

THE DAILY BEE. COUNCIL BLUFFS. SATURDAY MORNING DEC. 4. OFFICE, NO. 12, PEARL STREET.

Delivered by carrier in any part of the city at twenty cents per week. H. W. TILTON, Manager.

MINOR MENTION. N. Y. Plumbing Co. New fall goods at Reiter's.

The Good Templars are planning a convention here on the 16th. Freddie Fremberg refuses to return to Omaha without a requisition.

Permit to wed was yesterday granted to J. P. Peterson and Miss A. K. Hansen, both of this city.

The winterers are making great preparations for their masquerade Christmas night. There will be a variety of costumes, and some very unique ones.

Those who have claims against the city must file their bills to-day in order to have them considered at the regular meeting of the city council on Monday night.

Some of the sidewalkers, especially the stone ones, are icy slippery. A little striking of ashes or sawdust will prevent accidents, and the marshal was yesterday recommending their use to property owners who had particularly dangerous walks.

James Blake and James Rutherford, two young men who have been peddling cutlery at remarkably low prices, have been released from custody on the payment of the necessary license, the officers not being able to find any proof that the goods were crooked, or the men either.

Captain Overton goes to Washington next week, where he has still a claim pending against the government for a steambot lost in the service in 1866, and for which $20,000 is asked. The claim has been undergoing investigation for years, and does not seem to be near the end yet.

Several on Broadway yesterday showed that the fact of the wicked do not always stand in slippery places. There was no doubt at all about their not standing, and the language used as they picked themselves up indicated that, if righteous, they were tried beyond their powers of grace to endure.

The special car in which Miss Adelaide Moore travels was yesterday on the sidewalk by the Broadway depot, and was visited by many ladies and gentlemen who found much to admire. It is indeed a palace on wheels, and is as rich and comfortable a home as a transitory one could well be.

The young man Levy, taken in charge by the officers Thursday night, on suspicion was yesterday released. He was thought to have come wrongfully by a gold watch which he was trying to trade for an overcoat, but some of his Omaha friends came over here and vouched for his being strictly honest. He was put to annoyance of spending several hours in the city jail, but he will learn probably to avoid the appearance of evil in a city like Council Bluffs, where the officers are on the alert.

Officer Boswick caused some commotion in the ranks of the salvation army, and innocently. The city has for some time had an electric light at the corner of Dohany's old hall, where the salvationists hold forth. There has also been an electric light put into the hall. In putting in this last light the city light was cut out. Boswick seeing that the city light was not burning, concluded it was his duty to turn the switch and set it into a blaze. He accordingly did so, and as the light did not flash up, he turned it the other way. Nothing happened. Then he turned it the other way again. While experimenting with it, and getting no satisfactory results, some of the army came rushing out of the hall and complained to him that someone was fooling with the electric light, and wanting the miscreant arrested. The crowd in the hall had been left in darkness two or three times. He started off to hunt up the fellow who had been turning off the light, and the salvationists had no further trouble.

Stoves! Stoves! Stoves! For the next thirty days I will sell heating stoves at cost for cash only. P. C. DeYOL.

Five Hundred Overcoats for Boys and Children, from $1.50 up. METCALF BROS.

Personal Paragraphs. C. J. Colby, of Kansas City, is at the Ogden.

Will F. Sapp has returned from his Chicago trip.

H. C. Cheyne is reported as recovering slowly from his prolonged and dangerous illness.

L. A. Weber has been appointed route agent on the West Liberty & Council Bluffs line, vice S. W. Logan.

Judge Henry Ford, of Logan, was in the city yesterday, and is thinking of removing to this city with his family.

Division Superintendent Campbell and J. J. Hartigan, assistant superintendent of the Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul, arrived last evening.

W. E. Spier, of Washington, one of the inspectors of public buildings who has been looking over the new government building here, goes to Nebraska City this morning.

The celebrated Harp Stop "Hardman" Pianos and the Royal Whitney Organs at Mueller Music Co., 103 Main Street.

Wall paper, shades, paints, etc. H. P. Niles, No. 402 Broadway.

Call for everything you need, bottom prices. Everybody's store, 825 Main.

Weather strips at Chapman's, 105 Main.

Dr. Hanchett, office No. 12 Pearl Street, Residence 120 Fourth Street. Telephone No. 10.

Assaulted by Robbers. About 11 o'clock last night a man named Olsson, who lives on Washington between Seventh and Eighth streets, was assaulted by two men who attempted to rob him, but were frightened away by his resistance and cries for help. Dr. Lacy was summoned to attend the man who is very severely injured. His assailants escaped.

Mrs. Dr. D. Truesdell, a graduate of the Toronto, Canada, Therapeutics institute, is prepared to treat all classes of diseases "and demonstrate the curative power of electricity in accordance with a new and complete system of Electro-Therapeutics. Electro-Magnesium and Static Electricity. Female diseases a specialty. Located at No. 307 Broadway, second floor. Office hours 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

A Little Gem of art in every package of GOLD MEDAL COFFEE. Ask your grocer about L. Groneweg & Schoentgen, wholesale agents.

Notice—Opera House barber shop, bath rooms reopened.

Everybody's store, good place to buy goods. No. 825 Main Street. Heating stoves at cost to close them out. W. A. Wood, No. 504 Main Street.

