

WHERE ARE THE BONDS?

Lincoln People Inquiring When They Were Sold and How.

AN EXPLANATION CALLED FOR.

The Zedikers Again After State Paper-Happenings at the State House—Prospects For a Pork Packery.

FROM THE BEE'S LINCOLN CORRESPONDENT.

There is an air of mystery resting over and above the recent sewer bonds voted in this city, and a good many of an inquiring mind are struggling in the dark in regard to certain matters concerning them which presumably the city officials might enlighten them upon.

These bonds, voted in the early summer, were in amount $50,000. As nearly as can be ascertained Attorney H. E. Lewis disposed of $30,000 worth of these bonds for the city, and Councilman Brock and Mayor Burr disposed of the remaining $20,000. An inquiry at the office of the city clerk as to when these bonds were sold elicited the information that they were signed and placed in the custody of Mr. Brock and sold at nearly the same time. A general impression prevailed that the bonds were sold at par, but the BEE is informed that they were sold at 5 per cent discount, or that they, in other words, did not realize to the city the full $50,000 called for on their face.

The Zedikers on the way. A session of the state legislature without the Zediker family in the fore seeking would be a rarity in this section that would make the cracks in the capital building widen in astonishment. That will be the case on the annual raid the present year was freely stated at the state house yesterday, and the information was given that two of the family were already in the field for clerks.

At the state house. To-morrow Commissioner Buschow and Judge Mason with the clerk of the board, H. M. Marring, take their departure for Des Moines, Ia., to attend the convention of railway commissioners of the northwest states and it is also expected that a good many of the railroad officials and prominent shippers will be in attendance.

It was stated at the state house yesterday that Dr. Matthewson, the late proposed superintendent of the insane hospital, had gone east to Utica, N. Y., bearing letters testimonial from Dr. George L. Miller, and an applicant for the position of state superintendent of state asylums in that state, in which a vacancy exists at the present, caused by the death of John P. Gray, formerly in that position.

A PROSPECTIVE ROOM. Mr. T. J. Farrell, of New Orleans, is in the city at the Windsor, where he will remain for some time, looking up business matters that may be of great deal of importance to Lincoln, or more especially the suburbs of West Lincoln. Mr. Farrell's visit is in the interests of his brother-in-law, Mr. Walsh, of New Orleans, a prominent commission merchant and capitalist of that city, who owns a good deal of valuable real estate in the vicinity of Lincoln. Mr. Walsh has in contemplation an enormous deal of packing business, and if the negotiations and conferences with the Stock Yards company are mutually agreeable to both parties concerned the people of Lincoln may expect the building early in the coming season of a third packing house, and its consequent emoluments at West Lincoln.

GOING TO KANSAS. Mrs. Lawler was taken to Kansas Sunday night and taken to Kansas on the train in the custody of the sheriff of Harper county, who, immediately on hearing of the woman's release in the United States court at Omaha, secured retention papers from the state of Kansas and came after her. The sheriff expressed a good deal of surprise that the United States court had released the woman in the face of the testimony and expressed it as beyond any doubt as to her transactions in making away with her husband. The man who was paid by her $500 to murder her husband across the line in the Indian Nation is in custody and has confessed all of the facts in the conspiracy, which are very damaging to the woman. This man will be tried for murder in the United States court at Wichita and Mrs. Lawler will be tried for conspiracy under the laws of Kansas.

TOPICS IN BRIEF. Ellen Butler, the colored girl that went to the bed, was given a hearing in County Judge Parker's court yesterday morning and sentenced to the reform school at Kearney. Captain Post, of the city police force, departed on the noon train for that reformatory institution with his charge. President Threw, of the Western league of base ballists, says that the Lincoln club will raise the funds all right to maintain its place in the league and prosecute the campaign the present season. Up to date there have been three and four thousand dollars in stock have been subscribed, and they have a long roll of players at their disposal to sign for the season whenever they are ready to proceed with that branch of the work. Ira Higby, one of the best known hotel men in the west and who has been for several years with some of the leading hotels in Omaha and Lincoln, takes his departure today for Kansas City, where he assumes the general management of the Clifton hotel in that city, one of the prominent hostleries of the place.

Grand Chancellor John Morrison, accompanied by D. G. Courtney, R. O'Neill, J. E. Douglas and other members of the K. of P. in Lincoln, were in Weeping Water last evening on an official visit.

Yimmer vs Yimmer was the title of a suit in divorce filed in district court yesterday by E. E. Brown against August Yimmer and others, the case being foreclosure of a certain school land contract.

A Delicate Present. For lady or gentleman, a box of Cashmere Boquet Soap is always in good form.

Criticism of Rev. Mr. Dowling's Lecture. To the Editor of the BEE: A few evenings since I listened with great pleasure to a lecture delivered in Boyd's opera house by the Rev. M. P. Dowling, president of Croighton college, on the subject of "Social Inequalities and Their Remedies."

The address was an eloquent and scholarly effort and proved the reverend gentleman to be an erudite and able man. His statement regarding the condition of the manual laborer, his strictures respecting the pursuit of wealth, and his warning suggestions to the rich touching their conduct and the proper use of their ample means meets with my hearty and unqualified approval.

