A Pig-Headed Hog. Officer O'Brien was yesterday requested to arrest a young colored boy named Horace Hogg and hold him until this morning, when his father said he would try to have the boy sent to the reform school as he could do nothing with him.

Hunting a Wayward Husband. Mrs. Lynch, whose husband ran off with his own sister two weeks ago after having family quarrels, has finally got trace of her husband. next day. Since then nothing has been heard from him and his family and friends are very anxious. Telegrams have been sent in various directions, but without getting any clue to his whereabouts. It is feared that he has been taken on all some route or has been snugged and robbed. Some such explanation is looked for, as there seems no one ready to believe that he has voluntarily disappeared. He has lived here, since he has been here, and there can be no reason conjectured why he should voluntarily thus keep silence.

The Western Union telegraph company, as has been stated in the Bee before, is constructing one of the finest wires between this city and Chicago that has ever been strung west of Chicago.