WINTER SUITS FOR COURT.

A Glimpse At the Docket Shows Many Unhappy Folks.

ADELAIDE MOORE'S SUCCESS.

The Details of the Northwestern Railway Case and Major Anderson's Error—The New Government Building.

Preparing For Court.

The bar docket of the district court which opens here next Tuesday is just completed. There are 174 cases upon it, of which 430 are civil cases and fifty-four criminal ones. Among the civil cases the city has its due share, there being nineteen suits against the city. The number of mistrial cases shows up rather discouragingly to those contemplating matrimony, there being twenty-eight divorce suits to be considered.

The number of attorneys now on the roll for this county is sixty-four.

The following are those on the jury list for the coming term: PETIT JURY. W. P. Wightman, J. B. Lewis, M. McMenomy, James Mithen, Kane, G. P. Kemp, Garner, John E. Hill, Kane, Warner, Loh, Carson, J. E. Farley, Kane, James Flynn, York, John F. Garner, Garner, Thomas Mayhew, Lincoln, James Flavin, Kane, Hans Reimers, Menden, J. R. Hough, Hazel Dell, James Looley, Menden, Joseph M. Cold, Cressat, John Curry, Sr., Norwalk, John B. Gross, Pleasant, John Dye, Macedonia, G. W. Holmes, L. Swarngen, Kane, W. E. Brady, Silas Creek, John Inman, B. T. Conner, Kane.

GRAND JURY. A. L. Brown, Wm. Buckley, P. Foley, George Graves, J. E. Hitzel, Robert Huntington, Wm. A. Kahn, J. A. Murphy, Robert Miller, D. K. Parker, A. B. Perkins, Samuel Price, Ira Scofield, James Vesey, Peter Weise.

Electric door bells, burglar alarms and every form of domestic electrical appliances at the New York Plumbing Co.

Weather strips at Chapman's, 105 Main. Hard and soft coal, best quality, all sizes. Missouri and Iowa wood. C. B. Fuel company, 529 Broadway. Telephone 136.

Miss Adelaide Moore. Amusement circles here were on the tip-toe of expectation to see and hear Miss Adelaide Moore, the charming young English actress. Her praises have been sounded far and near, and it was no easy task to meet the high expectations of the audience which gathered in Dohany's opera house last evening. That the expectations were more than realized was evidenced by the appreciative applause and enthusiastic praise given by a Council Bluffs audience, which has the reputation, and justly, of being cold and timid in expressing its admiration of artistic merit.

"Lady of Lyons," with such a charming actress as Miss Adelaide Moore, is indeed a treat for any audience. She captivated all by her beauty of face and form, her grace of movement, but beauty was adorned evidently by those intellectual graces which make really the artist. Her career has been brilliant, for in a brief time she has made for herself a name and a name far in advance of most who have toiled for many years. Using some who have suddenly gained favor, she is not a mere imitator of wonderful cleverness in portraying a conception formed by some more thoughtful artist. She so thoroughly puts herself into the character as grasped in its completeness by her own intellectual effort, that Miss Moore is wholly lost in "The Lady of Lyons."

Miss Adelaide Moore is therefore wonderfully gifted. A richer endowment of personal beauty, of physical grace, is seldom seen, but she is not a mere beauty. She is an intellectual wonder as well as her mental strength, without which there can be no true acting, coupled with her charming ways, accounts somewhat for the rapid strides made in her profession, by which she has been already conceded a place with those whose names are not to be forgotten.

The company supporting her is excellent, and she is the crown jewel of the attraction, there is by no means any deduction from the enjoyment of the evening by an inferiority in the support.

To-night "The Lady of Lyons" will be given. This afternoon "Pygmalion and Galatea." Thus the people of Council Bluffs and vicinity are given a most excellent opportunity of seeing this charming actress in different roles.

Stamping and full variety of embroidery materials. Mrs. H. P. Niles, 402 Broadway.

Substantial abstracts of titles and real estate loans. J. W. & E. L. Squire, No. 101 Pearl Street, Council Bluffs.

Don't buy your new suit or overcoat until you look at those at Metcalf Bros.

Major Anderson Declared in Error. During the recent congressional campaign, and in fact ever since Major Anderson dropped out of the board of railway commissioners, he and his friends have made great capital about his record as a commissioner. One of the cases was that of the state vs. the Chicago & Northwestern railroad company. It is an important case, as it involves critical questions. It has at last been decided by the supreme court, the opinion being given by Justice Reed of this city. The summary of the case and opinion is as follows:

This is the famous case of the railroad commission, involving the question of the right of the commission to regulate interstate commerce. In February, 1884, one Barber delivered to the Northwestern railroad at Morrison, Ill., a buggy, for shipment to Glidden, Ia., which was gone, and complaint was made to the railroad commission about the charges of the company. The commission investigated the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater than the company's local freight rates in either Iowa or Illinois, which they held to be unjust. The principal question for the commission to decide was its right to control or regulate interstate commerce, of which this was a fair sample. It will be remembered that this was near the close of Major Anderson's term as commissioner, and he was wrong on the opinion of the commission, asserting that the commission had jurisdiction in the case. The opinion closed with the peremptory order to the Northwestern road to rearrange their interstate tariff rates to correspond with the Iowa rates. The minority of the commission held the facts and found that the rate per mile charged for this shipment was greater