Mayor Evans and Supervisor Graham went to Des Moines yesterday morning to settle up the mixed matter of the double assessment of the Union Pacific railroad property in Council Bluffs, an explana-tion of which was given in the Bee of September 8. The city assessed the property in question at $400,000, while the state board assess the same property at the regular rate per mile, making it only $237,000. The company obects to paying a double assessment, and the city objects to the lower one. The two gentlemen who have gone were appointed a com-mittee to meet the state board, and see if the matter could not be arranged more to the satisfaction of all parties.

Some young fellows went out to Big Lake to hunt for ducks Sunday morning. After hunting for quite a while they found one, and one of the party shot it. The duck plumped into the lake and the hooter started for it. He boldly waded in and when the water came nearly to his chin swam for it, but before he reached his prize a bold bad man in a boat picked it up and sailed away over the main with it. When he shore they hunted some more, and finally found a sunflower. Being determined to shoot something, the swimmer blazed away at the sunflower, when up jumped a man and declared that it was a delib erate attempt at murder. The man declares he will swear out an information against the shooter. James Lee, a Hack Driver, Arrested for a Murder Committed Six Years Ago.

The Case of Dr. Cross to Be Catled Up Again To-Day at Glenwood-On the Wrong Train-

Bluffs News.

THE CRIME A COLD-BLOODED ONE

CHARGED WITH AN AWFUL CRIME.

James Lee, a Hack Driver, Arrested For a Murder Committed Six

Years Ago. About four months ago Sheriff Perry Reel received a communication from New Albany, Ind., in which it was stated that one James L. Quinn, who was thought to be in this city under the name of James Lee, was wanted at New Albany for a cold-blooded murder committed there in 1880. With the communication was a picture of the fegitive from justice taken a number of years ago, in fact several years before the murder was committed. The sheriff took his deputy, James O'Neil, into his confidence and the two worked together on the case for awhile, and not being successful in their search for the man they took Policeman Nick O'Brien into the case, at the suggestion of Deputy would be more apt to recognize their man by the picture. About a month after the sheriff re-ceived the description of Quinn, City Marshal Guanella also received a letter from the authorities in Indiana inclosing another picture and relating the circumstances connected with the murder.

The police force of the city were kept in entire ignorance of the case, O'Brien being the only one on the force who knew anything of the matter, and all he knew was that the sheriff had requested him to arrest "Jim Lee," who had been a driver of one of William Martin's backs for about four years, whom O'Brien knew and the sheriff did not.

On Sunday morning as Policeman O'Brien and a representative of the BEE were standing on Broadway near Pearl street, Lee was noticed coming along and Officer O'Brien walked up to him and escorted him to the county jail, where he was locked up. None of his friends, not even his wife, were made aware of his arrest until Sunday night about 10 o'clock, The object of this secrecy was that the sheriff wished, if possible to that the sheriff wished, if possible, to obtain from Lee Quinn a confession of the crime before permitting any outside influence to be brought to bear on him.

Lee demed the crime, but finally admitted that he was the man wanted, after which Sheriff Reel sent for his wife, who was closeted with him until long after midnight.

Lee having agreed to go with the sheriff without requisition papers, the arrest was, at the request of the sheriff, not made public yesterday morning, as the sheriff was afraid that Lee would be-come angry and recede from the arrangethereby making unnecessary

About four years ago Quinn, under the name of James Lee, married Miss Christie Martin, sister of William Martin, the hack owner, for whom he drove. They have had no children, and several months ago Quinn disappeared, and his wife, not knowing his whereabouts and remembering that he claimed to have formerly lived at New Albany, Ind., wrote to the officers there inquiring if he had gone back.

Answer came that they thought he as, and requested her to forward his picture. She did this, and they at once recognized Lee as the man Quinn, who wanted there for murder, and immediately notified Sheriff Reel, with the result as given above.

Yesterday Mrs. Lee repaired to the jail, and was legally married to her hus-band under his real name of Quinn by Justice Schurz, and last evening accom-panied her husband and the sheriff on heir trip to Indiana.

The authorities of New Albany say that on August 1, 1880, over six years ago, James Lee Quinn brutally murdered Wm. Sharp, with whom he was at work threshing. That they had a quarrel and sharp words while at work, and that subsequently Quinn met Sharp in the barn and beat him to death with a club, pounding his head to a jelly, and scatter-ing his brains about the barn, and that he then left town, and they never heard of him again until this summer, when his wite wrote for information concern-ing him. Since Lee has lived here he has been recognized by the police as a hard citizen, and he has been in a number of scrapes. Quinn admits that he had a quarrel with Sharp, but says it was entirely confined to words, and that he did not meet him after they left the threshing machine. He says that Sharp went to work in the barn, and he believes that he fell through a hole in the hay loft and fractured his skull on an iron rod he struck in falling. That Sharp did not die immediately, but lived for several days. Quinn says he remained in town for six days waiting for his trial, and that then, by the advice of his folks, he skipped out. He ex-presses himself as satisfied that they can prove nothing against him, as he says they have no witnesses except a young boy, a son of Mr. Sharp, and that he saw nothing except the quarrel at the ma-

The Cross Case.

