THE FAMOUS VERDI RAID.

Remarkable Train Robbery Committed in Nevada Fourteen Years Ago.

PRINCIPAL'S

The Ringleader Now a Traveling

J. H. Squires, the leader of the gang

Agent for a Sacramento House-The Capture of the Gang and the Plunder.

that robbed the overland express east of Verdi in 1872, is now traveling agent for a firm in Secramento dealing extensively in lamps. Squires recently visited this city, says the Virginia City (Nev.) Chronicle, as agent for the sale of a coal-oil lamp and burner of a new pattern. One evening during his stay on the Comstock, in the course of conversation, he related the following interesting narrative of and a number of other metalic elements the circumstances which led to the robbery, and of the robbery itself. He was residing in Flowery district at the time the ropbery was planned, and was a partner of the 1ste Jack Davis in several mines. They had exhausted their money in prospecting, and it was necessary to resort to strategy to raise more to develop their property, which Squires to-day maintains contains untold wealth, needing only com to uncover it. Davis had the reputation of having been interested in several stage robberies prior to entering into co-partnership with Squires, but up to the time of the train robbery Squires says he was never connected in any manner with dishonorable transactions.

As staging in this part of Nevada was nearly at an end at that time, it was suggested by Davis that they put up a job to stop the overland express train on the Central Pacitic and rob Wells Fargo's After severa! consultations it was car. decided to resort to that means to replen-ish their depicted exchequer. In order to successfully earry out their plans it was necessary to take in several accomplices. Three men let into the secret had friends in another gang who had also been arranging a train robbery. Three of this gang were taken in order to keep them from giving the business away, which they might have done had they been kept out. Among these was Gilchrist, who afterwards turned state's vidence.

Squires was selected to lay the plan for the rolbery and was unanimously choser leader of the gang. After a careful survey of the situation he_decided upon the quarry side track at Hunter's crossing of the Truckee river, four miles west of Reno, as the most eligible place for comwitting the robbery.

Verdi at that point was the meeting and passing point of the east and west bound overland express trains, they both being due there shortly after midnight. Squires went to San Francisco and spent several weeks in ascertaining the amount of coin shipped by Wells, Farge & Co., and he says that he knew to a dime every day the exact sum that left the office every day on the overland ex-

On the night of the robbery the gang which had been concealed in the timber in the hills back of Verdi, assembled at the station a short time prior to the arrival of the express train from San Francisco, and just as the conductor signaled the engineer to pull out of the station Squires and four of his men stepped upon the platform between the baggage and express cars, and Davis, Parsons and another man got aboard on the platform of the mail car, next to the locometive tender, and climbing into the cab of the engine covered the engineer and firemen with shotguns, and ordered them to keep quiet and obey orders.

Meanwhile Squires and his men had platform of the baggage-car, and a brake man, thinking they were tramps, followed them and ordered them off just as the train started. Squires quietly dropped the brakeman on the ground from the opposite side of the train while it was in

Meanwhile, the conductor, baggage-master and a brakeman opened the forward door of the baggage-car to see who was on the platform, but were ordered to close it by Squires, who held the muzzle of a shotgun in dangerous proximity to the heads of the employes, remarking as ne cocked the weapon that too strong draft came through the open door. After the train had got about three miles east of Verdi, Squires cut the bell cord and pulled the pin between the baggage and express cars, and the engineer was ordered to pull out for the quarry Up to this time the robbers were not aware that the west-bound train was behind time, but thought it had passed at Verdi. On arriving at the switch the engine and two cars were side-tracked, and Wells-Fargo's messenger opening the door to see what was the matter, found his person covered with three shotguns He was ordered to throw up his hands, and Squires and three of his companions entered the car, and after securin the messenger proceeded to remove the coin from the safe. They got away with $120,000 altogether. Pending the removal of the coin from the express car the mail agents were summoned to the door of their car and covered with guns until after it was accomplished. The coin was put in sacks, slung across the backs of horses standing ready saddled, and when the signal was given the gang mounted and rode rapidly away across the bridge in the direction of this city. After the west-bound train came along and the east-bound was backed up to Verdi, the gang recrossed the bridge and bivouacked in the hills on the Peavine road. The coin was divided in two parcels. One half was given to Squires and Davis, which the former cashed in the hills, seven miles north of Reno, after the other members of the gang dispersed. The story of the confession of Gilchrist and subsequent capture of the gang and recovery of most of the com is too famil-iar for rehearsal. Squires served eleven years and a half in state prison, and Davis was killed several years ago while attempting to rob the Typo stage in the eastern part of the state. After his release Squires returned to this city and called upon Mr. Prender-gast, agent of Wells, Fargo & Co. He approached the counter and asked Pren-dergast if he recognized him. Being answered in the negative he asked Pen. to take a good, square look, remarking: "My name is Squires; I have just been pardoned out of state prison after serving nearly twelve years for robbing the express car at Verdi. I understand that you have employed spics to watch my you have employed spics to watch my movements, and I want you to keep a sharp lookout for me.

Squires, in conclusion, says he called at the office several times subsequent to the above conversation with the agent, but Mr. P. aiways disappeared in the back room whenhe entered the premises, and kept out of sight until he passed out. In a subsequent interview Squares said that if Gilchrist had not squealed the gang would have got away with the swag, and the entire erow would have escaped arrest. He stated that he was suspicious of Gilchrist's "sand" from the start, but if he had not been let into the scheme he would have squealed anyhow.

