Auxold's Park, Lake Okoboji, Ia July 7.—The hot weather is rapidly driv ing people to this favorite summer re sort, and the number of arrivals are daily increasing. The nights are delightful and no trouble whatever is experienced in sleeping while the thermometer remains as it is. Fishing, boating and bathing are being indulged in extensively by ali who are here.

A cannon bursted on Monday, the day on which the Fourth was celebrated, and injured Henry Michael, who had loaded it with wet sand after placing a quart of powder in it and ramming it hard. It burst into many pieces, and one weigh burst into many pieces, and one weighing about a hundred pounds was found laying by the depot, a long distance from where it exploded. J. A. Gillett, of Dakota, who was sitting near the gun, received a bad cut, which was sewed up. He is doing nicely as is Michael. Arnold's hotel served 1,102 meals on the day of elebration, which was attended by many from other resorts on the lakes, and dancing was indulged in until daylight on Tuesday morning. Many people are camping here, one party of sixteen with six tents having come up last night, while some twenty more persons who are to camp out are expected to-day. Mr. and Mrs Frank Yenawine and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Miller, of Council Bluffs, have been J. E. Miller, of Council Bluffs, have been rusticating here for the past week. General J. C. All For Missions. Yesterday was the closing day of the missionary convention held in the Broadway Methodist church of this city. The convention has proved a great success considering the intense heat. The audiences have been large and the interest kept up to the usual degree of Methodist fervor. There have been in attendance nine presiding elders, thirty-two pastors, and a large number of laymen from western Iowa and eastern Nebraska.

Yesterday the chief feature of interest was the address of Rev. Dr. Butler, in | which he described vividly his trip from Boston to Barreilly.

There was an interesting discussion of the topics annnounced on the pro-gramme, various members taking part. In the afternoon the time was devoted to the meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. E. D. McCreary. There was a pleasing address by Mrs. Pierson, secretary of the Woman's Missionary society, of the Des. Moines. conference. She gave some interesting information concerning the work of the women in this cause.

Rev. Joel A. Smith delivered an address. He was formerly a missionary in China, and in connection with his address he exhibited a large number of curiosities, gathered by him in China.

A question drawer followed. Chap-lain McCabe managed this pleasing fea-ture, and added much to ture, and added much to the answering of the queries handed in. One of the principal ques tions was as to the cost per capita of converting the heathen. The answer agreed to, as shown by the financial reports, was that the cost per head was McCabe delivered addresses A committee reported a series of resolutions, encouraging the people to a larger liberality towards the missionary cause, setting forth the wonderful progress made, present excellent condition, and bright prospects of the work. They commended the zeal and wisdom of those who were the prime movers in preparing for the convention, and those who had finished so excellent a programme.

Come Down With the Stamps. The eigarmakers of this city and vicinity have been sorely inconvenienced by being required to purchase their stamps in Des Moines. Often goods all ready to be sent out on some urgent order have had to be held here because the stamps could not be bought and got here in time. Lately the men engaged in this business have petitioned for a change by which they would be enabled to buy their stamps here, but now comes the announcement that they will hereafter be required to order their stamps from Dayconvenient, and will often hinder trade and discourage manufacturing here. The fellow staggered but little, but acted very queer, and refused to talk at all. When led into the station he resisted the attempt to search him, and hung with a death grip on a few silver dollars which he had in his pocket. During the whole time he did not speak a half dozen words, and after staying in the jail for a day or more he appears to be in the same sort of condition. It now seems that the man is not right in his mind, and that he needs some other treatment than a mere line for Franz Henningsen, a German, living near the bridge at the site of the Cornwell mill, in Crawford county, disappeared nearly a week ago. He was an old bachelor and lived by himself. He was seen in Denison on Thursday night of last week, and at that time had about $100 in cash on his person. He has not been seen or heard from since, and as he was a man of temperate habits, very ethodical and careful, it is feared that he has met with foul play. Search has been made along the river from Denison to his home but no clues found.

