

AFTER TOM MURRAY'S SCALP.

An Interesting Suit Filed in the District Court Yesterday.

PACKING FOR HEAVY EXPORT.

The Lipton Houses—A Soldier's Narrow Escape—Rail Notes—The Cause of Justice—Police Matters, Etc.

They Found the Deed.

A suit was commenced in the district court yesterday which once more brings the notorious Tom Murray into prominence as a fugitive. The plaintiff is a Mesdames Sarah, Ellen Woodman, Josephine Jack and Nettie Kinna. They sue to recover possession of a lot near the corner of Seventeenth and Harney streets.

The story of the case is an interesting one. In 1866 Eleanor McGovern, at that time a resident of Omaha, secured for a trifling sum, possession of the piece of property referred to, which may be definitely located as lot 3 in block 145. Years thereafter she drifted out west, with her children, Sarah, Ellen and Nettie, who are now married women in Wyoming. In 1883 she was suddenly taken ill, and died almost before her children, who were by this time married women, could realize that their mother was sick. She left no will, though it was known that she possessed considerable property here and there. Search was made for the missing testament, but to no avail. By the merest accident, however, in a search among some old papers a few months ago a title deed to the Omaha property was found. The heirs immediately investigated the matter and it now developed that for nearly twenty years Tom Murray had held the lot by no other rights than those of a squatter. His success in the squinting line is beyond cavil, when it is noted that for almost a quarter century he has lived upon this particular property without his title thereto being in question. This suit is brought to oust him, and it looks as though Tom would have to go. The people in the neighborhood of Seventeenth and Harney are rejoiced at this unexpected turn of affairs, for Murray has made a practice of allowing this property to be occupied by the worst kind of disorderly people. The value of the lot is now $15,000 or $20,000.

PACKING FOR EXPORT.

The New Enterprise of Thomas J. Lipton of Edinburgh.

The BEE has already published the announcement that the stock yards company had entered into a contract with Thomas J. Lipton of Edinburgh, Scotland, to erect a packing house of mammoth dimensions on the Harney street. This announcement has been a source of pleasure to Omahans who take an interest in the advancement of the city. It has not been less conducive of pleasure because the gentleman for whom this house is erected, is one whose business interests have given him a name in a brace of continents.

Mr. Lipton, for some time back has been established in Chicago. There he has packed and shipped pork with the special view of satisfying a foreign trade, which belongs to him almost beyond the possibility of competition. In not less than twenty-four cities, in both England and Scotland, this gentleman commands the local trade in his line, and this trade is such that it requires packing accommodations of more than average capacity and merit. Those he has heretofore enjoyed in Chicago have been unequal to the requirements, and accordingly, he has decided to locate in Omaha for his new requirements will be satisfied. His house at this point will have a capacity of 2,000 hogs per day. This is a capacity greater than that of any house now established here, and will give, on an average, not less than one hundred and fifty men. The product of this house will be used almost entirely to supply Mr. Lipton's foreign trade. This trade, as a rule, requires pork of a certain quality, and usually in demand, in that it can best be satisfied with hogs weighing from 150 to 200 pounds. Up to the present such animals have not commanded the prices in this market which the desired quality would like, and as a consequence more attention has been paid to the raising of hogs which greatly exceed that weight. This will be gratifying news to farmers, more so because it is Mr. Lipton's intention to offer increased values for hogs of the weight mentioned. Our raisers, therefore, instead of suffering a depreciation in price, will experience an appreciation in the market value of their lighter raisings.

Many of the packing houses in the east are in operation only during certain parts of the year. With Mr. Lipton, however, the case will be different. His establishment will be run throughout the year. He will, therefore, effect the establishment of a market in which, at all seasons, a ready sale can be made. This will be of incalculable advantage to raisers in this state, and those farther west, as well as in Dakota and even Missouri.

Up to the present time no more promising industry has been established in the city. It means an increase of our population, the establishment of a permanent home for many, and the entry to the place of other enterprising capitalists and business men whose money and energy will jointly be utilized in advancing the interests of this city. Mr. Lipton deserves all from people, and his energy and enterprise will be appreciated.

THE CAUSE OF JUSTICE.

As Subscribed in the District Court of Douglas.

Yesterday District Attorney Estelle filed an information their district court against Jim Kelley, Edward Fitzgerald, Michael Downey and Michael Harrington, charging them with highway robbery, the victims being James Madison, whom they held up on South Tenth street.

