THE BLUFFS FIRE ALARM SYSTEM

The New Custom House Nearing Completion-The Paper Mill-Missionary Meeting-Minor Mention-Personal.

It Looks Foggy. There is considerable talk about the wonderful 1804 dollar which was sold here the other day by a stranger as a rare coin and for which $100 was paid. The fact that a similar coin has been sold in Omaha for a like amount causes the suspicion that the stranger was a sharper who is working the scheme. There seems no doubt but that the silver dollars of 1804 are very rare and are valued at several hundred dollars. It is said that only four or five were ever coined, three at least are known. It seems now that there are two more, which have turned up in Omaha and Council Bluffs about the same time. It looks very much as if a sharper had been making some of these dollars out of pure silver and working to get rid of them at fabulous prices. If so, it is a sharp trick as played. The stranger here did not try to force the coin on the market, but accidentally showed it with some other silver in his hand, and on being offered $10 for it seemed to be as much surprised as anyone that it was worth even that much. Another stranger in the bar room inspected the coin and suggested that he had better not accept the $10, as it might be worth $100. This started some investigation, and those who are collecting rare coins were soon notified of the rare specimen, and began to eagerly had for it. Now it appears that another such rare coin is discovered in the hands of a stranger in Omaha, and just as eagerly bought there. Honors between the two cities are easy.

There had got to be a pretty well ettled notion that the Richmond fire alarm was to be adopted by this city, the price having been about fixed upon, and t was conceded to be a low one. The triends of the Gamewell system seem deermined not to allow this, and they have een strongly urging that the Gamewell is the one used in all large cities, and that it is the standard one. On the other hand the friends of the Richmond system declare that it is just as good, if not so old, and that in price it is much cheaper. It seems that both systems are excellent and that the city cannot get far out of the way in adopting either under the guar-antee given by each. The promise is made, however, that owing to the anxiety of each to have Council Bluffs adopt its ystem, the city will get special prices which will cause the putting in here of a good system at a much less cost than most cities are required to pay. It is to be hoped that such will be the result of the sharp competition between these two systems.

At the start it was the intention to have it but three stories in hight, and to have porches, but it was decided that these porches would keep out much needed light from the postoffice department, and so the plans were changed, the porches being done away with, and the building being made four stories instead of three. The steps are being taken out, and new ones being put in so as to harmonize with the other changes. The contractor will be through by the last of the month. The roof is to be of iron and slate. A ROMANCE FROM COREA. An Aged Bachelor Tells Why he Had Never Married. Letter in London Times: For parents and near kinsfolk it is customary in Corea to mourn three years. What a Corea to mourn three years. What a deep influrnee this prescriptive usage has upon the life of the people is illustrated by the following story of an aged bachelor who was asked why he had never taken a wife. "My parents as well as myself," he said, "were desirous that I should marry, and a suitable young lady being found our betrothal took piace. Then my future father-in-law died, and we had, of course, to wait three years. I had hardly

Lastly, I had the misfertune to lose my own dear nother, which naturally caused a further adjournment. So that as four times three make twelve, that num-per of years had passed over our heads and made us both the older. At this time my betrothed fell ill and as she was at death's door I went to pay her a last visit. My future brother in law met me at the door and said, "Although you are not formally married, yet peraps I may for this once look upon you s man and wife; come in and see her. hardly entered and been for a moment face to face with my poor wife than she breathed her last. When I saw this all thoughts of marriage fled from me and I have remained a bachelor ever since.

SENATOR HEARST.

How He Relieved a Drunkard's Family And Punished the Drunkard. San Francisco Post: Senator Hearst may not have the personal graces of a Brummel or the oratorical gifts of a Ci-cero, but the top of his head is devoid of and that of these the whereabouts of undulations. The senator is not mean; three at least are known. It seems now on the contrary, he is generous with his money, but he is not in the habit of re-leasing his grip on a dollar until he nows where it is going. For instance: "Please, sir, will you assist a poor man who is out of work and has a family de-

The woman wept when questioned. They were very poor and often hungry. All their troubles came from the drunkenness of the husband. That culprit sullenly owned to the truth of this statement. "All right," said Uncle George, rising. He gave the woman a sum of money that made her speechless.
"Come along with me," said Hearst to the husband, who obeyed with alacrity.

At the next corner the senator turned he amazed man over to a policeman. "Book this fellow for vagrancy," said the philanthropist. "I'll swear against him to morrow. He's been striking me for a piece."

"Now, you," said Uncle George next day when he had secured a sentence of three months for the loafer, "if you've a mind to be decent when you get out, ome to me and I'll give you a show." And the man, three months later did ome. Uncle George seut him and his family to one of his ranches, where, to to the fellow justice, he has avoided the

NERVOUS TRAVELERS.

The Fears of People Who Have Suffered in Railroad Accidents.

Yesterday afternoon, says the Atlanta Constitution, several gentlemen in the department of agriculture at the capitol were discussing railroad accidents. Commissioner Henderson, who knows how to tell a good story, remarked that those who had suffered in railroad accidents were never able to rid themselves the apprehension that they would suffer again.