Lust winter, through the strenuous efforts of his attorneys, Dr. Cross, who was under sentence of death for the murder of Dr. A. B. McKane, of this city, was granted a new trial. He was tried and sentenced in Mills county, the case having been taken there from here on a change of venue. An appeal was taken to the supreme court, and it is said that court stretched a point in order to reverse the case and send it back for a new trial on the ground of errors committed by the court. His bail was fixed at $20,000, for which amount he failed to find sureties, consequently he has remained in prison.

To-day his case is to be called up at Glenwood, but what disposition will be made of it can not be told. In the former trial'N. M. Hubbard, of the firm of Wright, Baldwin & Haldane, and J. Y. Stone were attorneys for E. D. Cross, and A. J. Baker, A. B. Thornell, Sapp & Pusey, and D. B. Dailey attorneys for the state. Messrs Hubbard and Wright, Baldwin and Haldane are no longer in the case. Messrs Hubbard and Wright Baldwin and Haldane are no longer in the case, which will hereafter be defended by J. Y. Stone and A. V. Larrimer. The attorneys for the state have been requested to confort t sent to a continuance, but they are ready for trial and decline, so the defense will probably make either a motion for continuance, or for a change of venue. Eletric door bells, burgiar alarms, and every form of domestic electrical appli-ances at the New York Plumbing Co.

THE BIG BRIDGE. The Great Structure Between New York and Brooklyn Examined

Every Week. The elevated railroad structures seem to have been, and doubtless were, built in as solid and durable a manner as was possible under their system, says the New York Sun. It is, however, observable that the repairs upon them, necessit ited by the severe wear and tear to which they are subjected, appears to be unceasing, and it is by no means a violent supposition that a short relaxation of the vigilent watch and promptly applied care enforced by the management of the roads might render them very perilous highways of travel. Consideration of this possibility—an extremely remote one. it is to be hoped—suggests the idea that it may be rather a vital question how far a like watchfulness prevails for the pro-tection of the great East river bridge. Superintendent Martin, in a recent con-versation on the subject said:

"A constant and more careful super-vision is maintained over every part of the bridge, though, apart from the rail-road, which is not properly a part of the structure, no signs of wear are apparent, and we hope none will be for a hundred years to come Every Monday morning two expert mechanics go over the railroad track from end to end, oiling the sheaves on which the trading cable runs and ex-amining the bolts and fastenings of the If anything should get out of order during the week it would be noticed by the conductors on the cars, who are all the time on the look out, and would be immediately reported by them at the station when they came in, whereupon a man would be sent out at once to rectify anything that was out of order. Every day the machinery which drives the cable is thoroughly inspected in every part, and should anything in the mean-time get out of order it would be re-ported promptly to Chief Engineer Hart.

who would take instant measures for making all perfect and secure again. Every week there is a careful examiation made of everything pertaining to the structure below the line of the tops of the cars, and once a month the four saddles on the top of each tower, supporting the bridge cables, are scrutinized. There is never anything wrong with them, or anything to do to them except to keep palated well, and it is not likely that any-thing will come to them for a century to come. There can be no movement of the saddles unless on occasions of extraordinary great irregularity in the loading of the bridge. When those occur they shift position so as to distribute the strain equally over the structure, and when the strain is removed they go back into place. On one occasion of the DeLong funeral there was an enormous pressure on the New York span, and the saddles moved three-eighths of an inch, but the moment that the weight on the bridge was shifted over to this end, where the conditions of support are different from those of the new York span, they moved back into place.

"In addition to those established occa vision made for covering possibilities meantime by means of the employes at work in the several departments, who are all made to feel a sense of responsibility and exercise a constant watchful ness, every person in any way connected with the bridge, whenever crossing it or upon it, is expected to be always on the lookout for anything that may be wrong. or that may even seem to him to be arreg ular or questionable about the condition of the structure, in even the most minute particular. Whatever is discovered is in-stantly reported to me, and I immediately attend to it in any way the occasion demands. Nothing gets loose anywhere, excepting about the railroad, where, of course, there is constant strain and fric-tion. The nuts on the ends of the pins that go through the trusses were at first occasionally found loose—just started a little from their proper condition of absolute tightness—but nothing of that sort has occured for some time. Every man employed in any responsible place about the bridge feels as if it was in his per-sonal charge, and keeps snarp watch for Gerard, wife of Engineer Gerard, of the Union Pacific, this city, has been a great sufferer for many years, with what was supposed to be cancer of the throat. It was so bad that she was threatened with starvation. Her general health was completely broken down. She could only swallow liquid food, and even that her stomach could not digest or assimilate. Physicians of Council Bluffs and Omaha attended her for three years and gave no relief. Dr. Jefferis, of this city, was called.