John D. Murphy filed a petition in this court yesterday against R. C. Patterson, to obtain possession of lots one and two, block A, Saunders & Himebaugh's addition, or else to be refunded the money he paid upon the same. The petitioner claims that in June, 1884, he agreed to purchase the lots in question, and paid for the same $30 in cash and agreed to pay the balance, $75, in installments. Before time had arrived, however, for the last payment, Mr. Patterson, by means of a deed, had sold about $70, offered Patterson the balance in one payment with interest at eight per cent. The offer was refused. Subsequently, it is claimed, that Patterson sold the lots in question, and Murphy avers this was done to the extent of a thousand dollars, and he now wants Patterson to be kept to his agreement.

Yesterday Mr. Baldwin commenced to address the jury in the Ballard murder trial, and continued up to noon, making a strong and effective address, and feeling quite overcome at the close.

At 2 o'clock, Mr. Birkett, in behalf of the defense, continued his address, besting special attention to the gentleman who had preceded him for the prosecution.

Gen. O'Brien well succeeded Mr. Birkett and confined himself to the law of the case with special reference to the definition of duress, its cause, effect and control over an individual subject to it. It is not expected that he will finish his address before noon of to-day. Mr. Estelle will then close for the state.

A RICHOCET SHOT.

One That Nearly Cost a Soldier His Life.

The first accident on the new department rifle range at Bellevue was reported at army headquarters yesterday. The victim thereof was Private Flannigan, of Company K, Fourth Infantry.

Flannigan, it seems, was standing in the pit before one of the targets, preparing to adjust it for a new series of shots. The pit was about four or five feet deep and permitted Flannigan's shoulders to project a foot or so over the ground. Private Sampson, of Company E, was standing some five hundred yards away, in front of the same target, and not noticing that Flannigan was exposed, fired. The ball struck the ground, and on a ricochet glanced upward and passed through Flannigan's right shoulder. He dropped apparently lifeless to the ground, and it was thought that he had been killed. Investigation, however, showed that his injuries were of such a character that with proper treatment he will undoubtedly recover. He has been removed to the barracks hospital.

The Loyal Legion.

This evening at 9 o'clock, an excursion, consisting about thirty members of the Loyal Legion of Nebraska, will leave this city by way of the Missouri Pacific, for Ft. Leavenworth, Kas. They will be present at the inauguration of the legion in that state. This body is composed of officers of the United States army and navy, who were honorably discharged. It has been instituted in a number of states, Nebraska having organized a division some time ago. Kansas is now following in her wake, and has extended an invitation to the legion in this state to be present, with the above result. The institution in the adjoining state will be attended with most imposing ceremonies and will take place in the beautiful grounds of Fort Leavenworth, where distinguished soldiers from all parts of the country will be present. General McCook will be in charge of the event and it is understood that he has been so successful in making arrangements for the event that it will be worthy of remembrance by all who attend.

Rail Matters.

"In all my born days," said a local passenger agent for the Union Pacific yesterday, "I never saw such a rush of passengers into Omaha. There was a perfect stampede yesterday, and indeed every morning for a week past."

How does that happen?

"Well, the fame of the city is spreading abroad, and people are coming in here to investigate for themselves, many of them with a view of locating here. Then there are others, hailing mostly from Iowa towns, from Council Bluffs far east as Burlington, who come to Omaha simply on a pleasure visit, stay here two or three days and go home. Traveling is cheap now on account of the cut rates, and Omaha is reaping a rich harvest out of it."

There are no new developments in the rate war. The lines leading in the war continue the $3 rate to Omaha, and the other roads have met it, so that the fact is the same. The Union Pacific railroad men decline to express an opinion as to how or when the war will close.

Abandoned Her Child.

A case of cruel and unexplained desertion occurred on the Union Pacific passenger train, which arrived here from the west yesterday. A well dressed woman, carrying a child about one month old, entered the train at Cozad yesterday and upon reaching Plum Creek, she left the child in charge of a lady passenger, saying she wanted to see some one at the depot. The train soon started, and the woman could not be found. It soon became apparent that it was a case of unexplained desertion, and a telegram was sent by Plum Creek to have the woman arrested. The deserted child was left at Grand Island in charge of a policeman.

A Policeman Arrested.

Roundsman Mike Whalen arrested Officer James Brady yesterday, a charge of assault and battery preferred by Tim Collins, a government teamster. Collins claims that Brady struck him over the head with his club several times, on Sunday night, without any provocation whatever. Brady says that Collins who appears to be a tough, was engaged in a row at Kessler's saloon, and that he obeyed the command of the police to "move on." He finally grew obstreperous, made an attack on the officers, which Brady repelled by a vigorous use of his club.