HORSES STARVED ON THE PLAINS

An Officer Tells Some Secrets - Days and Days Without a Sign of Verdure. A tew days ago the New York Mail and xpress reporter engaged in conversation with a recruiting sergeant in the United States cavalry service, and in the course of the chat the officer drifted into the liscussion of the merits of horses supplied to the service and the manner in which they are furnished to the government. Not long since 500 horses were purchased in this city, St. Louis, Chicago, and other large mercantile centers for troops in the four big western depart ments of the Platte, Dakota, Missouri and Texas, in which divisions it is estimated three fourths of our army is comprised.

"Most of our cavalry horses," said the recruiting sergeant, "are lost on the plains in the west. No one here east can conceive the rigor of our western military duties or the bardships they entail for the soldiers and their beasts. We suppose that the great west is teeming with verdure and forage, whereas the fact is that in very many tracts of country scouting parties are compelled to ride for a week or more, at the rate of perhaps fifty miles a day, with no grain for their horses and very little grass by the way. A general scrutiny of the condenined army horses would show that their retirement from the service is due more to starvation than anything else Very often the trooper's horse drops in the ranks from sheer exhaustion, and others are so badly used up that they never recover from the privation and fatigue, and are finally condemned for use in the field and shipped to recruiting stations, where they answer much better even than green horses for drilling recruits."

"What are the physical qualifications demanded in the selection of horses for cavalry service?"
"Well, in the first place, none but geldings are taken. The government does not care for stallions or mares. The animal submitted for purchase should stand at least fifteen hands high and weigh about nine hundred pounds. He should be short in the back and also short in the postern joints. A long-legged beast with a badly shaped head wouldn't pass muster at all. Low withers is one of the most essential points, because a horse with high withers is liable to work the saddle forward and get sores; and once saddle forward and get sores; thesh and bein that condition he loses flesh and becomes worthless. In addition to these specifications he must be absolutely free from contracted hoofs, or he won't pass the inspection of the board."

"In what manner are horses secured "Generally by advertising. The particular class of animals desired is becoming scarcer every day. This, I suppose, is due to the fact that breeders are given to the fact that breeders are given to the raising of ing their attention to the raising of draught horses of the Percheron, Norman and similar stock, which are, of course, too slow for cavalry purposes. It is a singular fact that horse-dealers, as a rule, consider the government legitimate prey for all sorts of imposition. For instance, at the last inspection only eight out of sixty horses offered were accepted. Hostlers trotted them out for inspection full of confidence that they could unload their employers' full stock of useless equines. Some of the animals' manes and foretops were plaited and decorated with strips of red flannel. Their tails were done up in common bagging of so bulgy a shape as to suggest the probability of their being about ten feet long. Of course, these decorations had to come off to make sure that the tails were all there and that the manes were of hair instead of oakum. The eyes of a horse under inspection are closely examinned. If he, in general outline, is regarded as worthy of consideration at all, he is submitted to a rigorous examination—which takes up about a quarter of an hour—all over him, from his teeth to his fetlocks and hoofs Then the hostler is directed to walk the animal up and down the length of the yard, and afterward to run him as fast as the beast can go. If his action is easy he is ordered 'tied in' for the final inspection. The last test is a run up-hill for a distance of two hundred yards or so, to see if his wind is good. No saddle is used. The hostler simply mounts and trots to the starting point riding

I know of nothing more painful than the branding of a beast, and I think he knows of nothing more painful himself. The brands become obscure in a few years and are necessarily renewed. It is a peculiar fact that when the time comes for renewing the operation nine out of ten animals re-member the previous dose, and it is no easy mater to repeat it.

THE WINE WIZARD.

How a Young Man Got a Bride for a Simple Receipt.

Rambles for Texas Siftings Abroad: The Frenchman says: "A bottle of Cham-bertin, a ragont a la Sardanapale and a lady causeus, are the best companions in the world. But I am sure that nine out of every ten Germans would exchange the chambertin for a bottle of Schlos

Johannisberger. It is easy enough to purchase simple Johannisberger, but not the Schloss (or eastle) label; and the following story, told me by a bilions old crone in Bingen, may have a deep interest for the few favored Americans who have drunk of that rare and costly vintage, since it pro-fesses to give the real and only reason why the crowned heads and other cranks come to the annual sale of the Schloss Johannisberg and gobble up all the wine at fancy prices.

