with the clerk's office by a speaking tube, doing away with much needless running up and down stairs. The clerk can now run up and down the tube-that is, with his voice. A Council Bluffs gentleman who re sides in the upper part of the city is inventing an arrangement for swimmers to put on their feet to facilitate swimming.

He expects this evening to put them into practical use in Lake Manawa. The horses attached to the street cars should be supplied with bells, the same as in all other large cities. It would cause an increase in the receipts of the company, as now many persons who wait in stores, offices, etc., for a car cannot hear or see one until too late. The evangelistic services which have just closed have resulted in more good than can be estimated by mathematics, but the statement of the number of professed converts is, nevertheless, interest-ing as giving some idea of the success of the meetings. This number reaches to between fifty and sixty. McNuly and his bartender, McVittie, were arraigned yesterday for their assault on Spears. Their cases were continued, Spears not being able to appear in court. His injuries are quite serious, but his life is not endangered, and it is expected that he will speedily recover. The accused had their bail fixed at $500 and furnished it.

Those who have not paid their poll tax should now beware. The collector, Mr. Beckman, has been instructed by the council to commence proceedings forthwith against all delinquents, and collect penalties and costs in full, in addition to the tax. The law is very plain and stout, and it is an expensive task to try to evade the payment of the tax if the claim is pressed. There is hardly any-thing exempt from execution on a judgment of this kind, unless it be the man's shirt, and that is not if he chances to take it off while the collector is around.

An Incident Recalled In the War Record of F. W. Halderman.

PRAISES FOR THE EVANGELIST.

Several Business Changes-A Queer Complaint Against the Saloen Raiders-Mike Nolan's Lecture On Ventilation.

Halderman's Army Record, The accidental and fatal shooting of Halderman, of Avoca, recalls an incident of the session of congress which has just closed. Halderman, at the breaking out of the war, was a mere boy, too young to enlist, but he insisted on going to the war, and did so. He provided himself with a horse and arms, and accompanied a cavalry company, and served for a year without being enrolled and without drawing a dollar of pay. During the last session of congress Major Lyman introduced a bill giving Halderman an honorable enrollment, and a recognition of his services, with bounty and pay, and an honorable discharge. While the bill was being explained and passed, a man in the gallery was watching the action on the measure with a great deal of interest, and afterwards he came to Congressman Lyman and introduced himself, saying "Do you know, sir, that boy was one of my boys? He was with my company and I know that he served as stated. I know more about it, too," The captain went on to relate an incident as to young Halderman's behavior and service. "The derman's behavior and service. company were dismounted when a party of the enemy made a dash upon them, surprising them. Young Halderman was by chance the only one on horseback and ready for the fellows. He pulled up his gun and fired, and the officer in charge of the hostile party fell from his horse. This threw the enemy into con-fusion, and before they could rally the boys had got onto their horses, and soon succeeded in driving the enemy and com-ing off victors in the skirmish. Yes, sir, that boy ought to be remembered, and the captain drew up several inches ap-parently in height, as he remarked again,

A Queer Suit.

The saloon raid, which was interrupted by the accidental and fatal shooting of Mr. Halderman, has caused some little commotion, and promises to have its details shown up in court by a peculiar suit. A German living at Avoca, has, during the season, been hauling vegetables to Minden and Neola. On this particular morning, as usual, he started very early with a load. On reaching Mr. Kenney's place he was suddenly stopped by a crowd of men. The German vegetable man knew nothing of the proposed raid on the Minden saloons, but the raiders feared that he had noticed the gathering and that he would, by reaching Minden before they did, tell the Mindenites, and thus spoil the surprise. He says that a dozen men crowded around his wagon, armed with revolvers, and nearly frightened him out of his wits. They told him that he must turn around and go back nome instead of going on to Minden. He turned back with his load, and after getting about half a mile his Teutonic blood had got so hot that he felt it to be an outrage to be prevented tables, others at the bar, behind which from traveling the highway and reaching the market with his vegetables. He accordingly turned back and reached Kenney's place just about the time of the accidental shooting of Halderman. He then returned to Avoca, and conse-quently lost the sale of perishable garden sauce. He is now preparing to put the case into the courts and threatens to have the men arrested for stopping him and obstructing the highway, and to commence suit to recover damages.

Municipal Solons. At the adjourned meeting of the city council yesterday afternoon all the members were present, except Alderman Hammer, who is in Chicago.

The poil tax collector was instructed to commence suit against delinquents for the full amount of the tax and the full penalties. The committee on streets and alleys was empowered to have the alley repaired between Fourth street and Main street, running north from Willow avenue; also the intersections on Main street at Willow avenue and Story street, the paving having settled.

The bids on pine lumber were all rejected on account of some misunderstanding, and the street commissioner in structed to buy as much is needed for each and to distribute the patronage among the different yards.

The council then adjourned until last evening, when they met simply to pass a resolution and estimate on the private paving contract.