Squires intimated that he intends here-after to earn an honest living. He is a man of more than ordinary intelligence, and has a wonderful faculty for planning; disclosed in the train robbery, which, if directed in another channel, might have made him famous. He is a man of medium stature and slight build, standing five feet eight inches in his stockings. He wears a long, flowing, dark beard. His features are regular, and his eyes dark brown, and they gaze calmly into those of his vis-a vis when engaged in conversation, but flash ominously when speaking of the freach-ery of a supposed friend, or the efforts of enemies to persecute him.

THE ORB OF DAY.

Interesting Facts About the Solar

System's Central Engine. Harper's Magazine: The visible globe of the sun is 1,250,000 times as large as the earth; within the surface so seen there lies a mass exceeding the earth's 320,000 times; the materials present in the sun's globe are the same, as those which form the globe of our earth-at least, we know that iron, copper, zinc, sodium, magnesium, Dealoum, are present; hydrogen is certainly there in enormous quantities, and Dr. Henry Draper proved also that oxygen is present, and no astronomer doubts that those other elements which have not as yet been detected in the sun are really present in its mass Now, have we any evidence as to the way in which the mighty mass of the sun is disposed within that surface which in closes what we term its volume?-though in reality one can hardly say what its volume is, seeing that there are portions of its mass outside the surface which bounds its visible globe. Is the sun's mass uniformly distributed throughout that visible globe, 1,250,000 times as large as our earth? or, on the other hand, is the denser part near the surface so that the sun is what Professor Young once sug-gested, a gigantic bubble. There are three lines on which we can seek for an answer to these questions. Firstly, we find that the visible surface of the sun behaves in a manner inconsistent alike with the idea that this surface is near the real surface of an inferior globe, and with the idea that the visible surface is part of a mighty vesicle or bubble. The spot zones are carried around at different rates, according to their distance from the equatorial solar regions. Not to follow Faye and others in niceties of calculation (far from justified by the evidence we have), I may say that the equatorial zone gains about one rotation in seven on the spot zones, or, roughly, some 2,700,000 miles in 200 days, say 13,500 miles per day. Such a veloc-ity as this, close on ten miles a minute, could not possibly exist in a cloud lader region (such as the visible surface of the sun undoubtedly is), and as affecting regions exceeding the whole surface of the earth thousands of times, unless that cloud-laden region were very far away from the great surface of the sun, and therefore from the frictional effects of the true solar rotation. The real mass of the sun, however distributed, can only rotate as one; the visible cloud surface has many rates of rotation; therefore there must be an enormous distance be tween the two. Secondly, calculation; has been made by competent mathematicians respecting the amount of polar compression which would arise from the rotation of a globe such as the sun appears to be at the average rate of rotation indicated by the solar spots. It is found that the polar flattening would be well within the measuring capacity of our best instru-ments. But if there is one thing certain about the sun, it is that (within such capacity) his apparent globe is not flat-tened at all. It is absolutely certain, then, that the real globe of the sun lies far within the surface of flowing clouds which we see and measure.

Thirdly, our earth has her story to tell about the sun's interior. We know from the earth's crust that, for periods of time which geologists now estimate by tens of millions of years, the sun's power has been at work on the earth's crust, by rain, wind and storm, fashioning and refashioning the structures of that crust, now forming layers, anon cutting them up, but throughout leaving clear traces of his handiwork. Croll estimates the duration of this part of the earth's history—that is, of the time during which the earth's crust has been forming under solar action—at fully 100,000,000 years. In other words, our earth tells us of at least 100,000,000 years of sun work, at the sun's present rate of working. It is a matter of no importance whether we suppose that the sun has worked all the time at the present rate, or has sometimes worked with more energy, sometimes with less. It is the quantity of sun work, not the way in which the work has been done, which alone has to be considered. Now, all physicists and astronomers are agreed regarding the sun's emission of heat as due wholly or almost wholly to solar gravitation, resulting in the steady contraction of the sun's mass. To get from the sun of the past ages the amount of work which our earth tells us he has actually done, we must suppose him once to have been very much larger than he is now-how much larger we cannot say. I take it also that the change which takes place in the aspect of the sun's corona as the number of sun spots varies and the alteration of the physical condi-tion of the corona—in such sort that when there are many spots its spectrum indicates the presence of glowing hydro-gen, whereas, when there are few the lines of hydrogen are few or wanting-correspond also with the theory that the time of sun spots is a time of great crup-tional activity. For the rush of ejected masses through the coronal region would cause the hydrogen present there (not an atmosphere, but irregularly distributed and moving around the sum) to glow with greater lustre, so as to show the lines of hydrogen in the spectrum of the corona. It is at any rate remarkable that all the facts known to us in regard to the sun spots themselves, to the colored flames and to the corona, should agree in con-firming that which is already all but demonstrated by three strong lines of evidence, that the real working mass of the sun is very much smaller than the the sun is very much smaller than the globe we measure as his, and that all the phenomena which give so great an interest to the study of the sun are due to tremendous forces at work tens of thou-sands of miles below the surface which limits our view of his globe and hides from us the processes by which the life of the solar system is maintained. "Morit overcomes prejudice." This is why physicians endorse Red Star Cough

The Beginning of "Get There, Ell." Chicago Herald: "Talking about slaug," said a base ball crank on a horse car, "can any of you fellows tell me where the 'get there, Eti," phrase comes from?"

Not one of all the crowd had any idea of the origin of "get there, Eii."
"Well, I'll tell you how it was," continued the crack. "Way back in the seventies, out at the old Twenty-second street grounds, the Chicagos had a player named Ely. He was a tall lank fellow, who used to throw himself like a Dutch windmill when legging it from one base to another. The boys used to laugh at him and yell out, 'Get there, Ely!' At first they pronounced his name correctly, with the accent on the first syllable, but that was quickly changed, and the name spoken as if it were 'Eli.' Since then the expression has gone all over the world."