A Successful Operation.

J. M. DeGraff, a leading merchant of Oakland, Ia., in a tussel with an escaped convict, received a severe injury to one of his eyeballs, which threatened the total destruction of that eye. He came to Omaha and sought relief at the Omaha Medical and Surgical Institute. His eye was operated upon by Dr. McMenamy with such great success that almost from the first moment Mr. DeGraff was assured of regaining perfect eyesight. He left for home yesterday with every prospect of permanent recovery.

Parochial Census.

Father Boyle, recently announced as the pastor of the new Catholic parish organized in the southwestern part of the city, has come to this city and intends to remain here. He is stopping temporarily at the cathedral. He is at work now in making a census of the new parish and expects to enumerate about one hundred and fifty families. The architect at present is at work upon the plans of the new chapel, and as soon as possible the work of erecting it will be begun.

South Omaha Jail.

Commissioner O'Keefe has not yet determined as to what is to be done in the way of providing a jail for the accommodation of criminals at the stock yards. He is rather in accord, however, with Sheriff Coburn's view of the necessity of such a place, and will visit the ground to-morrow. If a place of temporary detention were established at the yards it would be a source of convenience to the people and also to Frank Walker, the deputy.

Police Points.

In police court yesterday Peter Tuttle was fined $5 and costs for fast driving. N. E. Anderson and Gus Nelson, for fighting, were tried and sentenced to contribute $5 and costs each to the city's exchequer.

Thomas Monroe, John Burke and an individual with the classic nose of John Doe, were fined $5 and costs for drunkenness.

THE RAILWAY MAIL CLERKS.

Something About an Intelligent and Industrious Class of Beings.

The "Sixth Division"—The Nebraska Clerks—How the Mail Is "Worked"—Rapid Shift—Fling—Other Details.

"Very few people," said an old railway mail clerk in conversation with a Bee reporter last night, "have any idea of the processes through which a letter has to go before it is delivered. If the merchant who opens his big batch of letters every morning, or the blushing school girl who anxiously awaits the arrival of the weekly or bi-weekly or tri-weekly letter, could only see something of these processes, I am sure that their eyes would be opened."

In the course of a further conversation with the speaker the newspaper man gained some interesting points concerning the railway mail service, which branch plays the most important part in the delivery of millions of letters and papers posted daily all over the country. The United States mail railway service is divided up into a large number of divisions. Nebraska lies in the sixth division, the superintendent of which is Captain James E. White of Chicago. This division includes, besides this state, Illinois, the upper peninsula of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Dakota and Wyoming. The lines westward from Omaha are in charge of Chief Clerk Griffin, who has headquarters in this city. His mail routes lie on the B. & O. and the Union Pacific, including the Oregon Short Line. He has at present about 140 clerks under him, divided pretty equally between the Union Pacific and B. & O.

A mail clerk's duties on the whole are not arduous. He is, to be sure, obliged to work hard while he does work, but his days of labor include but half the 24 hours. He is supposed to work half the time and lay off the other half. Many of those in the service work one week steadily, and then rest up the other week. Others prefer to work every other day. The average run is 300 miles, and the average time of working is about sixteen hours. Frequently, however, a mail clerk is obliged to work 18, 20, 22, or even 24 hours without retiring to the bunk on which he conducts his duties. As often, after shuffling mail for 18 or 19 hours, he is allowed to lie down and snatch three hours' sleep, then to give way to another work-worn clerk.

Railway mail clerks are divided into three classes, according to their proficiency and the length of their connection with the service. First class clerks receive $1,300 a year, second clerks, $1,150, and third clerks, $1,000.

To be a successful mail clerk one must have a good memory, must be quick and accurate, possessing, too, the ability to keep his wits from wool gathering. The average railway clerk is an efficient member of the names of about 6,000 postoffices in every part of the division in which he is working. He has a "scheme" or reference chart close at hand so that he can refer to his business and desires. The "old hand at the business," however, is beyond the necessity of referring to the chart, so pat has he every town on his list.

