Why Cleveland Freed Three Convicted Mormon Bishops From the Penitentiary.

Illegally Imprisoned. WASHINGTON, Oct. 9 .- [Special Telegram to the Bre. |-The president has pardoned three Mormon bishops who were convicted in Arizona nearly two years ago for practic ing polygamy. It seems that an unsuccess ful effort was made to try the defendants under the Edmunds law, and this failing they were indicted and convicted under the territorial laws for unlawful cohabitation. The penalty for this offense is confinement in jail and a fine of $3,000. The judge, however before whom the trial took place, imposed [sentence under the Edmunds law, giving each of the defendants two years imprisonment in the penitentiary and imposing a fine of $1,000. The three bishops were sent to the penitentlary at Detroit, Mich., where they have been in confinement for nearly eighteen months. The application for pardon was referred to the attorney general, who decided that the action of the territorial judge in imposing sentence was illegal, and the president therefore directed a pardon to be issued. This would seem to be a case which furnishes excellent ground for a suit for damages on account of illegal pun-

A LOT OF DISGUSTED SPORTS. A LOT OF DISGUSTED SPORTS.

The local sports about town were greatly excited all day over the report that a prize fight was to take place this afternoon at Shepard's landing opposite Alexandria. The place is just inside the District line and was selected on that purpose. The sports were encouraged by the appearance of some of the wall known Baltimore fraterity and sarily well known Baltimore fraternity, and early this afternoon there was quite an exodus towards the appointed place. The singgers were two young hitters, Ed Murphy, of Baltimore, and Jim Young, of Washington. They had given several exhibitions in variety theatres and at sporting resorts in Baltimore, but their friends were anxious for them to try their powers in the ring. To-night the crowd came back to the city greatly disgusted because they found out that the singgers had grown timid at the last moment and failed to show up. There are a lot of very dis-gusted sports in town to-night.

SENATOR PIKE'S SUCCESSOR.

Senator Pike, of New Hampshire, is hardly dead before the politicians begin to name his successor. The fight no doubt will be a bitter one and revives the old combat between ex-Senator Rollins and ex-Secretary William E. Chandler. Senator Pike was selected as successor to Rollins and the fight caused a little antagonism to arise between Chandler and Rollins. Pike was a compromise caudidate and most likely another compromise will be effected because Rollins and Chandler are still in the field. A new legislature is to be elected in November and no appointment will be made before the new legislature is elected. The candidates will have plenty of time to make their canvasses. This legislature will most likely elect a successor to Sentered. ture will most likely elect a successor to Sen term. But as the legislature does not meet until January, Governor Currier will appoint a senator up to that time. Among the candidates are ex-Senator Patterson, ex-Congressman Marston, Daniel Barnard, (the late senator's law partner) and ex-Governors man Marston, Daniel Barnard, (the late senator's law partner), and ex-Governors Cheeny and Smyth. Chandler was opposed to Currier's election and cannot expect an appointment from him. The flag on the senate wing of the capitol has been at half mast all day, and the senate chamber has been draped with mourning in respect to Senator Pike's memory.

A SOUTHERN TREASURY ARCHITECT.

It was mentioned in this correspondence a day or so ago that there would be most likely a change in the office of supervising architect of the treasury. Mr. Bell has held the place for some time. He came from Iowa to second it and he has lasted two years under to accept it and ne has lasted two years under the democrats, but a change is most probable now. To-day Acting Secretary Fairchild inrmed Senator Enstis , of Louisiana, that Mr. William Trerret of New Orleans, had been asked to come to Washington and see the president. The appointment is made by the secretary of the treasury, but of course the president is consulted in the matter. Mr. Trerret is spoken of as a good architect and is now on his way to this city.

Is now on his way to this city.

THE GREAT NATIONAL DRILL.

The success of the proposed national drill in this city next May is already assured. The money is secured and the services of Prof.

