

ADVENTURES OF MAJOR NORTH

White Chief of The Pawnee Scouts—His Frontier Experiences.

GENERAL CARR'S CAMPAIGN.

Buffalo Bill Shows the Pawnees How to Kill Buffaloes—The Battle of Summit Springs.

Copyrighted.

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PUBLISHERS OF THE OMAHA DAILY BEE, THE AUTHOR OF THE ABOVE SERIES OF CHAPTERS VIII.—GENERAL CARR'S CAMPAIGN.

VIII.

A Campaign in the Republican Valley. On the 1st of March, 1879, Major North was again called into active service with his now somewhat celebrated scouts.

Among the first men to grasp Major North by the hand and give him a cordial welcome was William Frederick Cody, better known as BUFFALO BILL.

He at once ordered the cavalrymen to tighten their saddles and prepare for action. The order was obeyed with alacrity, for the men were all eager for a fight, and soon the command was galloping toward the mountain village.

It was a warm, pleasant day, and a great many of the Indians were lounging around in the shade of their tents. They were completely surprised, and before they could realize the situation the cavalrymen had ridden into the village, and the Indians became silent.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

poles and lances, the soldiers at first thought they were a body of Sioux coming down upon them, and considerable excitement followed.

General Carr started the command next morning on this NEWLY DISCOVERED TRAIL, and followed it westward up the Republican for two days.

When the light commenced Tall Bull, seeing that there was no hope of taking his captives with him—whom he had been keeping as a prisoner—went to Mrs. Weichel in the forenoon, and then shot Mrs. Weichel.

He could not speak a word of English, and he could not understand what she said. He understood only that she was speaking to her in English to make her sit still for a little while.

He at once ordered the cavalrymen to tighten their saddles and prepare for action. The order was obeyed with alacrity, for the men were all eager for a fight, and soon the command was galloping toward the mountain village.

It was a warm, pleasant day, and a great many of the Indians were lounging around in the shade of their tents. They were completely surprised, and before they could realize the situation the cavalrymen had ridden into the village, and the Indians became silent.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

over him from head to foot as an act of blessing and an appeal for mercy. She then knelt down before him and in her sign language asked him to save her.

When the light commenced Tall Bull, seeing that there was no hope of taking his captives with him—whom he had been keeping as a prisoner—went to Mrs. Weichel in the forenoon, and then shot Mrs. Weichel.

He could not speak a word of English, and he could not understand what she said. He understood only that she was speaking to her in English to make her sit still for a little while.

He at once ordered the cavalrymen to tighten their saddles and prepare for action. The order was obeyed with alacrity, for the men were all eager for a fight, and soon the command was galloping toward the mountain village.

It was a warm, pleasant day, and a great many of the Indians were lounging around in the shade of their tents. They were completely surprised, and before they could realize the situation the cavalrymen had ridden into the village, and the Indians became silent.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Spring, (in July, 1860) to give the men and horses a rest, at the end of which time they were ordered out to scout for the first time.

When the light commenced Tall Bull, seeing that there was no hope of taking his captives with him—whom he had been keeping as a prisoner—went to Mrs. Weichel in the forenoon, and then shot Mrs. Weichel.

He could not speak a word of English, and he could not understand what she said. He understood only that she was speaking to her in English to make her sit still for a little while.

He at once ordered the cavalrymen to tighten their saddles and prepare for action. The order was obeyed with alacrity, for the men were all eager for a fight, and soon the command was galloping toward the mountain village.

It was a warm, pleasant day, and a great many of the Indians were lounging around in the shade of their tents. They were completely surprised, and before they could realize the situation the cavalrymen had ridden into the village, and the Indians became silent.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

COLONEL CLOWRY'S SUCCESS.

The Rise of a Prince in the Telegraphic World.

HIS APPLICATION TO DUTY.

The Career of the General Superintendent of the Western Union.

Chicago Herald: There is a potentate in Chicago who reigns as potentate over a principality larger than all Europe. Subject to his command are 25,000 officers and employes.

On the 4th day of April, 1853, Robert C. Clowry walked into the office of Judge Caton's 11 Illinois and Mississippi Telegraph Company at Joliet, and proposed to give his services six months without other compensation than instruction, was accepted, and the poor widow's son from a Will county farm—a lad of seventeen years—began his professional career as a messenger boy and student.

He was a better operator than his chief, D. C. Jensen, and in the autumn of the same year was made manager of the office at Lockport. The year following he was transferred to the office at Springfield, and in 1845 was sent to St. Louis as the company's chief operator.

