Dedication of a Church.

Pursuant to announcement the Chris tian church on Walnut Hill was dediented yesterday, the services taking place at 11 o'clock in the morning. Nearly all the residents of the vicinity, irrespective of religious beliefs, were present, and a very large number came from the city. Rev. J. Madison Williams, of West Liberty, In., assisted by Deacon J. T. Smith, conducted the services, and the former preached a very practical sermon. A feature of the occasion was the presence of a number of children from the deaf and dumb asylum, to whom the eloquent words of the preacher, the prayers and hymns were translated into the sign language by Prof McClure. The music was very fine considering the basty manner in which the members of the choir were called together. After the services proper a collection was taken up for the purpose of defravior the express of the repose of defraying the expenses of furhishing the church any other necessary incidentals. It was intended to raise $400, and without any pressing whatever $375 was gathered in, Dr. Mercer and Prof. J. A. Gillespie heading the list with $50 each, and the members of the Christian church of this city responding very generously. In the evening services were also held, and the Christian church of Walnut Hill is now one of the religious institutions of this goodly community.

Cheerfulness a Means of Doing Good. At the Seward Street M. E. Church yesday morning Rev. Chas. W. Savidge preached to a large congregation that tilled the church, a children's sermon from Proverbs 17-22: "A merry heart doth good like medicine." It is his practice to preach a ten-minute sermon every Sunday morning to the children, but in it he hits the older people. His subject was: "Cheerfulness as a means of doing good." His address is outlined as follows: To do good should be a life purpose. It was said and said truthfully of Christ that he went about doing good. His path for thirty three years was strewn with good-

Many would be glad to do good but do not know how. They have a great deal of our goodness, and they go along from earth to heaven complaining and growing, never thinking that to do good you must use the means, and one of the means is cheerfulness. Others the principal occupations of these places. think that to do good they must look very grave and solemn. Did you ever see the picture of Richard Baxter in that most excellent book, "The Saints Rest?" He looks there as if he had lost his best friend. God does not believe in nor does He teach that we should look anything but cheerful. He believes in the cheerful and the beautiful. We read in Job 37-21: Now men see not the light which is in the cloud. The other evening I went out to see a farmer friend of mine at sunset. It was a beautiful evening and it seemed I could look through the clouds into heaven.

The wise man in his proverbs says "a merry heart doeth good like medicine. Jesus himself went to a marriage feast and we do not read that he made anyone uncomfortable by his gloomy looks or sad words. If we have done anything we are ashamed of then let us hang down our heads, but if we want to do good let us swallow a spoonful of sunshine and let

The Young Man in Professional Life. At the North Presbyterian church last evening Rev. W. R. Henderson delivered the third of his series of lectures to young men, addressing particularly the young men in professional lite. His lecture is outlined as follows: Text-Titus 2: 15: "Let no man despise

The word despise, as here used, does not mean to hate, but to overlook, not to hold in high esteem. The apostle was writing to a young clergyman. His advice meant that his discharge of the duties of his office should be marked by such a degree and quality of excellence as would inspire respect and confidence. Such counsel is manifestly appropriate when a young man is entering upon his professional career. His profession cannot make him; he is to make his own way; he is, as it were, to be the embodiment and illustration of his profession. Such an achievement necessitates an enrnest and patient struggle. And hence patience is one of the first lessons he has to learn when he enters upon his professional life. He has thoroughly prepared himself for his life work's enters upon it with a hopeful, bouyant spirit, but business comes with distressing slowness. Hope deferred maketh the heart sick. It is a dreary period of wait-ing, she is almost tempted to contemplate ure as his appointed lot. But it should be encouraging to the young professional to remember that the path over which he is now passing has been travelled by thousands whose feet in due time reached the higher ground of excellence and suc-

But there will be now and then calls made upon the young man for his pro-fessional services, and his future will largely depend upon the manner in which he treats them. Hence he should cultivate oroughness. Be thorough in everything, owever, trivial it may at first appear Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." The small case entrusted by a client to his lawyer may myolve great principles. The young gressive. It is a mistake for one to feel that he is through with study after he has tinished the course prescribed in the law or medical school. If he is to be a growing man he should avail himself of the opportunities afforded him in the early stages of his professional life to study the great principles which underlie and permeate his profession, and attain to their mastery. He will thus gather strength and resources upon which he can fall back whenever the necessity arises. But back whenever the necessity arises. But he should not confine himself to the studies peculiar to his calling. He should aim at a broad and liberal cultivation of his mind. Such culture enlarges and en-riches the mind. A man is liable to be-come narrow and pithless who shuts himself up within the limits of professional

In all his study, however, the young man in professional life should not neg-lect that wisdom whose beginning is the fear of God. Greatness should be joined goodness; excellence in professional and intellectual culture and attainment should be firmly wedded to picty. This divine wisdom which becomes ours through faith in Christ as our savior and obedience to His commandments, will enable a young man to repress the low and debasing qualities of his nature and to develop all that is noble and beauti-ful in human character and life.

