alias Frank, the sheriff returned without her.

"What does the BEE mean by pitching into the Home of the Friendless?" That query is a natural one, as the BEE is known to generously support all charitable enterprises which it deems worthy of public support, and gladly stands by all honest efforts to make young and old, little and big, happier and better. The BEE is not pitching into the Home, and has no malice nor spite against the manager. The call for an investigation, and the statements made by different witnesses in regard to the management of the Home, did not emanate in the BEE office. As a news gatherer and news-giver it felt it to be simple duty to inform the public just what it could learn about an institution which has time and again laid claims in its columns to urge the public to support it. The BEE has no light to make against such an institution if it is properly conducted, and has no fight to make against Mr. Lemen if he proves to be the proper person to manage it. It does not propose, however, to gloss over facts to please anybody, nor does it propose to choke into silence the complaints made by apparently competent and responsible witnesses.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Lemen has been more or less a patron of the BEE office ever since the BEE located an office in Council Bluffs, and personally the relationship has been courteous and friendly. Within a short time the BEE friendly Within a short time the BEE man refused to visit the Home for the purpose of giving it a paid write-up, solicited by the manager of the Home, and the reports of its affairs becoming so many and damaging, it could not, as a faithful chronicler of Council Bluffs events, do otherwise than acquaint its readers with such information as its means of gathering afforded.

Mrs. E. R. Kinsey, who was recently a matron at the home, and who is said to have some valuable information on the ubject, writes a letter to a lady friend in this city, setting forth her experience in the home, and urging the people here to take some action to have the abuses remedied. As portions of her letters are concerning personal matters, and others expressive merely of her own feeling, the BEE gives its readers only such portions of it as recite facts which fell under her observation while she was connected with the work. She says that she first met Mr. Lemen at the Baptist state convention at Des Moines two years ago. He glowingly pictured the home to her and its work. She had lost her husband and had four ittle children dependent upon her. Her health was poor, and she had lost what money she had by the failure of a bank. Mr. Lemen told her that the institution Mr. Lemen told her that the institution was wholly dependent on God and faith in him for daily food and clothing. He represented that there was a kindergarten and excellent school in connection with the home, and in view of all these representations she concluded to let her children go and try it until she could get well so as to take them and do for them. well so as to take them and do for them herself. "Late in December I went to Council Bluffs to spend the holidays with lecting ways too sickening too relate.

'The manager explained that all this was due to the assistant manager and to the matron, who had let these neglects arise while he was away. He said he was going to move to the home himself and take personal charge of it. I took my little two-year old babe in my lap and lice were creeping thick over her head. My oldest little boy got behind my chair and almost his first words to me were: 'Mamma, when you go away from here wont you take me?' ', the children and see for myself. I found a terrible state of things. The school broken up, the matron on the war path with the manager and the then twenty-six children suffering from neg-

The cause of this condition of affairs being satisfactorily explained, and the manager setting forth in glowing words his purposes and aims and the reforms he would institute, together with urgent requests that she should remain and severa as matron she score label to and serve as matron, she concluded to do so. "His plan seemed good and his aim a noble one. My heart went out in sympathy for the dear little children there, and I consented to act as matron. They were covered with vermin both of head and body." She went at the task of cleaning them up, and soon had them in a better condition. "In a few days every child was contented and happy aside from suffering from the tyrannical influence of the manager whose acts I did not approve. I concluded, however, to make it a life work, deciding that I was willing that my children should suffer some deprivation in order to build up such an institution. I ordered my house-hold goods sent there and I united my lot with that of the friendless little ones." On the 1st day of March, 1885, my little Irene died, without a moment's warning. I found it unpleasant getting along with the manager and family, and finally con-cluded I could do better work for the Home by visiting different parts of the state and making known its objects and needs, thereby awakening greater interest and sympathy for it. I left my children there quite contented. As my little one was the first to die at the Home, I felt it my duty to lift the debt of the cemetery lot. Mr. Lemen told me he only had thirty days to pay for it in. The first money I took in (which was the proceeds of a festival given.) proceeds of a festival given at Somerset, Ia.,) I sent him $25 to pay on the lot. I next sent him $10 more for the same pur pose. That was in June, 1885, and the lot is not paid for yet."
"I was absent six months, and all this

"I was absent six months, and all this time in communication with the manager, who always reported my children well and doing well. On my return to the institution, however, my mother blood boiled with indignation. I found filth, rags, vermin of head and body. Hungry bugs by the —. Insufficient, poorly cooked food. Oh, I cannot give details, only it was awful! I had believed Mr. Lemen a sincerely gospel man, with details, only it was awful! I had believed Mr. Lemen a sincerely gospel man, with a generous heart for suffering humanity. But I found him to be high tempered and cruel. My eight-year-old Willie was just a walking skeleton. A few more days and he would have laid on the hill beside little Irene. Persons who saw my boy would say, 'you should have taken your child to police headquarters and let them have seen him before bringing him home. Mr. Lemen threatened me if I went away and reported the condition I found things in there. If I did so he would prosecute me. If I continued, however, a friend to the institution he would befriend me."

ued, however, a friend to the institution he would befriend me."

"He beat my daughter Mary so severely that she could not sit down, and when she showed her bruised hips to some of the girls in the home he beat her for doing so."