Nearly a century ago old Jacob Hal Nearly a century ago old Jacob Hal-baufelde had four sons, one beautiful daughter named Anita, and the finest vineyard in Rheingan. And yet Jacob was not happy, for he had also a stub-born idea that his soil should produce a wine that would equal the Sillery of the famous district of Marne. Nursing this belief he had sent his four sons respec-tively to Ay Engravy Rheims and Husttively to Ay, Epernay, Rheims and Huat villers, there to learn the secrets of the white wines of champagne.

Now, when Anita had seen about seventeen summers, a young English student came strolling along the Rhine, and took her heart back to Munich, where he was studying chemistry. It seems that when he sought old Halbaufels and explained how deeply he loved Anita, Jacob had looked with supreme scorn upon the presumptuous young man, and inquired:
"What do you know about Rhine

'Only how to drink it." "Just so. Well, you're a blockheau. Anita's busband must be smart enough to help me make a wine that will excel the best still champagne."
"That is impossible," said the student, boldly.

"What!" cried old Jacob, in a rage.
"You tell me it is impossible? You? Haven't you just confessed you know nothing of Rhine wines?"

"But I know something of chemistry, said the young man, tranquilly; "and I am certain you can't produce a wine here like those of Champagne, mosseux, or still, because the nature of the soil will not permit it. The 'Golden Plant' wouldn't thrive here any more than the select wines of Burgundy—Noirien or

"You're a fool!" screamed old Halaufels; nevertheless, though he hated the student for these discouraging words, he had a greater respect for nim, fearing lest they be true.

And, as I have said, the student went back to Munich, taking with him Anita's love. From the day he arrived his friends began to know him as the "Wine Wizard;" for thenceforth, he was always to be seen between lectures lugging bot-tles of wine to his room, which a select company regularly absorbed each night. It was noted that the flavor and sayor of these wines constantly changed, and that there was always an odor of vanilla, or bergamot, or attar, or other essential oil about the student and his room. At length one night in late autumn his fellow-students enthused to a man over the wine he had passed around, and pro-nounced it the choicest they had ever

"It is very much like Sillery," exclaimed one, "but far superior to it." The "Wizard" smiled triumphantly and that was the last drinking bout he held in his room.

As the holidays drew nigh old Jacob Halbaufels sent for his four sons, but they could give him no encouragement On the contrary they were agreed that nothing more could be expected from their father's viveyard than an ordinary Rhine wine. Then came the young stu-dent again, and old Jacob in his wrath greeted him with an oath and a frown; but Anita, in her joy, greeted him with a glad ery and a caress that was full of compensation. Yet picture Jacob's surprise and delight when the "Wizard," nonchalantly requesting permission to visit the wine cellars, added persuasively:

"For I think I can improve your vintage now beyond the excellence of any still champagne."

So Jacob led him to the brimming easks, quite humbly, for he was overpow ered by the confident air of the young man.

"If I spoil this case," said the latter, pausing before one, "I will of course pay on for it."
Then while the old man's eyes goggled in his head, and the four sons and pretty Anita gazed on in wonder, the student, with his right arm resting on the rim of the eask, began to wave his left above the wine in a very solemn and impressive manner. He then turned to old Halbau fels and said: "You need not keep this any longer in the cask. It is now ready to bottle; but first rack and fine it again." Hopeful, but yet a little doubting, Jacob directed that the young man's or-der be obeyed, and meanwhile he bent before him the pregnant hinges of his rheumatic old knees. Finally on New Year's eve the 'Wizard' said:

"I would like to taste some of that most delicious wine. It is fit for castles. What say you? Shall we uncork a bottle of the Schloss Johannisbergery'

It was produced in a trice, and a glass of it poured out for Anita. But old Jacob could not bid his time. He seized the bottle and rammed the neck of it into his mouth. "Ah, heaven," he cried, smacking his 'It exceeds the ptisannes of champagne. Can you impart the secret, young man? You shall have Anita and 10,000 man's four shall have Anita and 10,000 marks dower for it."

"Agreed," said the "Wizard."

And on the marriage day, all having gone well, he handed his father-in-law a slip of paper. "It contained." said the bihous old erone of Bingen, "this simple receipt: "Attar and vanilla, one ounce each to the cask."
