What Has Been Done With the Various Appropriation Bills.

THE NEW RULES NOT A SUCCESS.

They Retard Business and the Amounts Appropriated Increased -Measures That Will Not Be Acted On-Capital Notes.

The Appropriation Bills. Washington, July 8 .- | Special Telegram BEE. |-The following is the the various appropria-The pension, Indian afairs, military neademy, postoffice, consular and dipiomatic, army and agricultural bills, are passed and signed by the president. The District of Columbia bill is in his hands awaiting his signature. The legislative, judicial and executive bill is in conference committee. The sundry civil, river and harbor, and navy bills have passed the house and are in the hands of the senate. The general deficiency and fortification bills will go through the house within a few days or hours, and go to the sevate for its action. The experience of the house with reference to its new rules, which distribute the appropriation bills to half a dozen committees, has not justified the expectations of that measure. The house believed that the change in rules would faciliate business upon the appropriation bills, but the experience of the session shows that no time has been gained, the bills prepared by this committee outside of the regular appropriation committee, a marked increase in the amount appropriated. The appropriations by the general appropriation bills in this congress have been much greater than those of former congresses, and if it were not for the action of the appropriation committee, which has held down the bills entrusted to its care, the appropriations this session would have reached a much greater figure than ever was known. TARIFF TINKERING WILL STOP.

One of the oldest members of the house committee on ways and means expressed the prediction to your correspondent this morning that in future congresses there would be less of investigations and verbal hearings on ing that in future congresses there would be less of investigations and verbal hearings on the subject of tariff than in the past. "These bearings and investigations," said he, "only serve to agitate and injure business. We don't want so much disturbance. The tariff, if reformed at all, must be reformed quietly and quickly. The agitation, the exaggerations and lies circulated—all by these public exhibitions in the committee-room—do more harm to industries than the lowering of the tariff. Besides, we have all the information necessary to assist in reducing or raising the tariff, and complicated questions only serve to thwart the objects of the committee."

DISAPPOINTED DEMOCRATS.

One of the most exasperating failures of this session of congress to the old democrats here is the reduction of the surplus in the treasury. It was the most zealous desire of these men, and quite a number of republicans from the rural districts, too, that there should be a large proportion of the $250,000,000 surplus in the treasury turned upon the country. This they wanted done by the wholesale redemption of the interest-bearing debt obligations. To call in government bonds now is to decrease the capital of national banks and to appreciate the value of the remaining government bonds in the possession of the banks, and of course the interest of national banks concentrated early in the session against such a movement. Bitter complaints are heard from the south and west on account of the failure of legislation in this direction, and a good deal of explanation will be reof the failure of legislation in this direction, and a good deal of explanation will be re-quired on the stumps this fall.

MANY MEASURES WILL DIE.

There will be more measures of a general character on the calendars of the senate and house when this congress adjourns than has been known at the first adjournment of a congress for many years. About thirty-per cent of the bills of a general nature have been reported from committees with favorable recommendation. Not ten per cent of these will be passed. The total number of bills in-troduced aggregates nearly ten thousand, but more than half of them were pension bills. The most astonishing feature of the proceedings of this congress, so far, is that the measures of greatest importance—imance, shipping, etc.—will either fail in committee, on the floor of the house, or die on the calen-

The Pension Vetoes. WASHINGTON, July 8.-Senator Sewell today introduced a bill directing the secretary of war to have published the additional vol umes of the "War of the Rebellion" sufficient to supply all posts of the Grand Army of the Republic, not now receiving them, and to distribute them as they are published, from time to time, one set to each post, under the same restriction and regulations as now govern the distribution of the work. Chairman Matson of the invalid bensions Chairman Matson of the invalid bensions committee, is determined to insist upon reference of all vetoed pension bills to that committee, and when the house meets tomorrow he will again make a motion to refereach case. The democratic leaders are resolved to "stay here all summer if necessary," as one of them put it, before abandoning their position in the matter. The republicans who have been most active in an effort to secure immediate action on the vetoed bills, have proposed a compromise which will probably be accepted. Under its terms, two hours will be allowed for debate upon such bills as may be selected, and at the expiration of that time an aye and may vote will be taken, the result an aye and nay vote will be taken, the result of which will be regarded as final to all veloes.

Representative William E. Cole, of the Third Maryland district, died this morning at his residence in this city. He had been a sufferer from Bright's disease for several years past, and his demise was not entirely unexpected.

No Work, No Pay.