The United States mail is not merely more than a passing allusion to the duties of the railway mail clerk. Each mail car has, as a general thing, three clerks, two of whom are known as the first clerks, and the third as the letter carrier. The first clerks distribute the letters into pigeon-holes with the name of each town thereon. As soon as the papers are filed up, the letters are tied into packages and thrown into pouches. Every large town, say like Lincoln, in Nebraska, or Denver, in Colorado, has large pouches, into which is thrown the letters for that place, and alone. Other smaller towns do not have a separate pouch, the mail for such places being thrown in together. The distribution of papers is a separate branch of the work, which belongs to the third clerk. The man who attends to this class of work stands before a long table on which are dumped the papers he is to distribute. Open pouches are run along the table, and the clerk picks up, by dexterous throwing, he sends the papers flying. The ability of the paper clerk to dispatch a big mail depends, of course, upon his dexterity and speed. One clerk, who is called a "speed" clerk, is able to handle a mail of 100 sacks, each containing from 250 to 300 papers, in a few words, he can dispose of average fairly, of about 40,000 papers in ten hours' time. One of the most rapid paper clerks in the service is W. F. Conley, who has been in the service for some time. He stands before his table, and shuffles off the papers at a speed that is truly marvelous. Mr. Conley keeps both hands going, and he is able to obey the direction on papers upside down and never stops to turn them right side up. This circumstance, of course, contributes greatly to his despatch. For such a feat, John M. Butler, who has the reputation of being one of the fastest, if not the fastest, paper clerk in the service, is not a bad example. He is a native of Iowa, and has served an equal length of time as mail clerk, and is now worth $3,000 likewise. J. C. Morrow has not been so long in the service, but he is a fast runner, and has won riches to the extent of anywhere from $35,000 to $45,000. He is probably the wealthiest man of the 140 clerks under Mr. Griffin. There are a number of ex-railway clerks now in Omaha, whom fortune has greatly favored, since leaving the service. Among these may be mentioned, S. A. Orchard, Lew Hill, James Little and Lee Estelle, at present district attorney.

A CHEERFUL DAKOTA LIAR.

Samples of What an Average Dakotan Can Do at the Expense of the Truth.

Dakota Correspondence Modern Miller: In the east thousands of people plant and sow "in the moon" to insure rapid growth, but in Dakota it is dangerous to plant in the prolific phase of the moon, so the farmer who plants at such a time that the moon will exert its influence in holding the crop back. I have known several disasters to result from neglect of this precaution. One day last June I was toting through the prairie, and while I was toting through the tall, new grass I saw a man with nothing on but his suspenders tearing along like mad. He stopped just long enough to tell me what was up, and off he went for the Iowa side of the Sioux river, which he cleared at a bound, and fell on all fours into a snow-drift four feet deep. He said he and his wife had planted their garden the evening before, but happened to get hold of a last year's almanac, and missed it about four days. As a result was that when he woke up that morning the best of his plants were forty feet from the house had crushed in his cellar walls, and a squash vine had taken the door off its hinges, and was just mopping the floor with all there was left of the hired man, whom it had snatched out of bed in the attic. He didn't know where his wife was but he saw some shreds of a nightgown and a pair of drawers in the front yard as he fled. He said that he had a light after him with pods on 'em large enough for phantom boats, and one could see by the way he was dressed that if he was a liar at all he was a real one. I really thought I would ever become an average Dakota liar I would want to die. This territory must be divided sometime before the day of judgment, for honest men are ever audit its accounts with one or a set of clerical angels at work at a time.

About two weeks ago I saw a farmer out behind a straw stack gathering into a heap a lot of old papers and pieces of hides, and sprinkling salt on them. Yesterday I saw this same man selling a fine pair of steers to a butcher up town. They were so fat and had filled up so fast that he had to cut them with a sharp knife. He said that he had a fine old buffalo robe. This granger was a Sunday school superintendent before he came to Dakota, but he swore these were the same cattle I had seen him kicking away behind the straw stack. He said they had eaten some wild grass that had sprung up in his door yard, where the women folks had thrown out a few tubs of wash water, and a few scraps of meat. He said that he had learned the best way to winter stock in Dakota was to knock them all to pieces in the fall and set them up again as wanted, and when they were ready to sell, to pick all I wanted. I did not know what he meant, at first, but he went out with me, and I'm almost afraid I'll think I'm a liar for telling it—there was about half an acre growing the finest perlor matches I ever saw. They were as thick as hairs on a blind mole. He said he had a poor dog the year before, because the seed was too good for such soil. This year he had mixed his seed with about one-third toothpicks, and got a splendid yield.

I went out after breakfast and saw the man plowing up a row of squashes with gunpowder. They were too large to be moved, and the farmer wanted the ground. I noticed that one of his wife's legs was about eight inches longer than the other, and he explained it thus: He said when they first came to Dakota they lived in a "dugout," with nothing but the ground for a floor, from which they had to mow the grass once a day to get the bugs off. He said his wife had a habit of sitting with one leg over the other knee, and the leg that remained in contact with the soil got such a start that the other could never catch up.
