A FINE DISPLAY OF FRUITS.

The Exhibit of the State Horticultural Society at Its Winter Session.

A SPLENDID ARRAY OF APPLES.

The Biennial Report of the State Fish Commission Ready For Distribution—County Treasurers Making Settlements.

[FROM THE BEE'S LINCOLN BUREAU.]

In the midst of the war of politics that has called 5,000 strangers within the city gates, there is displayed at the east university building the fruits of peace in the exhibit of the State Horticultural society at their winter meeting now in session. Considering the worth of this Nebraska fruit display and all it means in representing the progress and development of the fruit interests of the state, the attendance at this session of the society is meagre and unsatisfactory in numbers. There are some 300 to 400 plates of apples on exhibition, as handsome specimens and as great in variety as any state of double the years of Nebraska can make. These midwinter exhibits come not from a few but many counties in the state, northern Nebraska being well represented, while the old established fruit counties of Washington, Cass, Otoe, Pawnee, Douglas and others make excellent showings. Among the veteran horticulturists in the state who are present and active participants are Peter Younger, of Geneva; Hiram Craig, of Blair; W. J. Hesser, of Plattsmouth; Samuel Barnard, of Table Rock; E. L. Emery, of Omaha; R. N. Day, of Tekamah; E. N. Grennell, of Fort Calhoun; J. H. Masters, Nebraska City; E. T. Stephens, Crete; R. W. Furnas, Brownville; H. D. Kelley, Madison; S. H. Webster, Ord; T. L. Griffey, Dakota City. The society at this meeting propose to make arrangements for higher competition in future and a very thorough organization will have charge of the society business for the coming year.

THE FISH COMMISSION

of Nebraska have their biennial report now ready for distribution, and it is one of the most complete, comprehensive and thoroughly commendable reports that has ever been presented to the state. The report shows the extent and magnitude that fish culture has reached in Nebraska, even with the very limited expense thus far incurred. The report is illustrated with creditable plates illustrating the ponds and buildings at the state hatchery, and accurate illustrative plates of the principal fish bred and kept in stock at that place, Mr. May, of the commission, gives a detailed report of his magnificent exhibit that he made at the state fair, and Superintendent O'Brien, of the hatchery, reports in detail all the work accomplished in the year. Some of the statistics in the report are of much interest and illustrate in themselves the work done. There are in the ponds at the hatchery at present over 50,000 fish of five different varieties, mostly adults, and used in breeding. 100,000 eggs being taken from the brook trout alone in the month of December, and the hatcheries have received in the past year nearly 20,000,000 fish eggs. During the year 1886 108,000 young brook trout have been furnished to twenty different parties for planting, most of which went to northern Nebraska; 9,000 California trout were furnished parties, and 56,000 lake or salmon trout were furnished to nine different parties in eastern and northern Nebraska.

Over 5,000,090 young wall-eyed Pike were furnished to forty different parties in all sections of the state and planted in streams. But the German carp is evidently the fish of great popularity all over the state, and the demand has been far in excess of the supply. Two hundred and forty different parties have been supplied with a limited number of these food fish representing almost every county in the state, and some 9,000 carp have been distributed in this very general way. The property of the state at the hatcheries and fish farm is listed at $13,000. In the face of this very creditable showing the commission ask that the state legislature extend the lines for the fish commission in giving more adequate appropriations for the continuation of the work. They ask that the superintendent's salary be raised to $1,200 a year and for all improvements, expenses, apparatus, obtaining eggs etc., they ask for the coming two years for an appropriation of $12,500.

ABOUT THE CITY.

Judge Chapman, of the Second judicial district, has appointed Myron E. Wheeler, of Omaha, as his official stenographer and court reporter. The first term of court of the year in the Second judicial district will open next week at Plattsmouth.

If there is a newspaper man in the state who has not been a member of the great lobby the last few days he should show his hand. Almost every city official in the state has had a turn at the wheel and Judge Tiffany, of Boone, added to the list yesterday.

The reports of the auditor and commissioner of lands and buildings and the reports of the secretary of state are not yet received ready for distribution. It might been a good policy for the legislature to get out a search warrant and see if they would be liable to have the reports during the session.