He was a better operator than his chief, D. C. Jensen, and in the autumn of the same year was made manager of the office at Lockport. The year following he was transferred to the office at Springfield, and in 1845 was sent to St. Louis as the company's chief operator.

He was a better operator than his chief, D. C. Jensen, and in the autumn of the same year was made manager of the office at Lockport. The year following he was transferred to the office at Springfield, and in 1845 was sent to St. Louis as the company's chief operator.

He was a better operator than his chief, D. C. Jensen, and in the autumn of the same year was made manager of the office at Lockport. The year following he was transferred to the office at Springfield, and in 1845 was sent to St. Louis as the company's chief operator.

He was a better operator than his chief, D. C. Jensen, and in the autumn of the same year was made manager of the office at Lockport. The year following he was transferred to the office at Springfield, and in 1845 was sent to St. Louis as the company's chief operator.

He was a better operator than his chief, D. C. Jensen, and in the autumn of the same year was made manager of the office at Lockport. The year following he was transferred to the office at Springfield, and in 1845 was sent to St. Louis as the company's chief operator.

He was a better operator than his chief, D. C. Jensen, and in the autumn of the same year was made manager of the office at Lockport. The year following he was transferred to the office at Springfield, and in 1845 was sent to St. Louis as the company's chief operator.

MADE IN EVERY STYLE AND VARIETY KNOWN TO MODERN COOKING AND HEATING STOVE AND RANGE CONSTRUCTION. The above Trade Mark is a Guarantee that Every Article bearing it is the Finest and Best that can be made for the price asked.

MILTON ROGERS & SONS, AGENTS, HOW TO ACQUIRE WEALTH. Next Drawing, This Month, on November 20th. Big Prizes. No Blanks.

Valentine's Short Hand & Type Writing Institute IN EXPOSITION BUILDING, OMAHA, NEBRASKA.

The OMAHA STOVE REPAIR WORKS DEALERS EXCLUSIVELY IN STOVE REPAIRS. Our stock includes repairs for all stoves ever sold in Omaha and the west.

Artemus Ward. The Last Speech Made by the Noted Humorist. A correspondent of the New York Graphic writes: I shall never forget the part of the five to keep from smiling during his speech, and while Artemus was gone the moon righted itself with a tremendous effort, and glared in such a unique fashion that first one and finally all my five stocks and stones, as I mentally denominated them, relapsed into snail-like laughter, and their white chokers began to wrinkle.

Artemus Ward. The Last Speech Made by the Noted Humorist. A correspondent of the New York Graphic writes: I shall never forget the part of the five to keep from smiling during his speech, and while Artemus was gone the moon righted itself with a tremendous effort, and glared in such a unique fashion that first one and finally all my five stocks and stones, as I mentally denominated them, relapsed into snail-like laughter, and their white chokers began to wrinkle.

Artemus Ward. The Last Speech Made by the Noted Humorist. A correspondent of the New York Graphic writes: I shall never forget the part of the five to keep from smiling during his speech, and while Artemus was gone the moon righted itself with a tremendous effort, and glared in such a unique fashion that first one and finally all my five stocks and stones, as I mentally denominated them, relapsed into snail-like laughter, and their white chokers began to wrinkle.

RAID ON THE MILLIONS.

Relatives of A. T. Stewart Who Want Some of His Money.

The first legal fight for a share in the Alexander T. Stewart estate is not by one of the heirs of the late Mrs. Stewart, says a New York correspondent, but by two cousins of Stewart himself, one of whom figured fitfully several years ago as a possible contestant of the great merchant's will. Then he went out of public sight, and his case was regarded as a sham.

When the fight commenced Tall Bull, seeing that there was no hope of taking his captives with him—whom he had been keeping as a prisoner—went to Mrs. Weichel in the forenoon, and then shot Mrs. Weichel.

He could not speak a word of English, and he could not understand what she said. He understood only that she was speaking to her in English to make her sit still for a little while.

He at once ordered the cavalrymen to tighten their saddles and prepare for action. The order was obeyed with alacrity, for the men were all eager for a fight, and soon the command was galloping toward the mountain village.

It was a warm, pleasant day, and a great many of the Indians were lounging around in the shade of their tents. They were completely surprised, and before they could realize the situation the cavalrymen had ridden into the village, and the Indians became silent.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.

Major North and his brother, Captain Luther North, with a party of Pawnees and several soldiers surrounded one of the ravines in which eighteen Sioux warriors were gathered. The men had fled to the ravine, and were gathered together in a group, and were talking.