UNION PACIFIC BRANCH LINES

The Object and Aim of the Relief Bill Explained by Senator Van Wyck. HONESTY IN RAILROAD BUILDING

No More Watered Stocks and Bonds Unless the Government Consents.—A Letter to a Butte County Club.

THE BEE publishes, by request, the following copy of a letter from Senator Van Wyck, which explains itself.

WASHINGTON, June 21, 1886.—Nicholas Miller, Esq., Corresponding Secretary Farmer's and Laborer's Union, Olive Street, Butte, County, Neb.

My dear Sir:—Yours containing the following resolution received by the Union would request Senator Van Wyck to explain the purpose for which he offers a bill to authorize the Union Pacific railway to use its sinking fund guarantee for the building of additional railroads.

The former managers of the Union Pacific railroad from its construction under the Credit Mobilier until its consolidation with the various Kansas Pacific lines were guilty of the most unscrupulous and dishonest practices.

It was first deemed advisable to allow them to use the money deposited in the sinking fund to pay their debt in Kansas City, which is a city of about 100,000 people.

This brings us to the most important point—the regulation of railroads. The agitation was not a new thing, but it was a new thing in the history of the country.
