Lawyers Talking to the Jury in the Colin Campbell Case.

THE EVIDENCE ALL SUBMITTED.

Counsel For the Co-Respondents Argue For the Lady and One Speech Made in Defense of the Lord.

The Colin Campbell Divorce.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—(New York Herald Cable-Special to the Bee.)—The taking of evidence in the Campbell divorce case finished to-day, and the trial was far advanced toward completion by the speeches of counsel for the respondents.

DR. BIRD'S EXAMINATION.

You received a great number of letters from Lord Colin? Over a hundred letters. For the most part dealing with his symptoms? Yes. I had as many as four in one day.

During the time at Leigh court were there any relations between you and Lady Colin except those of a friend and medical man? None whatever.

Now, in regard to the story of the letter found in your instrument case—have you got that case of instruments with you? Yes.

Until Mrs. Duffy gave evidence, had you any recollection or knowledge of the letter in question? None at all.

After hearing her evidence, did you open the pockets of the case to see if you could find the letter? Yes.

You found it? Yes.

Read it aloud, please.

Dec. 4, 1886. There is a little drawing of holly and ivy, and underneath it the motto, "Friendship durability." Then follow the words, "My dearest Mary—Do not be so little animal! Many happy returns of the day. Gobble up all the lollipops if you please, but keep a box for your humble, but not too humble servant. (Signed, Gertrude Lily Blood.)"

Lady Colin was ten years of age when she wrote that letter? Yes.

The letter was written to Mrs. Bolton, her sister? It was from her that I got it. She was looking up a number of old letters. I asked her to give me this letter. As I was going down to Leigh court on the following day I would have some fun with Lady Colin out of it.

Did you ever carry about in any case a letter from Lady Colin signed G. E. B.? Certainly not.

The presence of this letter in Dr. Bird's case was considered a very suspicious incident. A long examination followed regarding Lady Colin's alleged misbehavior, but no new facts were brought out.

When you went to her room that afternoon what happened? I stayed with her some time. Then Lord Colin came.

At what time? He came in about 11 o'clock.

Who was said? I cannot tell. I had gone to sleep. He woke me up.

Do you remember the conversation that took place? I do not remember what was said.

Justice Butt—Did you go to sleep in Lady Colin's room? Yes.

Witness—Yes, but he appeared surprised when he saw that the light was not out. Lady Colin was very doxy. As I sat in the chair I went to sleep.

Did she strike you as an odd thing that you should fall asleep in a lady's bedroom? Not then; but looking back to what happened it may seem so.

Did Lord Colin look surprised? Well, the room was dark and I thought he seemed surprised, but I was there.

Did he put his surprise in words? I have no doubt that he did.

Lady Miles also helped to amuse the audience by Dr. Bird's testimony regarding the letter from her.

I think you are a great friend of Lady Miles? Yes.

She addressed you as "my dear cuckoo"? You subscribed yourself "your sincere cuckoo."

Your first met Miss Blood in 1878-1879? Yes.

You frequently met her at skating and other parties? Yes. I met her at a skating party at Hendon.

Did she address you as Cuckoo Bird? I never heard of it.

The Solicitor General—If other people speak disrespectfully of Dr. Bird, that is no reason why Lady Colin should.

member that Lady Colin asked her husband, when she received instructions to tell them to stop coming, whether he meant that she was to ent them and recognize them in society. Lord Colin replied no; that he did not mean that. All he meant was that he did not like them to call because of their evident admiration for Lady Colin.

As to the Marquis of Blandford's social intercourse with Lady Colin, it was evident that Lord Colin did not wish to terminate it, or why did he, after he had given the injunction to his wife, visit Lord Blandford's house and dine there? With regard to another point, he wished to put it to the jury, persistently maintained of adultery on such evidence as had been shown were evidence of adultery, then it would necessarily follow that no man or woman in that kingdom would be safe. There was a lady staying with her father and mother at Paris. She casually met Lord Blandford, whom she had known a considerable length of time in England. The only intimacy that occurred was that which might be expected from their previous acquaintance. Unless they were to lay down the dictum that a man who had been through the divorce court must be held to be guilty, there was nothing in the evidence against Lady Colin. As to the Paris visit, it was in evidence that Lady Colin was being watched, consequently that intimacy between her and Lord Blandford was such as she was not afraid of being known. He might say that the whole of the evidence which had been produced was evidence of conspiracy, evidence of perjury, evidence of forgery. They must give the Duke of Marlborough credit for that. Although he had heard the weakness of the case made out against Lady Colin, and the strength of the case she had made out, he came to the conclusion that while there was evidence of conspiracy, evidence of perjury, evidence of forgery, they must give the Duke of Marlborough credit for that. Although he had heard the weakness of the case made out against Lady Colin, and the strength of the case she had made out, he came to the conclusion that while there was evidence of conspiracy, evidence of perjury, evidence of forgery, they must give the Duke of Marlborough credit for that.
