On the market with the packers were the sickies George Stewart & Co. were the leaders, and pork in every few yards were advised to from $9.50 to $10.175. It was said that the buying was for Hutchinson, and the crowd wanted to know whether it was the same as last year. The bears on the product claim that the hogs which have been kept back in the country will be so much heavier than if they had been marketed at the natural time that the short sale will be more than a few cents. It will after all depend more on the view the hog packers choose to take than on any estimates that could possibly be made. It is by no means certain that things will run smoothly at the stock yards next year. It is almost certain that big houses there will dare to run wide open for some weeks to come.