T. C. De Leon, the celebrated drill master, are engaged. These are the prerequisities of success. From the very day the sites of success. From the very day the project was put on foot and announced in the press a volume of correspondence began. Military companies in every part of the country began to send inquiries until it is all one man can do at this early day to answer questions from those who mean to take substantial interest. In the first place Washington is by far the best place in the United States for a military exhibit. There are much States for a military exhibit. There are much the finest streets and grounds here for parades and drills, the best atmosphere in May, the best local military companies, besides headquarters of the army and navy, the army and naval academies, all of which will add much to the occasion and it has the greatest enthusiasm of any place over military affairs. Nothing depends upon that uncertain and uncharitable body known as congress, unless possibly a joint resolution granting privilege to use the white house lot and one or two other governwhite house lot and one or two other governwhite noise lot and one of two other government reservations for drills. All is a private enterprise and it is not a money-making scheme. It is proposed to hold band concerts and special exhibitions in drill at night on the white house lot and charge sufficient admission to meet the other expenses. All other entertainments will be free. The drills will be test eight days winding up on decorawill last eight days, winding up on decora-tion day, when the great national cemeteries will be visited. It promises to be an affair which will figure in the history of the

CHANGES IN THE CABINET.

An Ohio man suggests that ex-Senator George H. Pendleton, of the Buckeye state, now minister to Berlin, may have as his object. pect in coming here a trade of positions with Secretary of State Bayard. Mr. Pendleton does not like it abroad, and Mr. Bayard makes no secret of his desire to spend a season in a foreign country. The suggestion looks plausible. There is very little doubt that there will be at least one, and may be three, changes in the cabinet as soon as the excitement over the elections settle down. Messrs, Manning and Gariand are on the eve of retirement, while Mr. Bayard may be ready to go out also. After all it seems that Mr. Whitney, who to the country gave the least promise, has turned out the most satisfactory man in the cabinet for the president.

Some very interesting reports will be made by government employes and others on the South Carolina earthquakes when congress convenes. Besides the two scientists sent to Charleston by the geological survey and the signal office engineers from the war depart-ment, architects from the supervising EARTHQUAKE PHOTOGRAPHS. ment, architects from the supervising architect's office, treasury department, were sent down. They made careful examinations, and are preparing elaborate reports to their superior officers, and they will be printed. Then there will be a lot of photographic views inserted in the reports. Over fitty line views of crumbled buildings, geysers and fissures were obtained by one artist. An enterprising related architecture, and the supervising related to the supervision related to views of crumbled buildings, geysers and fissures were obtained by one artist. An enterprising photographer here has obtained copies of these views, and is doing a thriving business turning out duplicates. There will be the first series of carthquake documents published by this government out very soon.

THE COLOR LINE AT WASHINGTON.

The drawing of the color line at Richmond, Va., the other day has led to an inquiry on the subject here. It is ascertained that none of the best hotels in Washington will receive a colored man as a guest if it can possibly be avoided, although all of them have colored people as guests frequently. Here an effort is made, and pretty successfully, too, to enforce the civil rights law, while at Richmond a case of that kind would be laughed out of court. There are more barber shops for black men in Washington than probably any other city in the United States. There are many barber shops here which are never entered by white men, and it is doubtful it some of them would do the work for a white man, so strong is the line down. Colored men are never accommodated in a white man's barber shop, and no act would lose trade for a first class shop as quick as work for a colored man.

ANOTHES BENEDICTINE BOUNCE.

Public Printer Benedict, after a rest of many three days, let his are fail again to night and discharged thirty men from the government printing office, among them John R. Kennedy, master workman of the printers assembly, Kuights of Labor. Mr. Benedict has claimed so far that his removals have been nonpartisan, but among the dismissals to-day were a number of republican printers, excellent workmen, and standing high in their profession. There could be no cause on this ground for removal. The chance for Benedict's confirmation by the senate seems to be growing beautifully less.

ON ACCOUNT OF MES. THOMPSON.

The Kentuckians in this city are jubilant tonight over the defeat of Congressman Willis of Louisville, Ky., for renomination. He was defeated today and the democrats say retribution has come to him for causing the reappointment of Mrs. Thompson, as postmaster of Louisville. It was to Willis that the President said that he was going to leave the selection and appointment of postleave the selection and appointment of post-masters to congress where they represented cities. But Willis is better known to the cities. But Willis is better known to the country as the chairman of the river and harbor committee, and the congressman who successfully engineered the last river and harbor bill through congress. The demorats have shown their usual stupidity in turning down a good man and one of use to them in congress. The fight over Carlisle is on the same grounds the appointment of on the same grounds the appointment of

DEAD MAN'S MONEY.

