When the English steamer Heartburn, from Philadelphia, was passing Absecom the other morning, a large flock of cana-ries, bullfinches and other birds flew on board and took refuge in the rigging and the houses on deck. As soon as the ves-sel reached Atlantic docks, Brooklyn, the birds began to fly ashore, and a swarm of boys caught many of them. The birds are supposed to have escaped from some aviary on the Jersey shore.

Rev. D. M. Carpen er, of Clymer, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., writes March 2, 1885: My boy, two years old, took a severe cold which settled in his throat and lungs. Nothing afforded relief, and I thought he must die. Finally I put an Allcock's Porous Plaster around the throat and one on the chest. In less than an hour his breathing became better, and he fell asleep. In twenty-four hours the child was well.

The following is a curious creole remedy for sore throat: In swelling of the glands of the throat the swolen gland should be well rubbed with tallow, and the tallow smeared on thoroughly melted by holding close to the skin, without actually touching it, the blade of a knife heated in the flame of a lamp or candle. Some say the point of the heated blade only should approach the skin, and that the point only should be moved so as to describe a cross immediately over the gland. The latter is a purely superstitious idea.