George McDonald was up in police court yesterday charged with drunkenness and resisting an officer. The judge made short work of his case, fining him $20 and costs. McDonald not being able to liquidate sleeps in the jail.

There was a revival of business at the district court yesterday, that is a revival from the day before when no new cases were filed. Yesterday a total of one case was commenced, the extent of the case being a mechanics lien to recover $30.

In United States court the case in forcible entry and detainer of Cheeny vs Hughs that was commenced several days ago is still on trial, and the amount involved in it causes it to be closely contested at every point. It is expected to reach the jury to-day.

A young English swell, who claimed to be a cousin of the Earl of Shrewsbury, and who was always borrowing money on the strength of expected remittances, has been victimizing the upper crust of Pittsburg society. He left the city suddenly several days ago to accept an alleged invitation to visit the British minister at Washington and it is thought he will not come back.

Frequently accidents occur in the household which cause burns, cuts, sprains and bruises; in such cases Dr. J. H. McLean's Volcanic Oil Liniment has for many years been the constant favorite family remedy.

John Grisby, of Westport, Ky., was out on the ice on the Ohio river the other day, when a large mass broke away and began going down stream. John was on the mass, and he staid on it for five hours, during whied he drifted nearly twenty-five miles and had several narrow escapes from getting into the river. He was rescued unharmed by a fisherman.

Every day adds to the great amount of evidence as to the curative powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Letters are continually being received from all sections of the country telling of benefits derived from his great medicine. It is unequaled for general debility, and as a blood purifier, expelling every trace of scrofula or other impurity. Now is the time to take it. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all druggists.

The result announced was as follows: Captain Levi Blue's side, 5,857 rat tails and 1,977 mice tails; Captain William Gordon's side, 2,866 rat tails and 782 mice tails. Total, 8,473 rats and 2,849 mice slaughtered, or a grand total of 11,232.

"Oh! But I Salivated Him!"

Was the actual exclamation of an honest physician, spoken of one of his patients to whom he had given calomel for the cure of biliousness and a diseased liver. And he had salivated him for certain, from which he never recovered. All these distressing consequences are avoided by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," a purely vegetable remedy that will not salivate, but produce the most pleasing effect, invigorate the liver, cure headache, dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation and piles. Didn't our girl graduates look lovely? Yes, indeed; they all use Pozzoni's Complexion Powder.

The Celebrated Winans Family of Baltimore and Its Interesting History.

PURSE-PROUD AND PECULIAR.

Rich and Romantic—Their Palatial Mansion—Old Tom and Lydia Thomson—His Inventive Eccentricity.

Chicago Tribune: Forty years ago in Baltimore lived two brothers, Thomas and William Winans. They were both railroad engineers and both men of natural genius, although far from cultivated or scientific engineers. They had both made money, and they began to foresee the future of railway building in Russia. About that time the czar drew that celebrated pencil mark across the map from St. Petersburg to Moscow as a route for a projected railroad. The story is well known, but is short enough to repeat here. After all the engineers had given their views of the best practicable route between the two cities before the czar and the council of state, Nicholas took up a ruler, and, drawing a perfectly straight line by it across the map from St. Petersburg to Moscow, handed it to them as the final route for the railroad. The Russians had recourse to foreign engineers, and the Winans took up the work. The road was successfully laid, and a great fortune was secured to them, but it was not until 1861 that a locomotive was built which was a complete success. In those days Russian locomotives burnt wood altogether, and it was only after seventeen years of experiments that the right kind of a locomotive was built. But from then on their fortunes began to be colossal. Thomas had married the daughter of a Russian shopkeeper. She died leaving him two children—Ross Winans of Baltimore and Celeste, now married to Mr. Hutton, a young Englishman in the diplomatic service. William had married an English woman of the middle class and returned to England to enjoy his wealth. Since the time that he first crossed the ocean on his way to Russia in 1844 William Winans has never returned to this country. In both brothers a strain of eccentricity early developed itself, and in William it took the form of a nervous dread of crossing the ocean. Never did any American become so thoroughly

WEANED FROM HIS COUNTRY.