But when the reverend gentleman comes to the discussion of remedies for existing social maladjustments and inequalities I cannot entirely agree with him. He thinks that Mr. Henry George's position regarding the nationalization of lands is an untenable one. But I think that the lecturer's criticism of Henry George's theories was hardly fair. He said, substantially, if I understand him correctly, that Mr. George's doctrine touching land was, when logically considered, an attack upon the rights of all private property, because everything being produced from land no process nor manipulation can make anything other than a part of the land, and therefore it follows that every agricultural and manufactured product is common property. It seems, however, remarkable that so intelligent a gentleman should call in the aid of sophistry to assist him in carrying a point or refuting an argument which can scarcely be ignorant of the fact that there is a vast difference between lands and things produced by labor upon land. The common law of this and every other civilized country recognizes the difference. As we hear Mr. George upon this point, "Such things in their beginning must have an owner, as they originate in human exertion, and the right of property which attaches to them springs from the manifest natural right of every individual to himself and to the benefit of his own exertions. This is the moral basis of property, which makes certain things rightfully property, totally irrespective of human law. The eighth commandment does not derive its validity from human enactment. It is written on the facts of nature and self-evident to the perception of men. If there were but two men in the world, the fish which he caught in the sea, the fruit which he gathered, or the hut which he erected, would be his rightful property which the other could not take from him without violation of the moral law. But how could either of them claim the world as his rightful property? Or if they agreed to divide the world between them, what moral right could their compact give against the next man who came into the world?" (Nineteenth Century for July, 1884.) "But," says the Rev. Dowling, the "assumption, by Mr. George, that man belongs to himself is not true, for man belongs to God. Very well, then, is it not sufficient to God, in the same sense and with equal propriety, God belongs to man. Mr. George contends that every human being born into the world has a right to the land and that it is impossible for such a being to live without access to land. Now, unless the converse of these two propositions can be established in some difficult to avoid the acceptance of Mr. George's conclusion, viz: that the private ownership of land is detrimental to the interest and welfare of society, inasmuch as, virtually, makes those who are not so fortunate as to be landless, the slaves of the land-owning class.

What are the remedies proposed for existing social wrongs by this ingenious lecturer? Substantially they are religion and the church. In chaste and eloquent terms he apostrophizes the church and invites to her efforts and influence all that has been done to ameliorate and elevate the condition of the laboring class.

In this view I decidedly disagree with the lecturer. If we are to credit the statements of impartial history, the church, instead of countenancing and promoting reforms calculated to benefit and elevate mankind, has discouraged agitation and opposed change in all ages and among all peoples. She has persecuted and slain her thousands for opinion's sake. Her garments are dripping with the blood of the martyrs. The rack and the manerew and every horrible device and infernal invention for the infliction of pain and suffering have been employed by her in the suppression of free thought. Those awful agonies, the fagot and the stake, have been used by her to frighten and intimidate mankind, upon these matters. The details are too horrible, the recital too painful. He who has a taste for the diabolical, the fiendish, and the horrible in connection with his work and human suffering can gratify the same to the fullest extent by perusing the history of the Church and her persecutions. I do not wish to be understood as opposing the gospel of Jesus, the sweet teacher teaching of the meek and lowly Nazarene as enunciated in the sermon on the Mount, if practiced in the daily lives of men would transform the earth into a earthly paradise. The pure, unadulterated, unalloyed gospel of Christ touches a responsive chord in the breasts of every intelligent human creature. But it must be borne in mind that it is however true that the church, the teaching of Christ are very different. The church has fostered selfishness, practiced cruelty, exercised tyranny, upheld slavery, persecuted science, suppressed free thought and promoted contentment.

Religion has made craven cowards of men when they ought to have been firm and courageous in their stand for truth and right.

But true Christianity has taught the universal brotherhood of man, inculcated charity, cherished virtue, nourished love and elevated humanity.

The pure gospel of Christ has made men brave, kind, tender, good, true, virtuous, loving and charitable. Religion would counsel the laborer to be peaceful and submissive until society has bound him hand and foot; until greed and monopoly have defrauded and stripped him of his God-given rights and until poverty like for Kansas City, where he assumed the general management of the Clifton hotel in that city, one of the prominent hostleries of the place.

The reverend lecturer closes his address by saying: "I will again quote Mr. George's language in speaking of the eviction of Scottish Highlanders from lands occupied by them and their ancestors from time immemorial and now tenanted only by sheep or cattle, by grouse or deer. He says: 'The reason of the tame submission of the Highland people to outrages which should have provoked the most timid, is to be found in the proscription of their religion. The Highland people are a deeply religious people, and during these evictions their preachers preached to them that their trials were the visitations of the Almighty and that they were sentenced to under the penalty of eternal damnation.' (Nineteenth Century for July, 1884.)

I will conclude this article by saying, 'Hold on there, boys!' he cried. 'Hold on there, boys!' he cried. 'Hold on there, boys!' he cried. 'Hold on there, boys!' he cried.

