girls for the same time was 135 per cent. From questions sent out to first, clergyman, second, attorneys; third, physicians, fourth, bankers and capitalists; fifth, farmers; sixth, mechanics and builders; seventh, editors, eighth, railroad employees; ninth, common laborers; tenth, teachers and supervisors of schools, the following are some of the replies given as to why there are no more boys in our high schools: "The love of society and amusement and the desire to earn money as an aid in attaining their enjoyments."

"Education is too clean and common to be highly prized." "A lack of appreciation of the higher advantages of higher culture to their children on the part of the parents." "Poverty of the parents and business opportunities for the boys."

"The passion of the American people to become rich." "Boys are kept out to go into business or to learn trades, because boys who begin to work at trades the youngest, make the most skilled artisans."

"Dislike of graduating exercises." "Boys get fast, love the excitement of business, and therefore hate the drudgery and toil of a trade." "Boys want to begin life at the point at which their parents have arrived without the severe struggle by which it was attained."

The chief reason, in the speaker's opinion, for the lack of boys in the high schools, is the poverty of the masses and the scanty resources of the middle classes. Early Closing. There is a movement being made to again close the dry goods stores early in the evening.

The holiday rush having passed, there is little business for the retailers after 6:30 or 7 o'clock now, and it will remain so for a couple of months. Since the early closing movement was inaugurated last summer there is very little evening trade, most people preferring to trade during the daylight, and if the merchants conclude to close early their gas, electric light and fuel bills will be considerably diminished during the next two or three months.

The enterprising houses, as usual, will no doubt agree to close by 7 o'clock at the latest, but of course, if some "old fogies" hold out it may be the cause of delaying every retail clerk in the city until 9 o'clock at night. The hardware and stove houses have already begun closing at 6 o'clock every evening except Saturdays.

The move is a good one for merchants and for employees. The public can buy all the goods they want during the daytime, and the evening trade does not amount to enough ordinarily to pay for lights. Alderman Keller said he did not know what would come up, neither did he heard that Alderman Hammer had changed his mind and would vote for the ordinance; he had not seen Hammer lately and knew nothing except what he had seen in the papers in regard to Hammer's recent conversation. When asked if he had changed his mind and would vote for the ordinance on its final reading, he replied with a sweet smile, "that's rather a leading question, isn't it?" to which the BREWERY man responded that the city father did not "have to" answer if he wished.

Shugart was cold and felt like getting thawed out when struck with "will the council take up the Tenth avenue ordinance will not be reached. A BREWERY in conversation with Alderman Keller and Shugart yesterday, was unable to learn if they would do anything with the ordinance to-night or not.