WASHINGTON, July 8 .- The committee the representatives, as a result of its investigations into the conduct of the offices of doorkeeper, clerk and sergeant-at-arms of the ouse, had recommended the consolidation of the two house document rooms under one head, it is reported will also call attention to the fact that employes have been borne on the rolls without rendering any service, and the members of the committee believe that no recommendations will be necessary to secure a reform in this respect. The report will re-commend that the changes go into effect at the beginning of the next session.

The Union Pacific Prosecution. Washington, July 8.—The sub-committee of the house judiciary committee to-day began consideration of the Henley resolution directing the prosecution of the officers of the Union Pacific Railroad company. Representative Henley appeared, with ex-Bookkeeper Reddington of the office of commissioner of railroads, and spoke at length in support of the resolution. No formal action was taken, but the members of the sub-committee express the opinion that it would be neither courteons nor advisable to report favorably upon the matter without first sub-niting it to the atterney general and secre-tary of interior for recommendation.

The Charges Were False. Washington, July 8 .- The injunction of secreey was removed from the report of the postollice committee on certain charges of maladministration against Postmaster C. E. Snively, of Canton, III, They find the charges are untrue and malicious, and made solely for the purpose of securing Snively's removal. As the latter does not desire to re-tain the place, they recommend the confirma-tion of his successor, R. A. Perkins, only when a report vindicating Snively shall have been adopted and made public.

A. R. encampment at San Francisco next month. The president expressed his high appreciation of the invitation, but said he did not think he would be able to attend.

Discussed By the Cabinet. WASHINGTON, July 8 .- All the executive departments were represented at the cabinet meeting to-day. One of the questions considered was in regard to the status of the nominations which remain unacted upon at the close of the session. Washington, July 8 .- After presentation of the usual number of petitions the senate proceeded to the business on the calendar. Resolutions for inquiry into the authority under which the so-called state legislature had been organized in the territory of Dakota were indefinitely postponed.

The senate then recommended the consideration of the river and narbor appropriation bill, the pending amendment being to reduce the appropriation for the Kentucky river from 52 w,000 to $100,000. The amendment was lost. Yeas, 21; mays, 26.
The Hennepin canal clause was then taken

Mr. Logan hoped the time would come when the people, whenever there was a necessity to give cheap transportation, would provide for it by canal or otherwise. He could not see why the pending proposition was not as proper in the river and harbor bill as in a severate measure. separate measure. After an executive session the senate adjourned.

Suicide on a Train.

INDIANAPOLIS, July S.—Calvin S. "The Diamond Wedding." Syracuse Standard: The morning William H. McElroy came into the office of the Albany Evening Journal to make himself famous as the author of "The Golden Wedding," he felt himself un-equal to the task of rushing up a leader. Of the remarkable fable he concocted in his despair, he had no notion whatever when he began. It was not an inspiration, it was an accident. It was the spasm of an emergency. The column or two which he was expected to fill yawned wide open. Through the connecting with the printing room there came down in gusts the imprecations of the unsatiated foreman. Associates of the romancer who looked up from their own desks in the busy hour that ensued saw a smile playing about the corners of his mouth. The pages were being covered with the audacious fiction at lightning speed. Fearful to scan it over, as he himself once told me, lest he might be dis-gusted with his own dalliance with the rational temper of his readers, Mr. Mc Elroy sent his matter to the printers unvised. Even after it was in type and the proof corrected, he hesitated to give it insertion, being persuaded at last that it would be easily understood as a Munchausen tale by his confreres, who recog-nized in its outlandish detail a piece of iterary work too brilliant to be lost. Newspaper readers will remember hat it purported to be a letter that it from Brazil describing the of a diamond king. These were set forth in florid colors. The minuteness of description into which the correspondent entered gave the scene realism. The thousand times a millionaire had, in the fertile fancy of the author, given his wedding all the pomp and circumstance that money could buy. The conclusion was a glowing description of the marvelous vessel in which the sing and his bride were coming to America. The floating palace in which Cleopatra went to meet Antony paled into insignificance, poops of beaten gold and all, before this lover's Mr. McElroy, who had up to the lucky moment that this fabled recital was put on record, been toiling in the shadow of George Dawson's fame, awoke the next George Dawson's fame, awoke the next morning to find his name on the road to celebrity. Identity with the story was not long concealed under the signature at the bottom of the letter. Richard Scudder was soon known as William H. McElroy. Everybody read of the won-ders and glories of the dismond wedding. Credence and doubt to its authenticity wassed a battle in 40.000 households. waged a battle in 140,000 households. Months and months attend the creation of an impulse was printed; orders for copies of the famous issue were received at the office. It was copied and translated over and over again until its author was fearful it would become the wandering Jew of literature with nowhere to lay its head. One day he heard where to lay its head. One day he heard that letters addressed to the diamond king, on his supposititious arrival at New York, were being received in large numbers at the postoffice and forwarded to the dead letter office. These Mr. Mc-Elroy endeavored to obtain possession of, but though he was able to demonstrate to the postal authorifies that the wedding was a fiction and its central figure a was a fiction and its central figure a myth of his own couccit, the accumulated mail could not be delivered to him. It is stored in the archives of the postal mausoleum to await identification at that milhennium when every man shall get his own.