Worse Than Black Cats to a Gambler, and Still Waiting for Lucy Twenty Years After Her Husband Lost It.

Chicago Herald: "Teil you a story, me boy? mused a Clark street gambler to the Herald reporter. "Well, I don't mind if 1 do. I've been carrying one around in my head for this twenty year, and I guess it won't harm anybody if I tell it to you. It was away brek in the early 60's, when me and Cy Merritt were dealing faro in Baltimore. It was in the fall of the year, too, by the way, for I remember, we had just rigged up a stove near the roulette wheel. One night when the play was light and there was nobody in the house but me and Cy, a man opened the door, sat down at the faro table and bought sat down at the late table and bought five stacks of chips. He was a young feller, this man was. He had a light mustache, blue eyes, and a face as white as a case sheet. Cy did the dealing and I went up into the lookout chair. The deal came our way all through, and the feller lost his chips in no time. But he was a dandy, though. He was betting all over the layout, and if he had ever called the turn he'd knocked us silly. I seen that the game was going to be a heavy one so I just locked the door, put on an old straw hat and watched the on an old straw hat, and watched the bets. The feller never said a word-more'n to call for chips. He never took his eyes oft'n the table either. Long about midnight me and Cy got hun-gry, and we asked the feller if he'd stop long enough to get semething expressed for Arensdorf, owing doubtless to his prominence and the good name he has the play went on. Nearly every bet he made Cy picked up. The feller seemed strangely unlucky, but he never beefed. Never a word came out'n his head. He just set there and bet and lost till I got sick. About daylight the feller got down to his last hundred. He blew it all in for chips. He slapped $10 on the queen to lose and another sawbuck on the to win. He whip-sawed us, begosh, and then Cy said he was hungry and we'd better go get something to eat. The fellow said he wouldn't have anything of the kind. Me and Cy were about ready to fall out of our chairs from hunger, but the player seemed to be as fresh as a lark. Every once in a while he'd take a drink of whisky, but that's all.

"From the moment he whipsawed no he began to win just as fast as he had lost during the night, He was just making Cy and the money box sweat when I exchanged places with my partner, and began to fix the cards in the sardine box or the next deal. The stranger had his bets all made when I tapped the box for luck. But that was all the good it did me. The fellow called the turn from start to finish, and hauling in enough chips to make him even. Me and Cy were getting a little uneasy and faint, but the stranger was as fresh as a daisy. kept on playing until away into the after-noon, with dead luck agin the bank. It had been over twenty-four hours since we'd eaten a mouthful of anything, but the feller still insisted on playing. o'clock he was about $2500 winner and showed no signs of quitting. "Finally I got so fired that I couldn't watch the bets no longer. I got up and walked around the room, while Cy began to deal. From that minute the feller began to lose, and at midnight he was down to his last hundred. I remember just how he looked then, although it' twenty years ago. His face looked like marble, his great blue eyes glittering with a strange light. He had all of his chips in his left hand, while with his right he stroked his long, silk-like mustache. I was looking over his shoulder when he made his last bet. He played the same old cards again-the queen to iose and the ace to win. Then he leaned forward and watched Cy pull the cards. could almost hear the stranger's heart thump when Cy began to uncover the ace of diamonds, and when he unveiled the queen of hearts I saw the player's fingers twitch nervously, a strange cry escaped from his lips, and then he fell backward upon the floor—dead.

not tell you all that happened from that time until the close of the coro ner's inquest, for it's rather unpleasant But this much I will tell you When they searched the feller's clothes they found nothing but this letter, which bore no date:

My Darling Henry: Hold on to the money you have been entrusted with. You know your weakness, and just think what would become of the children and I should anything happen to Ever since that day I have been trying to find who Henry was. Cy has been looking for Lucy, but neither of us has been successful. Do you know it has always been my opinion that Henry was sent to Baltimore to buy goods, and that when he realized he had lost his employer's money the shock was too much for him. Lucy was his wife, me boy, and I often wonder if she has learned of strange death. I wish we could find her, for the money we won from her husband has been compounding interest these twenty years. Suppose me and Cy could spend a cent of that stuff after what had happened? It would have gone agin our grain, and then, besides, it would have been a Jonah. Dead man's money is wass than black eats."

