Honoring American Science! The five hundredth anniversary of the University of Heidelberg, which has been celebrated with so much enthusiasm and magnificence in the old Palatinat during the past week, has been rendered doubly interesting to Americans by the warm recognition given to our countrymen.

Discussing Educational Matters. The vacation period in the school year is most valuable to educators and those who interest themselves in educational matters in the opportunity it gives for an interchange of views, a discussion of theories, an examination of results and a comparison of methods and experiences.

Farmers and the Elevators. The continued complaints of Nebraska farmers against the elevator monopoly is based on the fact that it strangles all competition at many points in the state and compels producers to sell their grain at prices fixed by the railroads and their partners, the grain dealers.

Grace by Wholesale. There is a New England tradition that when De Witt Clinton was about to be inaugurated as governor of New York, he was visited by a poor man who begged for a loaf of bread.

The Biggest Turtle in the World. "You may think that is a curious story," continued the gentleman, "but I can tell you another about an enormous turtle. This turtle is the largest in the world, and is owned by a friend of mine in New South Wales. His name is John McDonald."

Why these continued slurs at Patrick Egan from the democratic press? What has Mr. Egan done that so disgruntles the bourgeois quill drivers? And what object can there be in fomenting discord and factionalism among the Irish-Americans whose united support is needed to hold up the hands of the nationalist leaders at Westminster?

The Preacher, the Pitcher and the Revivalist. Sam Jones says "There is something more wrong when a sensational revivalist gets $1,000 a week and the preacher gets only $400 a week."

Queen City of the Missouri Valley. Omaha is beyond all question the queen city of the Missouri valley. We do not know that we think she is going to be the largest city west of Chicago, but we don't hesitate to say that she is at the present time the most important city west of Kansas City.

Ed Stokes' Bar-room and Art Collection. "Talking about bar-rooms," said a New York gentleman, now visiting in Omaha, "few persons have any idea of the Omaha bar-rooms. There are sixteen bar-rooms on duty, divided into four watches of six hours each."

A Rustler. North Bend Fall: The Omaha Bee is out in a Sunday edition. The Bee is not enough for the purposes of that enterprising office, and now, like its little namesake, it "rathers honey every day from every opening flower."

The Road We Need. Nebraska and Wyoming will consume more than their usual proportion of steel rails this year. The railroad extension boom shows no signs of abating.

Life is a Shylock. The fullest user's interest for each transaction is not freely scattered in his hands; we make returns for every borrowed cent.

Views and Interviews. An Ape Trained to Perform the Duties of a Switchman. "Those trained parquets show considerable intelligence," said a gentleman, who was watching the fortune-teller and his trained birds at the corner of Farnam and Fourteenth streets, the other day.

The Meanness of Princes. The fact that the expulsion of the Orleans princes from France excited so little popular sympathy in their behalf, beyond the comparatively small following which followed the proverbial Bourbon blindness and bigotry remains faithful to them, is to some extent explained by a Paris correspondent who states that by the exception of the Comte de Paris they are an exceedingly mean crowd.

Who Will Lead? The art movement in the West has made such rapid strides as to call for comment and illustration from the leading magazine of the country. The development of artistic interests in Cincinnati which enables that city to boast of the richest endowments and the largest facilities for art study of any of its western sisters, was fostered and developed by generous citizens like Reuben Springer and John Longworth.

Trains Now Run from Omaha to Lake Manawa. The study of bathing in their application to dripping humanity is becoming the fashion of the day in this section of the Missouri Valley.

Another New Feature. Webster Winsler: The Omaha Daily Bee has added as another feature to its Sunday edition another new perfecting press to be put into its office in a few weeks.

Every dollar saved by Omaha workmen for a rainy day is a nest egg to provide against want. When work is plenty and wages good provision should be made for the time sure to come when labor will be unemployed and butchers' and meat bills, rent and clothes will make steady demands on poorly filled pocket books.