Night Scenes in Omaha. At the Dodge street Presbyterian church last night Rev. W. J. Harsha delivered a sermon on the subject of "Night Scenes in Omaha," His remarks are outlined as follows:

Text-1. Thes , 5-7: "They that sleep sleep in the night and they that be drunken are drunken in the night."
Paul uses such plain language. He believed in calling sin by its right name. He does not say: "inebriated" or "half He does not say: "inebriated" or "half seas over," but "drunk." He is almost as plain as was John the Baptist or even Christ himself. I have no doubt the people of that day thought him sensational. They probably said he was too plain and would never succeed. But he continued his pinin writing and in the text we have a fine example of it. He seems to give the night time a bad reputation and so I ask you to a consideration of the whole subject that we may know the truth in the matter. And in developing the thought I would eall your attention to the inhucharacter.

First Night scenes in Biblical history. The Bible opens with a beautiful description of God walking in the Garden of Eden in the evening. Then we have the night when the first born were slain in Egypt, a night which opened the domain of truth for the investigation of the church. And there was the night of Belshazzar's feast in Babylon which changed the whole history of the ancient empires and opened the war for the present supremacy of the Anglo-Saxon race. Then there was the night upon which Christ was born, which brought salvation among men. How important these night scenes were to the

The Synod of Nebraska.

The synod of Nebraska will meet in the North Presbyterian church next Thursday evening, October 14, at 7:30 o'clock. It will be opened with a sermon by the retiring moderator, Rev. William E. Kimball, of Madison, Neb. On Friday even-ing a popular meeting in the interest of home missions will be held and will be addressed by members of the synod. On Saturday evening another popular meet-ing will be held, which will be addressed y the Rev. Dr. Arthur Mitchell, of New York, on the subject of foreign missions. Quite a number of the members of the ynod will remain in the city over the Sabbath. Pastors who may desire sup plies are requested to notify Rev. William and Starvation. The BEE of Wedresday last chronicled the death of Charles Bloom, who was found in a sick and starving condition in a barn in the rear of Anderson's boarding house, on Douglas street, between Eighth and Ninth streets. Bloom was a young man, a Dane, whose relatives live somewhere in Michigan. He was in an almost unconscious condition when found by Captain Cormick, of the police force, and only lived a few hours after he had been removed to the poor farm by that officer's order. At the time nothing could be learned of the unfortunate man's circumstances. Since his death, how-ever, facts have been brought to light which indicate that the poor fellow was a victim of "Man's inhumanity to man" It is asserted that he was a boarder at Anderson's boarding house and was thrown out of the house by the proprietor of that place because he could not pay his board bill. He was employed by a grading contractor when he was taken sick. An officer who has been giving some attention to the case claims that he can show Bloom was boarding at Anderson's and staid there until his money ran out, and that he was turned out by the proprietor although he was suffering from an attack of pneumonia and was hardly able to walk. He had neither money nor friends and sought shelter in the barn in the rear of the place, where he remained in a sick and starving condition until found by the authorities. The case will be investigated.

THE NATURAL GAS WELL, The Board of Trade Encourage the Project. A meeting was held at the board of trade rooms Saturday night to take action in aiding and endorsing the efforts that are being made by certain citizens to sink a well in the city for the purpose of ascertaining whether gas, oil, coal, salt or water can be found in quantities sufficient to be of any benefit to the city. Mr. C. F. Goodman presided at the meetmr. C. F. Goodman presided at the meeting. Mr. P. E. Her, who is heading the effort, stated that Mr. Martin, one of the most experienced men in the country, was in the city ready to begin the work. His estimate of the cost of sinking the well to a depth of 3,000 feet is $10,250. Twelve citizens have already ngreed to pay $1,00 each for the purpose of making the experiment. It is desired that subscriptions to the fund may reach that subscriptions to the fund may reach $20,000, so that the experiment can be made without the burden falling too heavily upon the shoulders of a few citizens. Mr. Martin said the surface indications pointed to the presence of oil or gas in this vicinity, noticeably at the stock yards and at sulphur springs. After some discussion of the question, a committee consisting of P. E. Her, E. K. Lovett and Edwin Davis, was appointed Lovett and Edwin Davis, was appointed to solicit subscriptions to the fund.