"The other day," he said, "I took the fast train on the Georgia railroad for Augusta. After we passed Decatur the speed was at the rate of thirty-five miles an hour. I noticed a man in a seat in front of me who was plainly disturbed bout something. He would look out of the window a moment, and then he would clutch the arm of his seat as if fearing that he would fall out. This performance was repeated so often, that 1 began to think the man was sick. Finally, howsometime a sufferer in a railroad accident. About that time I arrived at this decision he left his seat and walked back and sat down by me.

"'Look here,' he said, 'don't you think, engineer of this train is running "Why?" I inquired.

"Well, because he is running so rapidly. Just look at this car. It rocks like a cradle. I believe the engineer is drunk.

"Then the man became very much ex-"Then the man became very much excited, He jumped up and said:
"The engineer is drunk, sure's as you're born. It ought to be looked into at once, and somebody else should be placed in charge of the engine."

"Why, my friend," said 1, "the train is running at it usual rate of speed, and there is no occasion for alarm."

"What is the usual rate of speedy" he

"What is the usual rate of speed?" he inquired.

"Thirty-five miles an hour."

"My reply seemed to quiet him, and he sat down and began to read a newspaper. Satisfied that he had suffered in railroad accident, I said to him: "You must have been in a railroad accident some time ago. Two years ago I was on a train which ran off the track and tumbled down an embankment, and I have never since taken a railroad journey with any kind of ease.''' Col. Mark Harden was present and while Judge Henderson was telling his story he was observed to rub himself in divers places. At the conclusion of the story he said:

"I can gympathize with that fellow. You know I was in an accident on the Piedmont some time ago. The sleeper I was in jumped the track and tumbled down an embankment, and I was badly hurt. Well, I never thought my unfortunate experienence would prevent my future railroad jorneys, but I was mis-

"A few days ago I took a train on the Western & Atlantic railroad, intending to go home. I felt no apprehension untill well out of Atlanta, and then I found that I grew more and more uneasy as the syee of the train increased. I stood the worry until the train reached Baltan, six miles from Atlanta, and then I got out and returned to the city Another member of the party related an incident which came under his notice last Sunday.

"I was on my way to Chattanooga." he said, "by the East Tennessee, Virginia & Georgia railroad. On the train was a young fellow from New York who was traveling through the south for the fun of the thing. About seven miles from Chat-tanooga a tunnel seaved in some time ago, necessitating an arrangement with the Western & Atlantic railroad by which the trains of the East Tennesee, Virginia & Georgia railroad switch of upon the track of the former to get into the city. ROYAL SUICIDES. Monarchs Who Voluntarily Left This Earthly Sphere. New York World: There have been comparatively few instances of suicide comparatively few instances of suicide among the occupants of the thrones of modern times. The most recent case was that of Abdul Aziz Syltan of Turkey, who killed himself in June, 1875, by opening the veins of his arm with a pair of cissors. His subjects had rebelled against him, and the council of ministers had determined to remove him and appoint his nephew to remove him and appoint his nephew Murad as sultan in his stead. In 1868, Theodore, emperor of Abyssinia, is said by some authorities to have shot himself, while others assert that he was killed in battle by the British in-On October 8, 1820, Henry Christophe, king of Hayti, in order to prevent himself being taken prisoner by the insurgents.

who had gained ascendency in the island, shot himself through the heart. Charles VI, king of France, probably inherited a taint of insanity from his father, and the latter part of his life was embittered by monomania, manifesting itself in the apprehension that his children had conspired to poison him. Under this apprehension he refused food for seven days, and died of starvation near Bourges on July 22, 1461.

Concerning the death of Richard II., king of England, there were at the time various conflicting reports, and there has continued to be a difference of opinion among historians. Walsingham, Otterbourn and Peter of Blois say that he also starved himself to death. There is a cer-tain parallel between the case of Richard II. and that of Ludwig II. Both were weak characters; both were deposed in behalf of stronger aspirants to power; both were shut up in a castle for safe keeping, and both were reported to have committed suicide. In the case of the English king, however, the weight of the evidence perhaps favors the theory that some interested persons assisted in his taking off.

Among the ancients it appears that suicide was rather a popular form of death. Many of the philosophers advocated it as an honorable and convenient method of ending existence, and gave a certain pertinence to their teaching by putting it in practice themselves.

Among the long list of rulers of antiquity who died by their own hand are Nero, Cleopatra, Dido, Boadicea, queen of the Iceni in Britain; Otho, of Rome; Ptolemy, of Cyprvs; Mithridates, of Pon-tus; Saul. of Israel; Rameses the Great and Sardanapalus, of Assyria, who burned himself in his palace with his wives.

Forfeiting His Heirship. Chicago Herald: A singular will case has just been decided in Louisiana in a way which will give great satisfaction to public, whether it is in accordance with the law and precedent or not. Some years ago a notorious woman named Townsend, who had accumulated a vast fortune in New Orleans, was murdered by her paramour, a fellow named Sykes. The crime was a brutal one, but the murderer was not se-verely punished. Soon after the woman's death it was discorred that she had made a will, by the terms of which her murderer had become her sole heir. The outery against the execution of this instrument was so great that the attorney general proceeded to contest it, and so well has he conducted the ease that the supreme court has decided in favor of the state, cutting off Sykes as an ingrate and awarding all of the woman's property to the commonwealth, she having no known relatives. state, where a man who murdered another has been found to be chosen heir of his victim. Whatever may be don with the money in such cases, the eternal fitness of things can be observed only by denying to murderers and their relatives any benefits derived by reason of crime