SALEM SAUNDERS. The stage-driver could just see the beginning of the long King's cooler road before him through the darkness. There was the Mississippi river, five hundred feet below on one side and the broken outline of the steep Alimosa bluff on the other. Between them both would the narrow road—ten miles long—up which the horses would have to creep before the broad and level prairie road would be reached. The night was bitter cold. It got bitter cold of nights in bleak Minnesota in November, 1888, just the way it does now, and the sharp wind whistled shrilly as it swept past the lumbering old stage with its load of tired passengers.

The swaying lantern with which the interior was lighted gave out a blue blaze which shone down on five persons, or rather five shapes, which were curled up in different parts of the stage in as comfortable positions as the vehicle afforded.

The Law Relating to Assessors. SYRACUSE, Neb., Dec. 11.—To the Editor of the BEE: Permit me through the columns of your widely read paper to urge the full enforcement of the law relating to assessors. It is worse than useless, it is a gross wrong to wait until the assessors have made their reports to the board and abuse them because they have perjured themselves by assessing differently to what they swear they will. There is no authority for this one-third assessment scheme, and in order to correct false impressions entertained abroad concerning our burdensome taxation, please lend your powerful support to the correction of this wrong. The success of our struggling state and country depends on its outrageously high as compared with the valuation, and justly so. The amazing amount of money this silliness costs us is astounding. It is not as if it were a positive injury for one or two counties to appraise at cash value, and the remaining at one-third. This is self-evident. For your readers to have to pay proportionally $3 to their $1, or to have their taxes straightened out this stupidity, and not when the assessors have done their work. As the valuation of realty varies with the price of the present assessors can be honest and pains taking, as we see them mostly to be, for ten thousand reasons as will readily occur to you and me. The performance of the same kind of a cross county lines exactly similar but widely different rates of taxation, and valuation. There are some ulterior causes for this, but if an investigation be made some curious surprises will be unearthed. Why cannot state appraisers be appointed whose duty it shall be to appraise all lands in the state in the present assessors can fine themselves to the personality. We prate about grievances that are purely chimerical and pass by a vampire that is draining the state annually of its hundreds of thousands. I have sought the use of the BEE because of its vast circulation, hoping thereby to evoke the interest of some one competent to force this matter upon public attention.

Yours respectfully, THOS. F. MORGAN.

quicker, and he was afraid Will would die if he left him there all alone until night. They stayed there until they both got up, and Saunders came nearer trying than Will. He was shivering, poor fellow, in the shoulder, and going without his clothes to save Will's life nearly ended his own. At last they left the fort and went up north into the pines to make more money, for all the powder had gone off in their saddle-bags with their horses.

"Have you heard from him since?" asked the doctor after the widow had finished.

"Oh, yes, often. When father died he sent me money to pay off the mortgage on the farm. He is a lumber merchant in Stillwater now, and he was going to sell out last spring that he was going to give up his business this winter and come home. But I couldn't wait, so I thought I'd come on and surprise him. But tell me, now, do you think a man would do that kind of thing to his boy called a robber?"

The stage gave a sudden start, then it stood still as a rock. The passengers sprang to their feet. Sounds of men's voices were heard from outside. Before a word could be spoken the door opened and the doctor jumped out of the stage to the ground.

"Hold on there, boys!" he cried. "Hold on there, boys!" he cried. "Hold on there, boys!" he cried. "Hold on there, boys!" he cried.

Pleasant to the taste and surprisingly quick in its action, it is not at all dangerous. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup always succeeds.

S'JACOBS OIL FOR RHEUMATISM. MARVELOUS EXPERIENCES.

Suffered 30 Years and Cured.

New Bloomfield, Perry Co., Pa. I wish to inform you of a most miraculous and marvelous cure of my rheumatism. For more than thirty years I have been afflicted with this disease, from which I was suffering so severely that at times it was impossible for me to get from my home to my office. I had tried every medicine known to me, and I had resorted to the use of morphia to secure relief. For the past two years I have known remedy without deriving any benefit. I had tried every medicine known to me, and I had resorted to the use of morphia to secure relief. For the past two years I have known remedy without deriving any benefit.

A Railroad Man Cured. Old Colony R. R. Engine House, Braintree, Mass. I have had rheumatism for the past five years. Have had it so bad at times that I have had to get down stairs on my hands and knees. Have suffered almost agony. Have tried all the medicines and remedies known to me, without any beneficial results. For the past two years I have been growing worse; had almost lost the use of my hands. Had almost made up my mind that nothing on earth would cure me. I was strongly advised to try S' Jacobs Oil. I procured a bottle, applied it, and my joints grew supple. After using two bottles I can walk as well as ever. I have regained the use of my hands and feet, am relieved of all pain, and consider myself cured.

Remarks of an Eminent Divine. Cleveland, Ohio. I am pleased to say that the use of St. Jacobs Oil has benefited me greatly and I have had occasion to recommend it to all as an excellent curative.

THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO., Baltimore, Md. ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS in cash will be paid for proof showing that the force of any other oil is superior to S' Jacobs Oil. The force of S' Jacobs Oil is not superior to any other oil. It is not superior to any other oil. It is not superior to any other oil.
