STOOD BY THE OLD MAN. How a Rancher's Young Son Defended His Father's Memory. Carson Appeal: The other day in Carson Valley, Old Jeremiah Johnson, the well known rancher, died, and was buried in the usual form.

When the corpse was laid out in the school house near Sheridan, a traveling preacher was called upon to preside over the ceremonies. The six sons of the old man were there in a solemn row.

When the preacher taking his place on the platform, opened up after the regular formula that has been so long in vogue. "My friends, Jeremiah Johnson was in full health and ripened manhood when he was cut down by the scythe of the destroyer."

Just here Tommy Johnson, a boy of 16 rose up with: "Hold on, Mr. Preacher, he died of liver complaint. It was Jake Boliver up on Wolf creek that got cut with a mowing machine."

"Sit down, Tom, and cork up," was the remark of a big brother who collared the boy. "You're a little better than that."

"What's that?" shouted the boy. "Say Jake, Bill, Charley, all hands, do you hear that? Worse and more of it. He says that was no mowing. It was cut more acres of grass in a day than any other man in Douglas."

"Will you never drop on yourself?" hissed a big brother as he reached for him again. "Do you 'spose I'm goin' to sit here and hear him say things about the old man that he dare'n't say to his face if he was alive?"

Four hands got the impulsive youth by the collar and yanked him down good and hard. "Next thing you'll hear is that he couldn't run a one-hour hay rake."

The Rush to Yellowstone. Rowdy West: The "rush" to Yellowstone park has been inaugurated and the hotels at Mammoth hot springs, Norris Basin, Fire Hole Basin, Upper Basin and Grand Canon have been opened.
