No school was held in the Eight street school yesterday, it being dismissed be-cause of the severe illness of Mr. Dunn, the janitor, as mentioned in the BEE of yesterday. It was not expected that he yesterday. It was not expected that he would live through the day, though up to a late hour last evening he was still any, a late hour last evening he was still alive, though his physician gave no hope of even a temporary recovery. Mr. Dunn was an old soldier, and while in the army he contracted disease. For some years past he has led a life of hardship and privation, which has gradually sapped his health and strength. Mr. Dunn and his family occupy the janitor's quarters in the school building, and it was feared that it would annoy him to have the accessions continued, so the school board requested Dr. Macrae to visit Mr. Dunn, requested Dr. Macrae to visit Mr. Dunn, and ascertain if in his condition it would prove injurious to him to have school continued, or if there was anything in the disease which would render it advisable to remove him from the building on account of the scholars. The doctor reported that the man had the dropsy, and that he thought it would worry him more to thunk that school was dismissed on his account than it would to keep it epen. Also that there was nothing in the disease that endangered the health of others in the building. So hereafter the school will run as usual. Mrs. Dunn will act as janitress.

Improving County Roads. Some of the cities in lows are following a policy that is better trying to embrace the whole county within the city limits. Dubuque has been following the same policy that Davenport has adopted for many years past. All the principal roads radiating from the city back into the country are macadamized for five or more miles and this betterment of roads is every year being improved and extended. It is believed that Dubuque set this example of improving highways by connecting them with her paved streets. The great quantity of superior rock right in Dubuque enables this macadamizing to be done, cheaply and easily. Other cities, that have no rock for building or any purpose, will lack the means to thus