He often says that he would not cross the Atlantic for £1,000,000, nor is he even willing that his two sons, Walter and Louis, shall. Mr. Winan's manner of enjoying his money is at least unique. He has but one taste, but one aptitude, but one employment in the world, and that is in building models of steam vessels after original designs. This propensity in Thomas Winans caused him to be called the "cigar boat man," and a good many people thought he was a little touched on the subject. He had a conviction that he could build a boat in the shape of a cigar that would distance any and everything afloat, and spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in building them. He launched several, and they always turned bottom upward as soon as they touched water, which was exactly what all scientific men predicted. But old Thomas was bluff, rich, determined, and not possessed of scientific principles to trouble him, so he rode his hobby up to the day of his death, although he became very sensitive about it. He was devoted to seeing Lydia Thompson in the hey-day of her charms, but the wicked Lydia always introduced a couplet into her songs referring to the wonderful cigar boat, at which he would get up in great wrath and quit the theater.

William, seeing how his brother became sport for the scientists, has kept his experiments as much in the dark as possible, but he continues, as much from the force of habit as anything else, to work every day on his queer model, although his income, according to his own acknowledgment, is between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 yearly. This gigantic sum, which makes him, next to Rothschild and the duke of Westminster, the richest man in England, he spends freely, but neither he nor his family has any way of spending this vast amount. His house in Kensington palace garden is extremely handsome.

A NOBLE CARRIAGE DRIVE

leads up to the door of the engineer prince. The entrance hall is lofty, and the two vast drawing rooms are superb. A charming effect is produced by a vast sheet of plate glass separating the two rooms, beside which is an archway giving communication between the two. The carpet once laid there had a history. A magnificent one was designed and woven at Axminster expressly for the main drawing room. After it was laid Mr. Winans did not like it, so he had another one made. When the second one came the question was what to do with the first. Mr. Winans thought a moment or two.

"Just put it down over the first," he said, as if struck with a sudden solution.

So No. 2, which had cost hundreds of pounds, was put down with No. 1, which had also cost hundreds of pounds, for a lining; and Mr. Winans had the most expensive floor covering in London.

Mrs. Winans is an excellent and unpretending woman who cares but little for society. She prefers her home at Brighton to either the London house or the Scotch shooting box, as they call their Inverness-shire place, for which they pay $35,000 a year. At Brighton Mrs. Winans has established a school, where sixteen girls are educated and provided for. Mrs. Winans takes great interest in them, and after leaving the school she starts them in life, and does not lose sight of them.

Mr. Winans, too, likes Brighton best, and is always more or less bored in London. They do not entertain a great deal, but during the season give a few dinners and one or two crush entertainments. A favorite method of entertaining with them is to have morning concerts at which they have Patti and Nilsson, and Albani, and all the highest priced song birds to warble. Mr. Winans professes to have no taste for anybody's music except Patti's. At her first appearance in St. Petersburg he paid $1,000 for the first choice of boxes, at which a Frenchman remarked that Mr. Winans might have gone to Paris and back and heard Patti sing a dozen times for that sum.

The two sons of William Winans are both well-educated and sensible young men, but distinctively un-American, as the case would inevitably be. The elder, Walter, married against his father's wishes, who, although refusing to be present at the ceremony, has long since forgiven the young couple. Mr. Winans had social ambitions, and he wanted his children to marry into titled families. But the young men, who care more for pictures and American trotters than anything else, declined to oblige him. The deer forest which has so particularly exasperated the English press against him is certainly conducted on indefensible principles. It is next to Lord Lovat's, the most expensive and the costliest deer forest in Scotland. Besides the regular establishment sixty "gillies," or deer stalkers are required during the season. Mr. Winans is no sportsman, and the way the enormous deer batteaus are conducted has no parallel except by the organized bands of titled marauders who come from England to exterminate the large game of the northwest. Mr. Winans has occasionally been for a few hours in order to take a shot at the numerous deer that are driven by; but some years he does not even go near Inverness shire. He also follows the English custom so amazing to Americans of selling his game, and every week in the season immense hampers are shipped to market from his place. Although in the heart of the Scotch highlands everything that can add to the luxury of living—the daintiest fruits, the newest books and pictures, anything and everything that heart can desire and money buy—are brought from London every day. Mr. Winans does not await the railways' convenience; when he gets ready to go or come he orders a special train, like the queen.