The Haddock Meeting. There was a large gathering of citizens n the pavilion last evening, in response to the call for a meeting to take action in regard to the death of Rev. George C. Haddock at Sioux City. Hon. J. R. Reed, of the supreme court of the state, presided, and J. H. Westcott and H. W. Titton were chosen secretaries. In opening the meeting Judge Reed made a few timely remarks in regard to the necessity of law abiding citizens encouraging all moves for the maintenance of law and order and the responsibility devolving on every citizen to meet the questions of the day fairly and squarely. After singing by the choir, prayer was offered by Rev. B F. Thickstun. Jacob Sims. Esq. was the first speaker of the evening. He had been personally acquained with Mr. Haddock, and he narrated some thrilling in-cidents illustrative of the murdered man's moral and physical courage. He paid a glowing tribute to the man and de-nounced the spirit of the traffic which had caused his death. He laid the re-sponsibility of the crime not only upon the man who lired the shot, but upon the whisky traffic, and upon the debauched public sentiment which would permit it to have such sway. Rev. Dr. McCreary then followed with Rev. Dr. McCreary then followed with one of his carnest, feariess addresses. He declared that the murder of Mr. Haddock was a blow at free speech, which was one of the reasons why it had so stirred the whole commonwealth. He placed the saloonists on the same platform as the anarchists, a platform of law-lessness, as they alike insisted on breaking the law created by a majority of the ing the law created by a majority of the people. He declared that he would con-tinue to express his mind freely, and he had no fear of any bullet or dynamite, He had faced the cannon and the rifle on the battlefield, and the day was past when he would yield to any threats against the honest expression of deep convictions of truth, and that there were thousands of like minds enlisted in the

He was earnest in his denunciation of the crime, but expressed sympathy for the poor wretch who had got so carried away from right and truth as to be capa-

Resolved, That we, the citizens of Council Bluffs here assembled, do hereby express an abhorence of this wicked deed, and declare that the murder of the Rev. Geo. C. Mike Notan's Ventilation. Yesterday Mike Nolan was before Judge Aylesworth on the complaint of having kept his saloon open last Sunday. There was no lack of evidence to show that the place had its rear doors wide open, and that there were ten or fifteen stood the bartender, while glasses were on the bar and on the tables, and some men were drinking what looked like beer, although the officers could not swear it was beer, as they did not taste it. Mike was not sworn, and called no witnesses in defense, but proceeded with a learned lecture on the subject of the proper venti-lation of buildings. He explained that the place had to be cleaned up after the rush of six days business, and that the time to do this was on Sunday. It took six men all day to clean up, and these men could not get along without air. "Thurs no ardinance which compels a mun to shoot hisself up in a great barracks like thut, and lock the doors and keep God's frish air out! I don't see how a mun can live in a place and sufficate hisself to death." These views of venti-lation duly impressed the judge, who fixed Mike's fine at the lowest amount under the ordinance, $10 and costs.

A SHARP TRICK.

How a Boston Youth Kept Himself Supplied with Money. Boston Herald: A young man in a dark suit and wearing a felt hat rushed up to an excursionist at Revere beach yesterday, and, as fast as his tongue could articulate, said: "See here, am expecting some friends down on the next train whom I wish to entertain, but being a little short, won't you be so kind as to lend me $2 on this gold pen and case!" at the same time taking from his pocket a beautifully-chased holder, with a little black wooden projection at each end. By a gentle pull at one of them glistening gold pen shot out, making a very pretty and handy establishment to have in one's pocket. Without question the party drew forth a $2 bill, handed it to the stranger, and received the pen and holder as security.

"I only want this for an hour," said the man in the dark snit, as he rolled up the bill and tucked it away in his vest pocket.

"Money lending isn't just the thing on Sunday," said the conscience stricken ex-cursionist, as he lovingly fondled the glistening collateral for his $2. "I hope glistening collateral for his $2. "I hope that fellow can't find me when he wants to redeem his pledge. I nave been wanting a pen of this kind for a long time. Isn't it a beauty? I'll tuck it away in my pocket and go up to the hotel and keep shady for an hour, and then scoot for Bosten," and, with burried stridgs he reaches the kir when hurried strides, he reaches the big plazza and mixed in with the moving throng. Meeting two of his friends a short time afterward, he was tempted to inform them of his transaction with the stranger; so, when opportunity afforded, he pulled out the hypothecated pen and holder, and related the circumstances by which he became its possessor.

"Let's look at it a little closer," said both his companions in a breath, as each one stretched forth a hand. "Why, it's the exact image of one I just loaned a stranger $1 on," said one, and the perfect type of one on which I gave a stranger $2," said the other. Silence rested upon the tro for an in-stant, when all exclaimed: "We have been swindled; these things are not worth three cents."

"But it was a clever trick," remarked one of the purchasers of old brass. "I'll keep mine as a reminder that all is not gold that glitters."
"And so will I," chimed in a second.
"Well, I may keep mine," said the third, "but I intend to get even with this cunning young man."

Going to the depot he told his story to the ticket agent, and requested him to hold the fellow if he attempted to play his game at the office; that he would stand near by with an officer, and they would cage the bird and put an end to his little game. They didn't have long to wait, for in a few minutes a young man hurriedly approached the ticket of-fice, and began fumbling in his pockets for the price of a fare to Boston. Suddenly out came one of his sparkling holders, which he of-fered the railroad man for a ticket. The sign was given the ambushed officer and he pounced upon the fraudulent stationer and marched him off to the Revere lockup, and he will be arraigned in the Chelsea police court to day.