ARENSDORF IS ARRAIGNED.

The Alleged Assassin of Rev. Haddock Brought into Court.

HIS BAIL FIXED AT $45,000.

Independent Republicans Endorse Hon. John McShane-Other Nebraska Politics - Telegraphic News From two Big States.

Before the Bar of Justice. Stoux City, Ia., Oct. 9,-[Special Telegram to the BEE.]-This has been another day of intense excitement in the murder case The preliminary examination of John Arens dorf, the one named in the Leavitt confession as the murderer, was held to-day. Long before the hour for the same to begin the court room was crowded and the sidewalk and street in the immediate vicinity were thronged. Arensdorf was brought in about 9 o'clock accompanied by Sheriff McDonald and his deputies, followed by his attorneys, O. C. Treadway and Matt M. Gray. The first charge preferred was that of conspiracy, the same being conducted before Justice Brown. He is charged with conspiracy with Henry Sherman, Fred Munchrath, jr., and others, on the night of August 3, in the murder of Rev. Haddock. The state was represented by Henay J. Taylor, who filed a motion for a continuance of the case until Monday. The motion set forth that H. L. Leavitt, a material witness for the state, was In Klingstey and could not reach here until that time.

Lawyer Treadway filed a motion for a change of venue. This was argued at great length by the attorneys and associate counsel for both sides. The result of the whole mat ter was that the continuance was granted and the prisoner placed under $20,000 bonds. The following are the sureties: R. Selzer, O. C. Treadway, C. S. Hoyt, James Junk, J. B. Sloan, E. J. Ressegin and L. H. Drumm. Immediately afterward Arensdorf was charged with murder, the information charging him with killing Rev. George C. Haddock, specifying that on the night of August 3 the defendant did lie in wait and did feloniously, wilfully and premeditately kill and murder Rev. Haddock by firing a revolver. The complaining witness is Dr. C. B. E. Ford. Arensdorf's lawyers also in this case filed a motion for a change of venue to Justice Foley's court, allering that the court was prejudiced. The motion was finally granted and the prisoner was taken back to jail to wait until the papers in the case could be filed in Justice Foley's court.

Shortly after 11 o'clock Arensdorf appeared, in charge of the officers and accompanied by his attorneys, to answer the charge of muring him with killing Rev. George C. Had-in charge of the obleers and accompanied by his attorneys, to answer the charge of murder. Attorney Taylor for the state filed a motion for a continuance until Monday. This was the occasion for another sally between the attorneys. Finally the case rested and the continuance was granted until Monday, Arensdorf's bond being fixed at $25,000. The bondsmen were the same as in the conspiracy case.

As stated yesterday when Arensdorf was brought to the city last night, he was taken As stated yesterday when Arensdorf was brought to the city last night, he was taken at once to jail where he remained all might. This morning, in company with the officials, he went to his home to see his family, who jare greatly distressed. Here a most affecting scene took place. The prisoner refuses to say anything with reference to his case or make any statement for publication. It is expected that M. D. McConnell, of Fort Dodge, and possibly States Attorney Baker will be here Monday and assist in the prosecution. The examination promises to be a very sensational and searching one.

George Lange, arrested yesterday for conspiracy, has prepared a written state-spiracy, has prepared a written statement, which is now in the hands of the officers. In this he states he saw the of the officers. In this he states he saw the assassin commit the crime and that he saw Haddock fall. He does not state in this who fired the shot, but says he will swear who the murderer is. Lange has made several contradictory statements, however, and there is some doubt as to how much confidence may be placed upon his statement. Many believe, however, that he is arranging to turn states evidence. It is expected that Leavitt will be brought here to-morrow. Much sympathy is always borne. During the examination to-day many evidences of friendship from the crowd were manifested and the Germans particularly refuse to believe him guilty.

Much stress is laid on the point that Leavitt's account of the murder does not correspond with the account given by the man who saw the shooting from the window of who saw the shooting from the window of the engine house. The man at the engine house testified before the coroner's jury that the one who did the shooting came tro Columbia house corner, following Mr. dock. Leavitt says Arensdorf came up in front of Haddock. Rumors of all kinds and con-jectures and surmises are heard on every hand, and all shades of opinion are expressed. The public is anxiously waiting to learn what defense Arensdorf will make and what he has to say for himself.