He is very unpopular among his neighbors—nor, indeed, is popularity characteristic of the elder Winans. Apart from engineering and ship building it is very hard to interest him in anything. He professes to be more entertained by the circus, next to Patti's singing, than any other form of amusement. It is told of him that once in Russia an American manager brought a circus to St. Petersburg, and, hearing of Mr. Winans' fondness for the art of the sawdust ring, went to him and suggested that he should shell out such a very considerable sum for boxes that Mr. Winans asked indignantly if he was expected to pay for the whole performance.

"Well, I haven't the slightest objection," answered the man of brass.

Mr. Winans was so tickled at his ineffable impudence that he bought the whole house. The night of the performance he presented himself with a friend or two, and sat out the whole thing, to the delight and amusement of the circus people, whom he made to answer his encores and do just as if a thousand people were present instead of two or three.

The only sister of the Winans brothers married Mr. Whistler, a near relative of the artist Whistler. Her two daughters were brought up with her brother's children, Ross and Celeste Winans. After the death of Ross Winan's young wife, about ten years ago Neva Whistler, the younger daughter, married her cousin Ross. Neva was born at St. Petersburg, and named for the river Neva. They have lately built a magnificent house in Baltimore, on St. Paul street, which is one of the show houses of the town. They had but one child, a two or three years ago. The child was taken ill at their country place near Baltimore, and when the doctor pronounced it small-pox both the father and mother left it. They paid one of the best doctors $1,000 to take complete charge of the case. He went out, took a capable nurse, and devoted himself to it, but the poor child died a few days after. Money could not save it, and that was all the parents seem to have had to give it.

Besides his St. Paul street palace, Ross Winans has his father's old place on the outskirts of the city and his cottage at Newport—"Bleak House." The old establishment was for many years the subject of curious investigation on the part of people who lived in Baltimore. Mr. Thomas Winans was very inhospitable and the inside of his house was so rarely seen that marvelous tales were told about it. A high wall enclosed the grounds, and the iron gates were kept locked. It was here that the great organ was put up in Mr. Winans' latter days—one of the largest organs in the country, which Mr. Winans occasionally hired a professional musician to play on for his amusement. "Bleak House" at Newport is a vast, gloomy looking place right down on the beach, where the famous "Ocean Drive" leads past it. Here much of Miss Celeste Winans' girlhood was spent. The Winans were not society people, and Miss Winans was brought up in great seclusion. When the rest of the world of Newport was dancing and driving, the heiress of Thomas Winans was sitting on the end of the pier in an old blue flannel frock fishing. But when she fished it was with a rod pointed with silver.

I am sure if I had not heard of it a year ago, I would now be in my grave."—Mrs. F. H. E., Germantown, Pa.

THE PATENT

WIRE GAUZE OVEN DOOR

IS THE LATEST IMPROVEMENT ON THE

It produces Practical Results in Baking and Roasting never before attained in any Cooking Apparatus, and will

Revolutionize the Present Methods of Cooking

ITS THEORY

Is that all Food Baked or Roasted, should be cooked in fresh air freely admitted to the oven. This is done by discarding the close oven door heretofore used, and substituting for it a door containing a sheet of Wire Gauze nearly as large as the door itself.

Through this Gauze Door the air freely circulates, facilitating the process of cooking, and producing food that is unequalled in flavor and nutrition, and actually cooked with less consumption of fuel than in an oven with a closed door.

It makes an enormous saving in the weight of meat.

It also produces larger Loaves of Bread, requires less attention from the cook, and promotes the health of the family by the SUPERIOR QUALITY OF THE FOOD COOKED IN IT.

OPINION OF AN EXPERT.

Mrs. MARY B. WELCH, Teacher Domestic Economy, Iowa State University, says: "My deliberate judgment is that the oven of the Range, as compared with others, is not only more equally heated in every part—front as well as rear—but as a result of its superior ventilation the food placed therein is better cooked, while retaining a sweeter flavor, and a larger proportion of its best juices. I find, also, that the consumption of fuel in this Range is much less than any other for same work."