The New Line to Lincoln. And now comes the Missouri Pacific and duly represents to the people of Omaha, from and after yesterday a regular passenger train will be run between the capital and metropolis of Nebraska. For the present there will be only one train each way. It will leave Lincoln at 7:30 a. m., and arrive in Omaha at 11:17 a. m., and leave this city at 6:20 p. m., arriving in Lincoln at 9:30 p. m. The first runs were made yesterday, the train coming in on time from Lincoln. It consisted of a baggage car, an elegant smoking coach and a reclining chair ear, for which there is no extra charge. The honor of pulling the first train belongs to engine 243, G. W. Cooper, engineer: F. H. Micklewait, conductor; Albert Staker, brakeman, and J. Thompson, baggageman. Conductor Micklewait is the heaviest man in his line of business on any road run-ning into Omaha, and like most men who can tip the scales at 300 pounds is the very perfection of good nature, affability and politeness. He certainly can be distinguished in a crowd, and does not need any uniform to make known his importance. This line will be of great importance to Omaha and Lincoln, as it affords rapid transit between the two cities, and and at the same time opens up a new demand territory for both markets. The trains run via Weeping Water, and are entirely in-dependent of the regular Missouri Pacife trains. The ears are the finest on any road between here and Lincoln,

Michael Davitt. A committee representing all the Irish ocieties of the city met Saturday night at the office of J. E. A sub-committee was appointed to dis-tribute tickets to those who might undertake the selling of the same, and to leave a supply at conveniently located stores. Last evening Conductor Joseph Henry, of what is known as the "Hill" freight train, was very seriously injured while some cars were being brought from the lower to the upper yards. He was descending from the last box car and his feet had just reached the ground when the engine suddenly pulled the train forward. Henry was thrown violently against the car and badly cut and bruised on the face and head. One gash about three inches long over the left eye made a particularly ugly wound He was taken to Bell's drug store and his injur-ies temporarily dressed. Subsequently he went to Dr. Galbraith's office. It is not thought that any serious results will and so located as to probably necessitate a lay off for this popular railroad man

The Belt Line Completed. Yesterday realiy marked the completion of the Belt Line railroad, for the only 'missing" tink, the bridge across Mercer avenue or West Cuming street having been finished so that trains could run from one end of the line to the other without interruption. Two or three locomotives and ears made the round trip during the day by way of testing the bridge, and the shrill sound of the locomotives struck merrily in numerous ears that have been anxiously waiting for the steel clad courier of commerce to do some talking on the aforesaid neighborhood for some on the aforesaid heighborhood for some years. Jay Gould, his son George and wife will be here on Tuesday, and they are hereby notified that the Belt line is all O. K. for special or any other kind of cars. It is not settled as yet when regular trains will be run or as a schedule of time or stations made up as yet.

"The Newsboys' Friend." Colonel Alexander Hogeland, the veteran laborer among the street gamins of the nation, spent yesterday in the city. The colonel is enroute to Minneapolis to take charge of the first general convention of the Youths' National Aid Home and Employment association, to be held on October 22. The plan of this association has been the opening in cities, towns and villages of an intelligence office under the direction of a committee of leading citizens where youths may reg-ister for positions and secure, through circulars sent among farmers and manuhomes and employment for such as desire it.

Colonel Hogeland lectured at the Buckingham home last evening to a large audience. During the past two years Colonel Hogeland has carried his work into 203 cities and spoken in more school houses, churches and manufacturing establishments than any other man living. He is thoroughly devoted to his work, which is a noble one.

Ransom's Company. The Ransom Comedy company opened at the People's theatre last night in "The Vigilantes," one of the finest pieces of frontier life now on the stage. It was admirably presented, introducing this very good company to excellent advan-tage. The audience filled the house and many were turned away because of their inability to get seats. To-night "The Galley Slave" will be played.