Prohibition in Iowa.

DUBUQUE, Ia., Oct. 9 .- | Special Telegram to the BEE.]-Judge Couch rendered an important decision in the case of Koob, who was fined by the mayor of Cascade, Dubuque county, for selling liquor without a city li cense, and for selling to minors, appealed to the district court. He demurred to the complaint in the former case on the ground that the state law did not permit the city to li-cense saloons, and in the latter case on the ground that the state law provided punishment for allowing minors to frequent saloons and that the city could not impose an additional punishment. The demurrer was sustained. It is calculated this will cause Du-buque saloon keepers to refuse to pay the city license.

HOW TO LIVE LONG

The Course Pursued by People Who Have Attained Great Age.

English Exchange: A few days ago the hero of the hour in France was M Chevreul, who has just completed the first century of his existence; and a fete in his honor was celebrated in the botan-ical gardens of Paris. To what does this eminent man attribute his great age To the action of coffee in preventing waste of system, and to his moderation in eating.

In addition to coffee he has indulged in warm baths. He has always, it is reported, had a repugnance to fish and to vege-tables; but he likes onions and fruits. Wine he has never sasted. But other things besides diet have contributed to things besides diet have contributed to M. Chevreul's long life.

First, he had a good beginning. His ancestors were healthy and long-lived; moreover, he never found money "hard to get and heavy to hold." If not born with a silver spoon in his mouth, he was certainly well provided for, and he seems to have had little trouble in the world.

But M. Chevreul, does not dogmatize like some other men who have achieved length of days. A few seem to thus length of days. A few seem to think their own method of living and working the best for all other men. The Abbe Moigno, a famous French scientist, for instance, exclaimed: How happy would those be who should adopt my regime." He attributed his powers of work and his old age to abstinence from tobacco, eating little meat, to the habit of never saying "I shall do," or "I am doing,," but "I have done," and to the fact that he added a drop of rum to his

The experience of M. Mignet, another octogenarian, who was the oldest mem-ber of the French Academy, differs slightly from the industrious savant. He ascribes his extreme old age to sobriety in eating and drinking, the habit of long walks, constant and congenial work, early hours, and perfect contentment with a small income. Extraordinary are the reasons assigned by some people for their great age. Referring to M. Chevreul, a Paris correspondent says he can see no special merit in a man's living 100 years. "The other day," he says, "I was shown an ancient angler who is 105 years cld, and who has been teasing gudgeons in the River Rance for nearly a century past."

This worthy old Frenchman attributes his great age to fishing with a rod and line, and says that if every one would go a-fishing for a hundred years or so very few would die young! Lord Marchmont, the friend of the poet Pope, lived to the age of eighty-six. In reply to a question as to his habits, he explained that he had laid down when young one maxim to which he rigidly adhered, and to which he attributed mucl of his good health. What was that? To rise with the lark? No. To go to bed sober? No. To live on one meal a day? No. It was, "never to mix his wines." Not less curious is the reason given by certain Canon Bleadon, who reache 100 years by the simple precaution of wearing an overcoat! It is recorded by another centenarian that he had never

he had saved his digestion from prema ture exhaustion. From the land of cakes we have equally interesting, but equally unsatisfactory, explanations of long life. A Scotch newspaper recently announced the death of tour centenarians in Morayshire. one it is stated, "During her long life she took no other medicine than sulphur and infused blackberry leaves, to she attributed her perfect state of health and longevity."

There is one case on record which would seem to prove that even dirty habits are not unfavorable to longevity.

An Edinburg paper, of February, 1771, reports the death of a Montrose woman in her 107th year. "Her neighbors say that she had not washed her face for thirty or forty years before her death."

In the good old times this adage appears to have been regarded as gospel by all classes, and, inspite of hard drinking many tipplers lived to old age. There is now in England a famous New

Robert Collyer, who says that the way to the age of 80 is to be temperate, virtuous and to "keep on the suppy side of the hedge." He is himself considerably over hedge." He is himself considerably over 60, and declares that he has never been ill for a day. He attributes his good health to the fact that he was reared on oatmeal and milk, and he claims to have ever had indigestion in his life. On the other hand, Carlyle lived to be