Such are the specific charges gieaned from a long letter from this lady who acted in such intimate connection with the nome work that she ought to be able to know concerning its management.

to know concerning its management.

Other statements have been made to the BEE by persons living here, and by persons whose statements on other matters at least would be taken without a doubt, and they are to the same effect. Yesterday the BEE was put in possession of a carefully written statement made by of a carefully written statement made by one such person, verifying in detail the complaints given in the BEE the day be-fore, and saying that all the statements can be substantiated by unimpeachable evidence. The names of witnesses are to be placed in the hands of any competent be placed in the hands of any competent committee which will honestly examine into the facts. This witness, after narrating various incidents of neglect, of lack of cleanliness, and of too severe punishment, savs: "An enlightened public will not permit Mr. Lemen to plead an excuse that he lacks means. No man is necessifated to collect forty-five children and permetually doom them to ren and perpetually doom them to starvation rations. If Mr. Leman really lacks means he should place the orphans in good families, or hand them over to the overseers of the poor. The attempted lewdness is the result of the system, the close huddling together of so many of both sexes. Under Mr. Lemen's regimen, as developed at the home, the orphans are suffered to be infested with vermin so that the nits of the afflictive parasites are visible in the hair of the orphans. A lady outside of the home, seeing the sad plight of the children, vol unteered to comb their heads. This humble service was continued almost daily during many weeks, but the lady referred to declines any further to wage war upon lice if the orphans shall consubjected to the tender mercy of

Mr. Lemen. Such are samples of the statements made to the Bee, and it seems that they should not pass unnoticed. If they are not founded on facts their falsity should be declared by some impartial committee. At present they are being made use of, and it is on the strength of these and similar claims that are being made that an attempt has been made to get the board of trustees, or the city pastors, or some other body to examine these witnesses, and bring in a verdict. If these things are true the public should certainly be so informed, and then, when called upon, as they are daily, to contribute to the support of the institution, they can do GILLINGHAM-BUSHEA. The Rev. H. C. Gillingham and Miss Lucy Maude Bushea were yesterday noon married in the Presbyterian church of this city.

The friends and acquaintances began to arrive at the church about 11:30 o'clock, and were ushered to seats by Messrs, F. B. Miller and H. A. Woodbury. The bridal party arrived at 11:58, and just as the clock on the Bloomer school building finished striking 12, Miss Julia Officer commenced playing Men-delsshon's Wedding March on the organ and the bridal procession filed down the west aisle of the church, preceded by the west aisle of the church, preceded by the

The service was impressive, but brief, and ten minutes after the time of entering the church the bridal party left the altar, proceeding down the op-posite aisle from the one by which they entered. The party repaired to the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Joseph McWilliams, No. 911 First avenue, where a reception was held from 1 o'clock until 3 o'clock Last evening the newly wedded ones left for Spirit Lake, where they will remain a week, and will be at their future home in Logan on June 17, on the evening of which day a reception will be given.

The occasion in all of its details was one of real elegance, and rare taste was shown in all the arrangements. The gifts were numerous, many of them unique and costly. Friends from else-where vied with those nearer in expressions of good will and bright wishes. The Logan friends presented a rich silver service. A unique silver water set was the gift of Miss Holliday, of New York City, who made her selection from the choicest of Tiffany & Co.'s stock. Friends in Cleveland, O., presented a solid silver set. Numerous cash gifts, amounting to a handsome sum, were among the

The Open Air Concert. The complimentary open air concert in Bayliss park last evening tendered to the citizens by Odell Bros. & Co., drew a large crowd of people and proved a happy success. The enterprise shown by these young men was the occasion of many commendatory remarks from those who enjoyed the sweet music given by the German-American band. Of course the free concert was really an advertisement of this wide-awake real estate and insurance firm, but it was advertisement in a most pleasing form. The programme was also marked by a boomish inspiration for Council Bluffs, one number especially being devoted to the representation of a trip across the continent in five minutes, the preparations for vivifying which weer quite elaborate. The description, as given on the preparations for vivifying which weer quite elaborate.

elaborate. The description, as given on the programme, was:

4. U. P. R. R. Galop—"Across the Continent in Five Minutes." with Comps. to the "Boom" of Council Bluffs.

Scene—San Francisco, Cal. Time, 1890. Through train ready for Council Bluffs, Ia., terminus of the U. P. R. R., and greatest railroad center of the west. Population, 150,000. Machine shops, railroad shops, manufactories; hum, whirr and buzz of wheels of industry, working the "Wests" raw products into the cash of the rest of the world. Streets all paved. Cable cars with all the modern improvements running every minute. Free bridge across the Big Muddy leading to Omaha and other western suburbs; gorgeous union depot. All U. P. trains leaving from and arriving at Council Bluffs every time.

All aboard for Council Bluffs every time.

All aboard for Council Bluffs Bell rings, whistle blows, look out for the engine. Council Bluffs union depot. Change cars for the east.

In view of the recent investigation along this line the hit was a happy one. It is hoped that others may follow the example of Odell Bros. & Co. and favor the citizens with more open air concerts. It may be an expensive way of advertising, but it is a good way. The people enjoy it, and the firm will doubtless find that the money was not foolishly invested.