CAUGHT IN A CAB COLLISION

Mr. W. H. Wyman Seriously Hurt in a Runaway Accident.

THE CHAMPIONS OF HOME RULE.

A Fifteenth Street Runaway-Across the Continent-The K. of L. Picnic - Summer Suits-Minor Matters.

Serious Ranaway Accident. A runaway accident that resulted very seriously to Mr. W. H. Wyman, a brother of Mr. A. U. Wyman, of the Omaha National bank, occurred on Douglas street between Fourteenth and Fifteenth about 6 o'clock last evening. A team which had been left standing in front of Himebaugh & Taylor's store started to run away toward Fourteenth street, when they were headed off by some bystanders who rushed into the street. The runaways turned suddenly and were heading to-ward Fifteenth street when they collided in front of the New York chop house with a cab, which was being driven rapidly around the corner off from Fifteenth street. The occupant of the cab was W. N. Wyman, who, seeing the dangerous position in which he was placed, attempted to jump from the cab. As he was just springing from the door the cab horse gave a sudden lunge overturnthe cab and throwing Mr. Wyman beneath the wheels. The cab was dragged over Mr. Wyman, who received a broken leg in the wreck and sustained a number of very severe bruises about the head and shoulders. He was removed to the residence of his sister, Mis. George Hoag land, where his injuries were attended The cab and the wagon of the first runa-ways, were badly demolished. The driver of the cab was in no way to blame

A FLYING STEED

Makes Things Lively on Fifteenth

Street Last Night. Yesterday evening about 6 o'clock one of the liveliest runaways which has taken place in some time attracted the attention of people on Fifteenth street between Harney street and the alley north of the operahouse. It was a sorrel horse belonging to Motter, the real estate man, who ran upon the sidewalk in front of Martin's store, collided with a fancy wagon of that institution, cracking one of its plate glass panels, throwing off the top of the buggy in front of the store, then dashing north colliding with a telegraph pole behind which a man sought shelter; then waltzing against a buggy on the same side of the street denuding it of paint, then rushing past the opera house where it collided with two more buggies, after which it turned into the opera house alley and brought up against one of the houses which front upon Douglas street. It could go no further, and at the last moment over a buggy the owner of which could not be ascertained. Motter's buggy was a new one when the horse started on his run, but when he stopped the vehicle wasn't worth five dollars. It was smashed to pieces.

YOUNG MAN ON A "BYK." He is Looking For Fame On a Two-

Wheeled Horse. The transcontinental bicyclist, S. G. Spier, who is just now heading toward San Francisco, arrived in Omaha yesterday morning. He is a young man of excellent build, a bronzed and rounded set of features with an incipient mustache and rather unassuming manners. He is encased in a dark brown suit with grey stockings and a white helmet of corduroy. His home is in New Lebanon, N. Y., and he started from Albany on the first day of last June, with the intentions of crossing the country and achieving the reputation of the long-distance champion of the world. He claims to have made the distance from Albany to this city, a distance by road of about 2,700 miles, in thirty-two days, and to have ridden at times 150 miles in fifteen hours, and as high as sixty miles in four hours, while the best average of his daily work been about thirty-seven miles. All this has been accomplished on a "byk" weighing with all its freight-except Mr. Spier's of course—only sixty pounds. The youthful rider does not know when he will reach San Francisco. If he dallies on every town for a day, as he has in Omana, he will probably arrive at the coast in time for his Christmas dinner. Mr. Spiert, it is said by himself, was met upon his arrival in Chicago, by about three hundred wheelmen. It is necessary to mention, in this connection, that no a single "byk" man honored himself by riding over the "muddy" to meet Mr. Spiert on his arrival in these parts.

for sixty day bills, and $4.88 on demand. GOVERNMENTS-Dull and unchanged. STOCKS-Stocks opened weak. The influences on the market in the forencon were stories that Chicago was selling grangers. The selling of these stocks by brokers who had been leaders in the upward movement lately gave strength to the stories, and St. Paul lost ½ per cent from last night's closing, and Northwestern 1½ per cent. At the closing the market showed declines in nearly all the active list of from ¼ to 1½ per cent. Pacific Mail gained 1½ per cent on a basis of rumors of a new effort to make a settlement of the trans-continental difficulty.
